FRYER, Alexander Stewart (1879-1956)

Alexander S. Fryer, the youngest son of John Firth Fryer and Isabella Cormack Fryer (born Stewart) was born in October 1879.

Qualifying as a chartered accountant in Bristol, his religious and social concerns led him to study at Woodbrooke. In 1913 he worked with the Bedford Institute Association and in the First World War among conscientious objectors - he became a prison chaplain.

On December 20 1917 he married Elizabeth Montford and his home became rich in hospitality and friendship. Their son, Norman John, was born in 1928.

He worked on several central committees of the Society, and for the Holiday Fellowship Association. A wonderful measure of God's grace was shown in his life.

He died on 3 May 1956 in Bristol.

FRYER, Alfred (1830-1892)

Alfred Fryer was born at Raistrick, near Huddersfield on 30 September 1830, the son of Simeon and Anne Fryer (1). He was subsequently a member of Cheshire Monthly Meeting, being for many years Treasurer and a member of the Committee on Oversight.

'The ready sympathy and help which was unobtrusively extended to those in need will be long remembered by many of the Friends in our small and isolated meetings, amongst whom he was extensively known and loved.'

Alfred Fryer died 13 December 1892, aged sixty-two years.

FRYER, Annie Matilda (1863?-1932) born Bigland

Annie M. Fryer, the daughter of John and Matilda Bigland of Bishop Aukland, was born about 1863.

In 1896 she married Joseph Fryer of Smelt House near Bishop Aukland; they had a son and a daughter. Her husband died in 1904.

Of a deeply sensitive nature, she entered freely into the lives of others, and took a keen interest in politics, social and religious affairs, and she filled many official positions in Temperance and Women's Institute movements, and in the Society of Friends. She was a magistrate and staunch Liberal.

She overcame bravely the loss of her husband, and of her son in 1921.

She died on 7 November 1932.

FRYER, Edith M (1889? - 1976)

Edith Fryer was born in about the year 1889.(1) Nothing is known (1977) of her early life but she appears first in 1925 as a member of the Society at Rochester Meeting, living at Sittingbourne.(2)

She was headmistress of the County Grammar School for Girls at Dartford, Kent from 1928 - 1949, retiring then to take up work for Friends. She served on the Kent County Education Committee and also on the Executive Committee of the Headmistresses Association. In 1950 she was appointed educational adviser to Friends Education Council, a post she occupied until 1955 and in which she gave very useful service including the encouragement of co-operation between the nine Friends schools.

In 1956 she was asst. clerk to the Large Committee of London Yearly Meeting and served on other central committees of the Society.(3)

Her last few years were spent at Horsmonden where she was a great support to the small meeting there.

She died on August 9, 1976 aged 87.

FRYER, Frederick (1824-1872)

Frederick Fryer, the youngest child of Joseph Fryer (1781-1846 qv) and his wife Ann (born Jowitt, 1786-1865, qv) of Toothill in Yorkshire, was born there on 21 March 1824(1). He was brought up in the quiet of a country home and his early life was a very happy one, the influence of which remained with him throughout his days. When he was about twenty one he accompanied a relative who was in delicate health on a long journey in southern Europe and proved himself a most kind and sympathising companion.

Soon after his return from this journey he set up in business as a tea dealer in Leeds and in 1850 he was married to Elizabeth Longdon of Manchester(2), but the marriage was apparently childless(3). He gradually took a very active part in the work of the Society, serving as an overseer and for several years as clerk of the large Monthly Meeting of Brighouse. He was greatly interested in First-day Schools and was for a long time a valued teacher and superintendent. He did not confine his services to the Society and helped in various philanthropic activities in Leeds, especially in the Ragged Schools.

As he grew older his inner life deepened and in 1867 he was recorded as a minister by Brighouse Monthly Meeting. About two years before he died he returned to his childhood home at Toothill and became a member of Brighouse Particular Meeting, where his ministry was frequent and welcomed.

His last illness was brief and Frederick Fryer of Toothill Grove, Rastrick, died on 20 March 1872, at the age of forty eight(4).

John Firth Fryer, born at Rastrick, Yorks in 1840, was the eldest of a family of six, the children of Charles (1808-1854, qv) and Sarah Fryer. The father, once a woollen manufacturer, became Superintendent of Friends School at Croydon in 1853, and after his death the following year, his wife continued to occupy the post. John Fryer was educated at Ackworth and Bootham and then went on to the Flounders Institute for training as a teacher. In 1858 he returned to Bootham as a teacher and spent the remainder of his working life there, rising from the position of junior master to that of Head: he was headmaster from 1875 until 1899. (1)

In 1871 he married Isabella Cormack Stewart: there were four children (2). His wife was a great help to him in all his work for the School. His whole heart was in his work, and generations of pupils testified to his kindness and unceasing concern for their welfare. His Sunday evening addresses were of great help to his scholars.

After his retirement in 1899 he moved to Roundhay, near Leeds, and though his health was not good, he lived there until his 74th year, when he died on 28 February 1914. (3)

FULLER, William

William Fuller is mentioned in a letter from Virginia in 1657 - 'Will ffuller abides Convinced' (Swarth. MSS.iii.7). Besse states that he was a sufferer in Maryland in 1658. He had previously taken a consid rable part in civil and military affairs (Maryland Archives, iii).

FULLOVE, Elizabeth (1638?-1688) born Edwards

Elizabeth Fullove was the wife of Lawrence Fullove (96.3) As Elizabeth Edwards, she was married at the Bull and Mouth in 1678. Besse states that in 1684 she and others were convicted for meeting together and fined four nobles each (Suff.i.472). She died of consumption at her home in Wood Street, 12.iii.1688 aged fifty. Fox's two recorded visits found her out of health.

Note by N. Penney in G. Fox, Short Journal, 1925, p.334

FULLOVE, Lawrence (1626?-1689)

Lawrence Fullove lived in the parish of St Alphage, London Wall. He was one of the Friends sentenced to banishment to Jamaica in 1664 and put on board the Black Eagle in August, 1665. A storm drove the ship to the coast of Norway, but the prisoners were not permitted to land. Eventually they reached Holland and were two months on shore, and then returned to England. But of the fifty-five put on board in the Thames twenty-seven only reached the Downs alive. William Crouch prints a letter from Fullove from Amsterdam 27.ii.1666, to his uncle, Amor Stoddard, giving some account of their adventures (Posthuma Christiana, 1712, pp.89ff). In the history of the Devonshire House Reference Library which appeared in volume xviii of the Jnl. FHS we are told of a search for lost records and that, at the Meeting for Sufferings, ix.1689, 'John Dew Acquaints the meeting that a deal Chest with Writtings and Books of ffriends (Supposed to be the Chest soe much enqmired after by ffriends) is now found at Lawrence ffulloves. This Meeting Orders that the said Chest and Writtings be sent to ffriends Chamber in Lombard Street'. It may be that today we benefit from the action of 1689 in centralizing records.

FURLEY, Benjamin (1636-1714)

Benjamin Furley was one of the wealthy people who allied themselves with Quakerism in its early days. He was born at Colchester and began business life there' (full account of Furly in Jnl. FHS xi.62-73) A reference to his connection with the Battle-Door will be found in vol.ii p.379. Prior to 1660 Furly settled at Amsterdam, afterwards removing to Rotterdam. He corresponded with several men of note - Algernon Sidney, the third Lord Shaftesbury, and John Locke. His extensive library was sold by auction in October, 1714. Some of the books once belonging to Furly, sold by Jacob Claus to Thomas Story, were lost as sea (ms in Friends House). Furly was a son of John and Ann Furly. His father died in 1673, aged about 83. Another and elder son was John Furly (236.3). Benjamin married twice; his descendants left Friends (The Essex Review, April, 1899 - 'The Furly Family of Essex'). He seems, for a time, to have had some sympathy with the Perrot Hat-schism (vol.ii pp.375,482; Collectitia, 1824, p.148).

GAGE, Arthur Spurgeon (1892-1950) 94

Arthur S. Gage was born 1 December 1892. He was the first warden of Friends Hall, Walthamstow, and later became, with his wife Enid, Warden of Swarthmore Hall, Plymouth. He developed this from a flourishing Social Centre to the present complete Educational Settlement. In addition to lecturing himself on Social Problems, Citizenship and other subjects, he brought to the Centre many wellknown speakers.

He organised allotment work amongst the unemployed; helped with the settlement of European refugees, worked with the prisoners in Princetown gaol, and interpreted Quakerism to congregations and Youth Groups in Plymouth. He was secretary of the local Council of Christian Churches and Joint President of the committee set up to advise on the rebuilding of the City's Places of Worship. For two years he served as a magistrate.

During the 1939-45 war the Centre became a Rest Centre, where night after night Arthur Gage and his wife welcomed and helped homeless and bewildered citizens.

He was an Elder and Clerk to the Quarterly Meeting Extension Committee.

During the academic year 1948-49 Arthur Gage accepted the offer of a Fellowship at Woodbrooke, but the disease of his vocal chords was more serious than he had expected, and after a long illness he died 27 June 1950.

' In Meetings for Worship his timely teaching ministry was full of spiritual power and depth and to it he brought the results of his wide reading and prayerful thought. He became one with his hearers because of the sensitive sympathy and clear-sighted understanding, and in all he did the deep spiritual element that came to him through conviction was kept supreme.'

GALES, Anna Maria (1772? - 1832) formerly Fuller, born Ransome

Anna Maria Gales, the daughter of Joshua and Rebecca Ransome of Wells, married Travel Fuller of Yarmouth first, and later Thomas Gales of North Runcorn.

In 1817 she became a minister; she died on 27 March 1832 aged 70.

Testimony of Lynn M.M. in MS Test. vol.6 p.34

GALES, Edwin Lesley (1848-1922)

Edwin Lesley Gales, the son of Joshua and Anna Gales, was born in Wells on 21 November 1848 (1).

After school at Sidcot from 1859 to 1863 he went to sea, leaving it in 1869 when he went to Canada. In 1871 he returned to Wells and married. They settled in Guelph, Ontario, but in 1885 came back to England permanently.

In Wells he founded the Wells Herald, a monthly paper in which he voiced his strong political and social principles. As assistant agent and then agent of the Liberal Party in the Frome division of Somerset, he established an organization which enabled the party to hold the constituency from 1896 to 1918.

In 1898 E.L.Gales established The Beacon, a monthly magazine of general and political information to which many brilliant young men contributed. It was published till 1914.

He won a seat on Somerset County Council in 1904 and threw himself into the work with enthusiasm. He was also editor of the Somerset and Wilts. Journal in which he advocated the cause of Peace, education and Liberalism. He took the lead in the Bath district for opposing British entry in the Great War. Later he supported local Conscientious Objectors.

A Friend of deep conviction, he always carried his religion into politics. His Christianity was the basis and driving force of his life. He served on the Sidcot School Committee and was an elder for a long time.

He died at Bath on 11 March 1922, aged 73.

GANDHI, Mohandas Karamch and (1869-1948) nm

Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi was born on 2 October 1869.

He had many links with Friends: in 1930 he chose Reginald Reynolds as his messenger to the Viceroy; Carl Heath, chairman of the India Conciliation Group, was an old friend, and Agatha Harrison, secretary of the Group, was looked upon as his personal representative in England. Horace Alexander was with Gandhi in India at an important period.

During the 1931 Round Table Conference in London, Gandhi spent much time with Friends. The Public Meeting given by the Gandhi Reception Committee on the day of his arrival was in Friends House, and during the conference proceedings silent 'prayer meetings' were held in the Small Meeting House at Friends House.

Gandhi's first Sunday in England was spent at the home of Elizabeth Fox Howard in Epping Forest, and he discussed there with members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. This meeting is described by Elizabeth Fox Howard in her book, Midstream.

A number of Friends met Gandhi when he was staying as Muriel Lester's guest at Kingsley Hall, Bow; in Lancashire, where he was taken to be shown the effect of the Congress boycott of Lancashire cotton goods on the workers, he stayed with Harriet and Charles Haworth. He took vocal part in a Meeting for Worship held at their home. He also payed a short but memorable visit to Woodbrooke.

He died on 30 January 1948.

GANE, Crofton Endres (1878 - 1967)

Crofton Gane was born on September 6, 1878, in Bristol, the son of P. Endres Gane. ( )

He became interested in the Adult School Movement, being secretary of the Bristol Union and was well known in the national movement until the outbreak of the first world war. He joined the Friends Ambulance Unit and served first in a cross channel ambulance ship and later with a unit in a motor convoy in France where he received the Croix de Guerre, with palms, for his work. He met his wife Grace during this work also.(1) After the war he helped to found the Folk House in Bristol which has become a flourishing centre of the arts and of adult education.

He inherited a fine, if somewhat conservative furnishing business and turned it into a centre of forward-looking and creative design and craftsmanship. His shop and factory were destroyed by air raids in 1940, but his interest and purpose continued. Later when he brought the business to an end he established the Gane Trust to promote good design by craft organisations and the encouragement of individual craftsmen. Funds are also made available for educational and social service projects. He was concerned that men should enjoy their work and find fulfilment in it, beauty of form and excellence of craftsmanship was his delight and to everything that was making a 'contribution' he was willing to give of his energy, his thought and his money! He had a continuous joy in living and his questing eager hopeful spirit sustained him. He served on a number of Friends central committees.(2)

He died at Bristol on October 15, 1967 at the age of 89.(3)

Anne Gardener was a native of Ross, Herefordshire, and was brought up in the Established Church but as a young woman turned to the Society of Friends.

She earned her living first as a dressmaker and later took several posts as a governess, moving in the course of time to the neighbourhood of London, where she taught in a Friend family. For some time she acted as manager of an hotel of which a near relative was proprietor. In middle life she entered the home of Lydia Ann Baclay and lived for some years in Scotland, being recorded a minister by the Two Months' Meeting of Aberdeen. After occupying for a short time the post of governess in Croydon School, she removed to the North of Ireland and settled at Bessbrook. Whilst a member of Lurgan Monthly Meeting she was several times liberated for service in Scotland, but her public engagements were most numerous in Antrim and the adjoining counties.

"She had a special gift and qualification for service amongst those who were not in profession with us, both in public meetings for worship and in small social gatherings, being enabled to set forth with clearness, and to much acceptance with the public, those spiritual views of the Gospel of Christ which have always been held by Friends."

GARDNER, Florence (1864-1917)

Florence Gardner was born on 25 December 1864, the second daughter of John Myers and Hane Gardner of Leeds (1). After a short term at Ackworth she was educated under Mary Ann Gundry who died as a missionary in Japan. Florence Gardner took up teaching, and was for several years governess in two private families. In 1897 she started a private school in partnership with another lady. She was active in the Women's Sunday Afternoon Class at Woodhouse Carr, and served the Society both as an Overseer and Elder, and gave a very helpful ministry. She was also with her father responsible for the pastoral care of a mission centre in a depressing part of Leeds. Whilst running her own school she also mothered two orphaned nephews, helped by her delicate sister.

Later in life she obtained the degree of LL.A. of Edinburgh University.

In 1911 she moved to Buckhurst Hill from Leeds, and there she and her sister took over a large boarding and day school for girls. In spite of all the work this entailed she gave great service to her Monthly Meeting, acting as Clerk of the Elders in Ratcliff and Barking Monthly Meeting.

She died after an operation on 27 December 1917, aged 53

GARDNER, JOHN Myers (1834-1923)

John Myers Gardner, the son of and Myers , was born on 10 February 1834.

He was educated at Ackworth, and in 1859 married Jane Wilson of Scarborough. They had 8 children. Their union was one of great joy and happiness, and parents and children shared a simple home life.

For 50 years chairman of the Leeds Benevolent and Strangers'Friend Society, John Gardner began work with his son and daughter, Lesley and Florence, at the Friends Adult School in 1885. For some time he was its President. Another of his great interests was Rawdon School, whose committee he served on for many years.

When two of his daughters took a school at Buckhurst Hill, he moved there with them, taking a keen and active share in the school life.

Deeply interested in all the activities of the Society of Friends, he enjoyed attendance at Meetings, and was an Elder. His peaceful serenity, courtesy, kindness and quick sympathy endeared him to those who met him during his final years.

He died on 18 July 1923, aged 89 years.

GARDNER, Lucy (1863-1944)

Lucy Gardner, daughter of John Myers (1834-1923) qv, and Jane Gardner of Leeds, was born there on 25 April 1863 (1).

She was educated at Ackworth and then took her teacher's training at the Mount before qualifying as a nurse. This led to work in the Charity Organization Society and then to her organization of C.O.P.E.C.

Through her secretaryship first of the annual conference of Social Service Unions, and then of the conference on Christian Politics, she made possible a plan for the Stockholm Conference on 'Life and Work' in 1925; this was the beginning of co-operation between the non-Catholic churches of the world, and to the world-wide movement represented here by the British Council of Churches.

She was instrumental in inspiring the setting-up of 10 commissions, and study groups throughout the country. 12 volumes of the report were published. She carried through the programme with very little financial support.

She possessed the contrasted qualities of ruthless efficiency and personal sensitiveness; thus, while able to make excessive demands on her colleagues, she never lost touch with them as individuals. Her training, experience of business problems, and wide interests, enabled her to see the personal element in social issues. She took a deep interest in the development of social studies at Woodbrooke. She became overstrained and lonely as a result of her work and the death of her friends. Never faltering in her Quaker witness, she was not narrow-minded respecting other sects.

She died on 27 November 1944.

GARGILL, Anne

No further account has been found of the visit of Anne Gargill to Portugal. Shortly after this time Anne appears to have gone off into Ranterism. The author of The Snake in the Grass asserts that when Fox first came to London Anne Gargill 'threw her self upon her knees, betwixt his Feet, and cryed out to him, "Thou art the Son of the Living God"' (Leslie, Snake, 1697, p.114).

Dr Daniel Phillips (Vindiciae Veritatis, 1703, p.38) places this saying 'amongst the rest of the Snake's Forgeries' but he adds, 'We acknowledge that about the Year 1655, there were a Set of Women tinctured with the Spirit of Ranterism, who would give Honours to the Creature, more proper for their Creator: these our Friends unanimously rejected' (p.40). Anne Gargill was publicly disowned, but in 1657, she was in Holland, where 'shee did labour utterly toe destroy and toe scatter' (Swarth. MSS. iv.28).

Seasonable Advice concerning Quakerism, by J. Stillingfleet, Rector of Beckingham in Lincolnshire, 1702, p.17; Swarth. MSS. i.6- A.G. to G.F. 1656.

General Montagu writes to Secretary Thurloe, from 'Aboard the Nasebye, in the river of Lisbone, 'Sept. 16, 1656, "There is an English shipp come in here from Newfoundland. The master hath beene on board of us. There is not, they say, one person in the shipp, officer or mariner, but are all Quakers. I feare they will meet with affronts from these people, and I heare they have been in danger alreadye for not putting off their hatts to the Portugueses, when they have saluted them in the streets' (Thurloe, State Papers, 1742, v. 422).

GARLAND, Charles E (1895-1964)

Charles E Garland, son of , was born at Stoke St. Gregory near Taunton in 1895.

His parents were Baptist farmers, and he studied engineering at Bristol University before serving as an officer in the First World War and gaining a Military Cross.

In 1925 he married Dorothy , and after an unsuccesful attempt at Poultry farming he became organizing secretary of the Shern Hall Institute in Walthamstow, a flourishing centre of Methodism. The couple joined the Methodist Church and developed the Institute on Settlement lines, meanwhile gaining deep experience of poverty in East London. They had two children, David and Jane.

In 1932 Charles Garland became Probation Officer for Birmingham, and until his retirement in 1960 supervised the immense work with wisdom, humour and courage. In 1941 he became Chairman of the National Association of Probation Officers. In 1951 he was made an M.B.E. and in 1961 a Vice-President of the Association.

He was brought into contact with Friends just before the Second World War, and on joining was soon made an ~~Elder~~ overseer and later an Elder. In January 1964 he became Assistant Clerk of Meeting for Sufferings.

He died on 5 March 1964.

GARLAND, Charles Edgar (1895-1964)

Charles Edgar Garland was born at Stoke St Gregory, Taunton, on 3 June 1895, the son of a Baptist farmer. He grew up in close contact with the problems of village life. The 1914-18 war terminated his engineering studies at Bristol University. He served with distinction as an army officer and was awarded the M.C. After being demobilised he trained as an architect.

In 1923 he married Dorothy . They had two children (1). She died in 1952. Charles and Dorothy Garland joined the Methodist Church. In 1927 he became organizing secretary of the Shern Hill Institute in Walthamstow. Five years later he became Principal Probation Officer for Birmingham, an appointment in which with the passing years his wisdom, quiet courtesy, firm courage and sense of humour made him a national figure among his fellow probation officers. In 1941 he became Chairman of the National Association of Probation Officer, and in 1951 he was made a M.B.E.

It was his association with Barrow and Geraldine Cadbury in work with young offenders that brought Charles Garland in touch with Friends. He and his wife joined the Society of Friends just before the 1939-45 war.

In 1960 he retired to Exeter, where he was again appointed an Elder. His services to his Meeting were innumerable. He lived by a faith that "life is of a value beyond itself", and the value of his public and private life is beyond reckoning. He was a well-loved Friend. He died on 5 March 1964, aged 69.

Charles Garnett, the youngest son of Edward Garnett (1797?-1886 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Gleave, 1799-1851 qv) of Latchford in Cheshire, was born there on 30 May 1842(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1854 to 1856.

After leaving school he was apprenticed to the grocery business of Joseph Harlock of Warrington. The close of his apprenticeship coincided with the great gold rush to the west coast of New Zealand, in which he joined, embarking in a wooden sailing ship going via the Cape. His experiences included a mutiny of the crew, who placed the captain in irons. Charles Garnett was always interested in natural history and made a fine collection of New Zealand ferns during his ten years stay in that country. Later, he devoted himself to the collecting of seeds and fruits of tropical plants.

He was married in 1876 to Elizabeth Matthews (1843?-1921 qv) of Chorlton-on-Medlock(2) and there were four children(3). The family settled in Manchester, where he became a restaurant proprietor(4).

Edward Garnett, the son of Edward Garnett (1797?-1886 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Gleave, 1799-1851 qv) of Warrington in Lancashire, was born there on 16 March 1834(1). He was educated at Penketh School from 1845 to 1846(2) and at Ackworth School from 1846 to 1849. He served a long apprenticeship as a teacher under Thomas Pumphrey (1802-1862 qv), afterwards going through a three years' course of studies at the Flounders Institute under Isaac Brown (1803-1895 qv).

In 1858 he obtained a post as first-class teacher at Newtown School, Waterford in Ireland, where his whole teaching life was spent until he retired in 1896; in 1871 he succeeded Robert Green as superintendent of the school. Under his leadership the school flourished and attracted pupils from all over Ireland. He was deeply interested in natural science and passed some of his enthusiasm on to his staff and pupils. In his later years he took up the study of geology with great zest and in his old age taught himself Italian and some Spanish and Dutch. He was active in founding and supporting the Waterford Literary and Scientific Association.

He was married in 1866 to Anne Black (1830?-1912 qv) of Grange, county Tyrone(3) and there were at least six children(4). His wife as matron of the school contributed greatly to the efficiency of the household and the marriage was singularly happy.

After his retirement he settled in Manchester for the remainder of his life, where for some years he served on the committee of Ackworth School and later on that of Dalton Hall.

Edward Garnett's ministry was marked by reticence and simplicity. Although he was profoundly convinced of the truth of the principles held by the Society of Friends, he had broad sympathies and supported many good causes. He had a very modest estimate of himself and his recognition of the good in everyone made him tender and wise in dealing with offenders.

Edward Garnett of Withington, Manchester, died very peacefully on 17 March 1913(5), about a year after the death of his beloved wife.

GARNETT, Edward (1867-1934)

Edward Garnett, son of Edward ( ) and Garnett of , was born in Waterford in 1867.

Educated at Newtown (where his father was Headmaster for many years) and at the Flounders Institute, Ackworth, he succeeded his father as Headmaster of Newtown.

In 1902 he was appointed an Inspector of Schools in the Transvaal, and in 1905 became Principal of the new Normal College for teacher training, a post that he held for 16 years. He subsequently became school inspector for East Griqualand and in 1924 was invited to act as Professor of Education at Rhodes University College, Grahamstown.

His task, particularly at the Pretoria Normal College, was not easy, for there was acute racial bitterness, but he was considered as one of the finest of veteran educationalists, having a remarkable personality which reflected all the goodness and kindness of his Quaker code.

The ill-success of the attempt to found a Quaker school at Inchanga was a great grief to him.

He died on 12 April 1934, aged 67, at Rondebosch, Cape Town, South Africa, and was buried at sea.

GARNETT, Eliza Emma (1836-1909) born Thompson

Eliza E. Thompson was born in Manchester in 1836 and was educated at Penketh, Selby and Polam. Thrown on her own resources in 1865 within a few years of her marriage, she trained as a nurse and in 1878 became matron to the Sick House at Winchester College, remaining there for 13 years until 1891, when failing health compelled her to resign. After a period of rest at Southport, during which time she was received into membership of the Society of Friends by the Hardshaw West Monthly Meeting, she took another post as matron of the Protestant Servants' Home at Dublin, where she stayed for four years. Increasing deafness obliged her to give up this position, and she retired firstly to an almshouse at Allonby (Cumberland) and subsequently to another at Mansfield. Despite domestic trouble, deafness, and, during the last three years of her life, almost total blindness, she maintained a 'bright and active spirit' and she was described as possessing 'a rich fund of humour and sparkling wit'. Eliza Garnett died on 5 October 1909 at the age of 74.

On their return to England, Gwendoline lived with her widowed father at Neath until her marriage in 1900 to William Garnett (1874-1964 qv), an ironmonger of Great Yarmouth; there were three children born in England(2). At Great Yarmouth she became an active member of the Friends Meeting and the Protestant Women's Association.

About 1911 the family went out to South Africa, where they settled on a remote farm, far from towns and schools and with very primitive transport facilities. There Gwendoline Garnett started a small school in which local children were taken as boarders and as her own children grew older they were sent to schools and colleges in Pretoria.

Through many long, isolated years she kept her Christian faith clear and shining and was able to impart it to her children. She was always eager and willing to give hospitality to Friends from England and America.

From 1937 to 1949 the Garnetts lived near Johannesburg and then for health reasons they moved south to the coast of Natal. There, in failing health but with a brain active to the last, she lived for eight years and died on 26 June 1958, at the age of eighty six(3).

Henry Garnett, the son of Edward Garnett (1834-1913 qv) and his wife Anne (born Black, 1830?-1912 qv) of Waterford in Ireland, was born about the year 1868(1).

He was married in 1895 to Alice Hitchings (1872-1943 qv) of Evesham in Worcestershire(2) and there were four children(3). Shortly after his marriage he was an analytical chemist in London(4) and some time before 1901 he moved to Witney in Oxfordshire, where he was clerk to Witney Meeting from 1901 to 1903(5).

The remainder of his life was apparently spent in Manchester, where he became president of the Friends' Institute and of the Manchester Microscopical Society. He was a member of Manchester Meeting and served on numerous important committees. As a Friend he was valued for his thoughtful addresses and wise contributions relating to the business of the Society.

Although he was shy and retiring, his friendship, when gained, uncovered surprising and charming social qualities.

Henry Garnett of Heaton Moor, Manchester, died on 3 November 1931, at the age of sixty three(6).

GARNETT, Joseph (1840-1922)

Joseph Garnett, the son of Edward Garnett (1797?-1866 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Gleave, 1799-1851 qv) of Latchford in Cheshire, was born there on 30 May 1840(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1852 to 1854.

After leaving school he succeeded eventually to his father's business in Warrington, which he extended considerably to include agricultural implements and wagon building. He was an expert craftsman and nothing second rate ever left his hands.

In his middle age his health became poor and he suffered from bronchitis and rheumatism. He retired from business before he was fifty and went as a semi-invalid to live in north Wales. The quiet country life suited him very well and he became a great walker, interesting himself in the agricultural affairs of the countryside andoften lending a helping hand to the country folk among whom he lived.

He had an intensely conservative disposition and was suspicious of many modern innovations, both in the Society of Friends and elsewhere, but his life was full of secret acts of kindness.

He never married and his unexpectedly long life closed after a long illness, patiently borne, on 18 October 1922, in his eighty third year(2).

Firm advocate of teaching deaf to speak and to understand speech in a time when sign language was widely-accepted method. Early concern for deaf children widened into concern about child welfare. Althoug/ in some respects M.G. remained a conservative (never supported woman's suffrage), she worked tirelessly for other reforms: juvenile court legislation; child labor reform; uniform marriage and divorce codes.

Among numerous articles, pamphlets, and speeches are the following: 1893?, "The Next Step in the Education of the Deaf;" 1896, "Homes for Teaching Deaf Children to Speak;" 1906, "Possibilities of Deaf Children" and "Training in Speech of Young Deaf Children;" 1911, "Birthright of the Normal Deaf Child."

In later years, M.G. described herself as a "liberal Quaker." d. 18 July 1925, Phila., Pa.; funeral held 21 July 1925 at St. Asalph's Church, Bala, Pa.

Though devoting himself to business until 1877 when he retired, he was always deeply committed to the betterment of humanity and the advancement of Friends' interests. From 1877 until his death this became his avocation. No theologian and not gifted in the Ministry he devoted himself to practical affairs. Thus he concentrated on prison reform and better methods of public charity. In the last capacity he presided over a National Conference of Charities and Correction held in Washington. He was an active friend of the Indian, serving on various Commissions under presidential appointment and as a member of the U.S. Board of Indian Commissioners. He was active in the Friends Freedmens Association from its formation in 1863.

Chairman (1880) of the Committee of 100 (now Seventy) Phila he was the accepted leader of the political reform movement in 1881.

His interest in education saw him a manager of Haverford College (1862-1905), Secretary to the Haverford Corp. (1864-75), President of the Alumni Ass'n (1876-7). One of the original Trustees of BrynMawr College he was President of its Board 1895 to his death.

She was educated at Sidcot school where she was senior swimming champion, and at The Mount before entering the London School of Medicine for Women from which she graduated in 1921. In 1922 she married Lawrence Paul Garrod (1895 (2) - 1978) also an old Sidcot scholar (3) who later became an international authority on bacteriology and antibiotics. There were four children of the marriage.(4) Marjorie Garrod was on the staff of the Tavistock Clinic from 1925 to 1950 during which time they lived at Harpenden, moving to Radlett on Paul Garrod's retirement. He became a convert to Roman Catholicism but she remained a Friend and faithful member of Harpenden meeting and later when they moved to Wokingham to be near their son David Garrod, of Wokingham meeting also. In 1959/60 she and Paul were elected joint presidents of the Sidcot Old Scholars Association.

Marjorie Garrod was a governor of The Retreat for thirty three years from 1936 - 1969 when she retired and for twenty two years was a member of the committee of management. She also served on the committees of two other mental hospitals. She was a tall impressive woman with great good sense and a sense of fun. She was forthright in speech, a generous hostess and with her husband lived life to the full. They were keen mountaineers, cat lovers and she had a particular interest in flowers and gardens and was a painter in water colours.

She died on November 22, 1980, aged 86.

George Gascoigne was born in about the year 1896.(1)

Little so far has been traced (1977) of his early life, except that as a young man he joined the 'No Conscription Fellowship' and in the first world war served for two years in prison as a C.O. In the second world war he and his wife kept open house for C.Os. and for prisoners of war.

The obituary in The Friend seems to suggest that he was a Carlisle man but his first appearance there (so far traced) is in 1957 as a member of the Society.(2) It is after that time that he served on Friends central committees(3). He served his local meeting as elder and overseer, and as clerk; was a member of the Northern Friends Peace Board.

He was an artist and gave much time also to the Carlisle & Border Artists Society of which he was chairman for many years.

GAYNER, John (1824-1911)

John Gayner, the son of John (1788-1863 qv) and Martha Sturge (born Builder, 1791-1833 qv) Gayner of Filton near Bristol, was born there on 25 June 1824(1). His mother died when he was about ten years old. After leaving school he lived with his father at Filton, the home of his family for five generations, until his marriage in 1859 to Susanna Sturge (1827-1879 qv) of Woodhouse in Gloucestershire(2); there were four children(3).

From 1863 to 1873 he farmed at Patchway near Bristol, but when he was about fifty he decided to retire from business in order to have more time to devote to the affairs of the Society. In 1878 he moved to Bristol, where he became much attached to Redland Meeting and in the following year he had to endure the sorrow of losing his wife.

He had been recorded a minister in 1858, but his vocal ministry, at least in his later years, was not frequent. In prayer he often strikingly expressed the needs of the congregation; in speech he was deliberate, but displayed much thoughtfulness and an excellent judgment. He was especially remarkable for his gift of entering into sympathy with younger Friends; the disparity of years made little difference to the comradeship between them and nothing could have been more helpful to the young than his confidence in them.

The well-being of the small country meetings lay very near to his heart and he frequently visited those in Gloucestershire near his former home. After his removal to Bristol he was liberated for service in Essex and in Derby, Lincoln and Notts Quarterly Meetings. Later he visited South Wales and the south of Ireland and was several times a member of a Yearly Meeting Committee. He had a truly catholic spirit and was deeply interested in various philanthropic movements. For many years he was an active member of the Bristol Peace Association and gave generous aid to the Anti-Opium and other causes.

His long connection with Sidcot School was based on an earnest desire for its welfare and a deep interest in the objects for which it was founded. For twenty years, from 1879 to 1899 he filled the office of treasurer. He was anxious to make it easy for Friends whose income was not large to send their children to Sidcot and was brought into sympathetic touch with many parents. He saw the School through times of difficulty as well as those of success, his interest was far more than financial and it is not easy to say how much the school owed to him. His influence was by no means confined to the committee room. He felt a real responsibility towards all on the staff, the scholars, the household servants and the men employed on the estate, and also towards the tenants of outlying property. His visits tothe school were always appreciated; many felt that they had in him a wise and trustworthy friend and all felt that his judgment would be just and considerate.

He retained in a striking degree the freshness and simplicity of the country and his mind was well supplied by his great love of reading. His calls of sympathy on invalids and those in bereavement or distress were gratefully remembered; faithful to his own convictions, he was very tolerant towards those who differed from him. It could be truly said of him that by the grace of God he was indeed steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch he knew that his work was not in vain in the Lord.

John Gayner of Chalfont, Napier Road, Redland, Bristol died on 14 March 1911, at the age of eighty six(4).

GAYNER, Susanna (1827-1879) born Sturge

Susanna Sturge, the daughter of Young Sturge (1781-1844 qv) and his wife Sarah, born Jalland, of Bristol, was born there on 9 June 1827(1). She possessed great energy of character and a vivid interest in all around her and her childhood and youth were very happy. Her father's death when she was seventeen cast a shadow over her mind and filled her with religious doubt, so that at one time she was convinced that she ought not to remain a Friend. But her letter of resignation was recalled and thereafter she became more settled in her views. She adopted the principles and practices of the Society to an extent unusual in one so young and maintained them through all the changes going on around her and in the Society itself.

The family settled for some years at Olveston, a village about nine miles from Bristol. She was very active and useful in her family circle and her energy and earnestness found scope in caring for the poor around her; visiting the sick and sorrowful was one of her most absorbing occupations. She established two tract districts and opened a First-day school for the village boys. For several years much of her time was spent in caring for her mother, whose health was declining. After the latter's death in 1858 she was married in 1859 to John Gayner (1824-1911 qv) and there were four children(2).

She was conscientious in her duties as a wife, mother and mistress of a family and exerted a good influence on all around her. She took a lively interest in mission work both at home and abroad and in the course of time felt called to the ministry; she was recorded a minister in 1876. But in the same year she developed inflammation of the lungs, from which she never fully recovered. In the following two years she was able to enjoy family life and to attend meetings for worship, where her occasional ministry was chiefly directed towards young people. Towards the end of 1878 the family moved to Clifton, hoping that the pure air of the Downs might benefit her, but little of her life remained.

Susanna Gayner of Apsley Road, Clifton, Bristol died on 25 February 1879, at the age of fifty one(3).
