HINDE, George Jennings (1839-1918)

George Jennings Hinde, F.R.S., was the third son of Ephraim Hinde, a manufacturer of Norwich. He was educated at Norwich Grammar School. His mother died when he was 13, and at 16 his father sent him to learn farming in Suffolk. He was a studious boy and his leisure time was spent in the study of Latin, French, Algebra, Physics and Chemistry. Through the influence of Hugh Miller's books he became interested in geology.

At the age of 18 he began to farm his own land at Bawburgh, just outside Norwich, but after a few years gave it up and went to Buenos Aires to start sheep farming. He was so successful that in a comparatively short time he was able to return home and devote the rest of his life to the study of geology, winning great distinction in this field of knowledge. He spent seven years in research in North America, travelling from Nova Scotia to Nebraska, and from Lake Superior to the Gulf of Mexico. He studied for a time under Professor H. Alleyne Nicholson, F.R.S., at Toronto University, under whom he published his first geological paper in 1875: "On the Fossils of the Clinton, Niagara and Guelph Formations of Ontario". Later he made the interesting discovery of "Conodonts" and Annelid jaws in the Cambro-Silurian of Canada and the United States.

In 1874 he was elected a Fellow of the Geological Society of London, and during the next four years he travelled in Europe, working on the study of chalk sponges. During 1879-80 he studied under Professor Karl von Zittel in the University of Munich where he received the degree of "Doctor of Philosophy", his inaugural dissertation being upon "Sponge Spicules".

In 1881 he married Edith Octavia, daughter of James Clark (1811-1906, qv) of Street, Somerset (1). There were 5 children (2).

In February 1882 he was awarded the Wollaston Fund "for his services in Fossil Invertebrates of North America, and the Glacial Phenomena of Canada". He was also elected a member of the Council of the Geological Society, on which he served for nearly twenty years, being made a Vice-President in 1893. Between 1881 and 1883 he compiled a catalogue of the fossil sponges in the geological department of the Natural History Museum. In 1885 he became Assistant Editor of the "Geological Magazine", an office which he held for 32 years. He joined the Palaeontographical Society in 1886, and in 1916 became its Vice-President.

During the International Geological Congress in London in 1887 he did important work in arranging collections and in acting as an interpreter. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1896 and in the following year received the Lyell Medal of the Geological Society; and in 1910 the Royal Geological Society of Cornwall conferred on him the William Bolitho Gold Medal.

He was naturally of a quiet and retiring disposition, and formed few intimate friendships, but he was very loyal to those who really came to know him. His latter years were spent quietly at Croydon with his books, microscope and specimens. He died on 18 March 1918 aged 79, "a conscientious and patient searcher after truth". (3)

HINDE, Robert (1882-1954)

Robert Hinde, the son of William Shepherd and Sarah Walker Hinde of Moorside, nr Maryport was born there on 28 March 1882 (1). He was a birthright Friend whose life was one of faithful service to the Society. He was a member of Broughton Meeting and its Clerk for over twenty years, and then Clerk of Pardshaw MM till 1946, when he became Clerk of Cumberland QM. He served as Elder, Trustee and Registering Officer of his Monthly Meeting for many years. From 1947, he served on Meeting for Sufferings, the Home Service Committee and the Friends Education Council. His family had been closely connected with Wigton School since its foundation and Robert Hinde was an old scholar and a valued member of the School Committee on which he had served continuously since 1928.

He was Secretary to the Quaker firm of Jonathan Harris & Sons of Cockermouth till 1935, and in his work as an Insurance Inspector after that date, he brought integrity and humanity to many families in the Cumberland countryside. In his own village he taught in the Methodist Sunday School from the age of 16, and was secretary of the Rechabite Tent.

Robert Hinde married Susannah Graham in 1908 (2): there were six children (3).

He died on 4 May 1954.

HINGSTON, Henry (1668/9-1724?)

Henry Hingston, the eldest son of William Hingston (-) and his wife Sarah (born Tripe,) of Kingsbridge in Devonshire, was born there on 19.xii.1668 [i.e. February 1668/9] (1). He received a very good education and became proficient in Latin, Greek and Hebrew.

He was a strict Quaker and regarded all forms of amusement as powerful incentives to evil. He felt so deeply about dancing that on one occasion he went to a public ball to protest against it and to remind those taking part that they were under a baptismal vow to forsake pomp and vanity. He also disapproved of the baptism of children and in 1701 wrote a letter of protest to a family about to take part in such a ceremony.

Soon after the end of the war with France in 1697 he travelled to Morlaix, where in 1699 he bought a quantity of goods for his business. The duty charged on them did not represent their true value and although the mistake was not his, the affair troubled him deeply, so that two years later he wrote to the Commission of Customs in London expressing his willingness to pay the full amount, which he did.

He was chiefly known as the author of a book printed in Exeter in 1703 and dedicated to Queen Anne. It was of a religious and moral tendency, entitled A Dreadful Alarm upon the Clouds of Heaven, mixed with Love; it was not well received and was discouraged by the Meeting for Sufferings in 1705.

Henry Hingston of Kingsbridge died, apparently unmarried(2), about the year 1724, at the age of fifty six(3).

1863 taken with 3 other Friends to High Point, N.C. for service in the Confederate Army during the Civil War. All refused to serve or perform any duties on grounds of conscience. After four months they were given a fortnight's leave, their papers being endorsed "These men are of no manner of use in the army". When they returned voluntarily, as they had promised they would, no military duty was required of them, not even to answer at roll call.

July 1863 they were captured by Union cavalry after the Battle of Gettysburg and brought to Philadelphia, Pa and held at Fort Delaware.

After Friends intervened on their behalf with Secretary of War Stanton, they were released.

HIPSLY, Caroline (1819-1909) born Dent

Caroline Dent, the daughter of William Dent (1778-1861 qv) and his wife Sarah Wilkins (born Yerbury,) of Melksham in Wiltshire, was born there on 19 March 1819(1). When still very young, she moved with her family to Mars, near Doncaster. Together with her sister Mary Ann (1817-1899 qv, who later married Samuel Priestman, 1800-1872 qv) she attended the York Quarterly Meeting Girls' School. After leaving school, she began to take an active part in local affairs, including helping at the village school and canvassing on behalf of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

She became in 1849 the second wife of Henry Hipsley (1810-1889 qv), a merchant of Hull with two small sons, but her own marriage was childless(2). After living for a short while in London from 1850 to 1851, they settled at York, where she was frequently visited at half-terms by nephews and nieces from Bootham and The Mount Schools.

On returning to London with her husband in 1871, she became an overseer of Holloway Meeting, but following her husband's death in 1889 she moved in 1897 to Northfield near Birmingham, in order to be near her grandchildren(3). There, although largely in retirement, she continued to take what share she could in philanthropic work. But she gradually became weaker and Caroline Hipsley of Steel Road, Northfield, died on 20 March 1909, at the age of ninety(4).

HIPSLY, Elizabeth (1736?-1811) born Selfe

Elizabeth Selfe, the daughter of John Selfe (1705-1757 qv) and his wife Elizabeth (born Elgar, fl 1687-1739/40 qv), was born about the year 1736(1).

She was married in 1762 to John Hipsley (1741-1816 qv) and there were eight children, all but two of whom died in infancy(2). Her husband was for some years superintendent of Ackworth School; after leaving the school he moved to Wellington and later to Hull, where he became a draper(3).

Elizabeth Hipsley of Kingston upon Hull died on 23 September 1811, at the age of seventy five(4).

HIPSEY, Elizabeth Ann (1836-1926) born Dell

Elizabeth Ann Dell, the daughter of William Rawbonn Dell (1804-1874 qv) and his wife Martha (born Smith,) of Colchester in Essex, was born there on 14 December 1836(1). She was educated at Ackworth School from 1847 to 1851.

Soon after leaving Ackworth, she became governess to a Friends' family in the north of England and later kept house for her brother Henry in London.

She was married in 1869 to John Henry Hipsley (1843-1911 qv), an artist and designer of London and there were three children(2). After an early married life spent in London, they moved to Hemel Hempstead for a while, but the last twenty years of her life were spent at Northfield, near Birmingham.

She had a retiring disposition and was never physically robust, so that her interests centred principally round her home, but she found opportunities for helping with temperance and Adult School work. Failing eyesight in her later years prevented her from either reading or sewing, but her cheerful disposition enabled her to triumph over this hardship.

Elizabeth Ann Hipsley of Glenalmond, Woodland Road, Northfield, died on 21 October 1926, at the age of eighty nine(3).

HIPSLY, Henry (1810-1889)

Henry Hipsley, the son of John Hipsley (1775-1886 qv) and his wife Mabel (born Tuke, 1770-1874 qv) of Kingston-upon-Hull in Yorkshire, was born there on 27 August 1810(1). He was educated at Kendal School in Westmorland. He was also given a careful religious education by his parents and from his childhood had a great reverence for the Bible. His truthfulness and independence of mind were always striking features of his character and in later life gave him the courage of his convictions, even when they were not always shared by others.

About 1827 he entered the employment of Tuke & Company at York, in which city he had many social and religious advantages. He stayed in York for about ten years, until in 1837, because of his father's failing health, he felt it his duty to return to Hull to assist him in his business. While in Hull he was married firstly in 1839 to Mary Ann Sanderson (1814-1844 qv) of Hull(2) and there were three children(3), but his happy marriage was of short duration and on his wife's death he returned to live with his parents, his sister taking charge of the two surviving children. He married secondly in 1849 Caroline Dent (1819-1909 qv) of Marr(4), but the marriage was childless(5). He took great interest in the religious and philanthropic institutions in Hull and was an active member of the British and Foreign Bible Society, as well as other societies for promoting the welfare of his fellow townsmen.

In 1850 he resumed contact with Tuke & Company and lived for a time in London, but in 1852 he returned to York to undertake the management of the firm's tea business in their old premises at Castlegate.

He first spoke in meeting for worship in 1855 and was recorded a minister by York Monthly Meeting in 1858. In the following year he retired from business and was liberated in 1861 to hold meetings in some of the poorer districts of the city. In 1862 he joined Russell Jeffrey (1806-1867 qv) and William Brewin (1813-1882 qv) on a visit to India, these three being the first ministers of the Society to visit that country. They journeyed from station to station of the various Protestant missions of every denomination, being warmly received, and they held many meetings with soldiers and natives, as well as with other English speaking people(6).

On his return from India, Henry Hipsley was liberated in 1866 and 1867 for Gospel service in York Quarterly Meeting, when he visited with certificate most of the meetings in north Yorkshire and in Durham. In 1870 he saw similar service in Lancashire Quarterly Meeting, visiting all the meetings in Hardshaw East and West Monthly Meetings, as well as meetings in Lancaster and Preston.

In 1871 he moved to Finsbury Park in London, to be near his grandchildren. He became a member of Westminster & Longford Monthly Meeting and continued to exercise his gift in the ministry. "His preaching was emphatically a testimony for Jesus, in which Christ crucified, risen and glorified, was his constant theme. It was his delight to dwell on the unsearchable riches of His grace. He was unflinching in his testimony to the truth. His appeals to the heart and conscience were often strikingly impressive." (Testimony)

His health began to fail in 1888 and he spent several weeks at the close of the year at Torquay; this period was a great refreshment both physically and spiritually. But in 1889 his health began to fail rapidly and Henry Hipsley of 21 Woodstock Road, Finsbury Park, died on 20 October 1889, at the age of seventy nine(7).

HIPSLY, John (1775-1866)

(174-1816 qv)

John Hipsley, the son of John Hipsley and his wife Elizabeth (born Selfe, -1811) of Congresbury near Bristol, was born there on 4 June 1775(1). He was a descendant of the Hipsley family of Chew Magna and one of his forebears, John Hipsley of Chew, had been imprisoned for conscience sake in the year 1684. His father, a deeply pious man, was an elder and his mother was equally seriously minded. In 1791 the family moved to Ackworth, where John's father became superintendent and during most of the time he was there John acted as secretary.

In 1795 the family left Ackworth and the following year John joined Thomas Fox of Wellington in Somerset, but in 1799 he decided to return to Yorkshire and set up in business as a woollen draper in Hull. He was married in 1804 to Mabel Tuke (1770-1864 qv) of York(2) and there were three children(3). It was a marriage greatly blessed, which endured for nearly sixty years. His connection with the Tuke family was very close and he warmly supported them in all their religious and philanthropic enterprises.

His life could be described as one of unostentatious usefulness. He was respected for his sound judgment and unwavering allegiance to what he conceived to be his duty and on questions of general interest he held decided views, but was never partisan. He was particularly concerned for the cause of negro slavery and the movement for the abolition of the slave trade had his active support. He took a deep interest in education and was instrumental in securing the establishment of a school at Rawden for children who, not being members of the Society, were ineligible for entry into Ackworth.

He combined in his character a good intellect with great strength of will and sensitiveness of feeling. He was made an elder in 1812 and brought to this office his sound judgment and a sympathetic tenderness. His contact with outside organisations such as the Auxiliary Bible Society, of which he was for many years one of the secretaries, led him into an association with Christians of other denominations, with whom he found himself in sympathy as servants of the same Master.

The last eight or ten years of his life were marked by a gradual decay of his memory, but his gentleness and love grew more outstanding with the passing of the years. His last months were a period of great suffering, but he died peacefully at Hull on 15 December 1866, at the age of ninety one(4).

Mabel Tuke, the youngest child of William Tuke III (1732/3-1822 qv) and his wife Esther (born Maud, 1727?-1794 qv) of York, was born there on 10 March 1770(1). She was educated at Ackworth School from 1780 to 1784(2). She was naturally of a lively disposition, but in the example of her parents she had no ordinary advantages and she was a lovable child. She was not particularly fond of her school work, but she had a quickness of mind and a ready ability to hold her own in conversation. She was interested in religion quite early in her life and in her youth she yielded her heart and life to God.

She was married in 1804 to John Hipsley (1775-1866 qv), a woollen draper of Hull who was at one time unpaid secretary to Ackworth School and there were three children(3). It was a marriage greatly blessed, which lasted for sixty years.

Mabel Hipsley first spoke in meetings for worship in 1810 and she was recognised as a minister by her monthly meeting in 1812. Her communications were simple and practical in character and clear in doctrine and she was especially careful not to exceed in words the limit of her gift. Until about 1840 she travelled widely in the United Kingdom, engaged in various forms of religious activity, but in her later years her ministry was confined mainly to her own monthly and quarterly meetings.

She had a strong will and a freshness and directness of thought and expression which, without the religious principle which actuated her, might have led to a disregard of the feelings of others. But she had also true humility and constant watchfulness, which modified her natural disposition, and throughout her life her faith was unshakeable.

She retained her mental faculties until the end of her life, although she was blind for the last five years, a deprivation which made her dependent upon others and from which she shrank, although she bore it with resignation and cheerfulness. She was able to attend meetings for worship and speak a few words until about three weeks before her death. Because of her own and her husband's infirmities, meetings of ministers and elders were often held at their house and were frequently solemn occasions.

Mabel Hipsley of Hull died peacefully after a brief period of weakness, on 21 April 1864, at the age of ninety four(4).

HIPPSLEY, Richard (1708-1767)

Richard Hipsley, the younger son of Richard Hipsley (1661?-1738 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Tucker, 1666-1709 qv) of Stock in the parish of Churchill in Somerset, was born there on 10.vii.[September] 1708(1). His mother died when he was about a year old, but his father was a faithful Friend who educated him in the way of truth. As he grew in years he grew in the grace of the knowledge and love of God.

Some time prior to 1740 he was married to Ann (1709?-1779 qv) (2) and there were eight children(3).

He first spoke in the ministry, very diffidently and cautiously, when he was about thirty five and became in time an able minister. He travelled in the ministry in various parts of England and visited Ireland in 1747, bearing with him a certificate from his monthly meeting. He was a regular attender at meetings for worship and discipline, attended funerals and weddings and also London Yearly Meeting. In his family and neighbourhood his conduct was consistent with the message he preached.

He had a cheerful disposition, was pleasant and affable in conversation, a good husband, a tender father and a kind neighbour, doing what good he could to those around him. His house and his heart were open to his friends.

He bore his last long illness with patience and resignation, trusting in the mercy of God. Richard Hipsley of Stock died peacefully on 8 May 1767, at the age of fifty nine and was buried at Sidcot(4).

HIRSCHFELD, Ludwig (1894? - 1965)

Ludwig Hirschfeld was a German Friend who was born in about the year 1894 (1) and was a distinguished member of the German school of artists, architects and designers who after the first world war led the modern movement. He was a personal friend of Walter Gropius the founder of the Bauhaus movement and he became a member of the famous Bauhaus school at Dessau where his work in the field of art in the broadest sense of the term became widely known.

He had to leave Germany later and from Britain he emigrated to Australia in 1940. In due course he became head of the art department at Geelong (Victoria) Grammar School where he stayed until 1957. Latterly he lived at Ferny Creek, about 25 miles from Melbourne. He was a great and gifted teacher, he was involved in work with mentally retarded children and was a great inspiration to his meeting of Melbourne.

He died in and during Australia Yearly Meeting on 7 January 1965 having only a few moments before made a valuable contribution to the discussion. He was aged 71.

HOARE, Gladys Vera (1910 - 1979)

We have no knowledge of Gladys Hoare's early life but at the age of 16 she obtained an open scholarship to Oxford, but being too young to take advantage of it, she entered the Royal Holloway College of the University of London, graduating in Science with a first class degree and a PH.D. for research work in botany. Her teaching posts included senior science mistress at the County High School for Girls at Wellingborough, senior mistress at Parliament Hill School, London, and in 1949 she was appointed headmistress of Horsham High School for Girls, one of the youngest heads ever to be appointed. For twenty five years she held this post and gave herself unsparingly to the needs of the school and of the local community. On retirement she went to care for her widowed father at Bognor Regis until his death in 1975.

In Wellingborough she had served as clerk to the PM.⁽¹⁾ and had also organised the reception of refugees from Nazi Germany. In Bognor she served as an elder of Chichester MM, and despite a developing illness, she established a recognised meeting in her home at Bognor in January 1977, after the meeting had lapsed for ten years, and the meeting continues to develop. She was a member of Friends Service Council (2) and worked for many local causes including Amnesty, the local Council of Churches, the continuance of the local hospital casualty department, preservation of buildings and the countryside, and latterly - "eldercare" a scheme for a home for elderly people which she initiated. She was a woman of warm vitality with a brilliant and questing mind and a deep personal faith. She died after some months of illness on November 6, 1979. no age is given.

John Hoare was born in about the year 1897 (1) the son of Rev. Joseph Charles (1851 - 1906) and Ellen T (b. Gough) Hoare.(2) His father was an anglican missionary in China who subsequently became the Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong. His grandfather was Edward Hoare, (1812 - 1894) who was an honorary canon of Canterbury Cathedral who in turn was the son of Samuel Hoare (1783 - 1847) who married Louisa Gurney (1784 - 1836) a sister of Elizabeth Fry (b. Gurney 1780 - 1845).(3) John went to school at Repton and came under the influence of two headmasters later to become the Archbishops Temple and Fisher. He became a pacifist and in the first world war spent two and a half years in prison, the last eleven months without books, letters or work. After the war he studied at the London School of Economics under Clement Attlee who encouraged him in his decision to leave the course because of the urgent need to undertake social work in the East End of London. He had been a manager of one of the Highway clubs in East London since 1919 and he became general secretary of the group of clubs in 1924. He continued this work until 1939 when he resigned to devote himself to work with refugees, with and for conscientious objectors and to become the warden of the Spiceland Training Centre in Devon in 1940. In the early thirties he had joined the Society of Friends and had married a year or two later (4) and he and his wife Margaret devoted themselves to the work of rehabilitation and restoration. He gave very great help to conscientious objectors in all sorts of ways and at Spiceland he also acted as clerk of the meeting for a time.(7)

After the war he became an active member of the Bedford Institute Association, committee member and for many years its chairman, through this he continued his concern for youth work and for adult education. He was deeply devoted to the peace testimony of the Society and in later years was saddened by the apparent lack of enthusiasm within the Society for it. Among all his commitments he also served on a number of Friends central committees.(5) In about 1966 he and Margaret moved to Hayling Island where they joined Portsmouth meeting (6) and where he served the monthly meeting as clerk.(7) He was a discerning and sensitive listener, a great help and support to Portsmouth meeting, a man of strong and courageous Christian faith and yet of extraordinary simplicity. As clerk he had the great gift of sensing the feeling of a meeting and he was a kindly man, humorous, generous and unselfish, humble and loving, whose qualities were greatly appreciated.

He died suddenly in the morning of May 11, 1980 at his home aged 83.

Memoirs of Samuel Hoare, (portrait)

HOARE, Sarah (1767?-1855)

Sarah Hoare, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1976) traced, was born about the year 1767(1). As a child she was of a religious turn of mind and as she grew in years her faith deepened, until she became convinced of the truth of the principles professed by Friends and became a member of the Society.

She was intellectually gifted and her literary and scientific attainments were considerable. She taught for many years in Ireland and subsequently at Frenchay, near Bristol, where she moved in 1815.* In 1832 she left Frenchay and went to live with a much loved niece at Bath, remaining there for the rest of her life. She loved the society of young people of all classes, to whom she was a very interesting companion, and she delighted to encourage the pursuit of knowledge which would improve the minds of her young associates.

She was deeply attached to the Society and rejoiced when any of those she had taught became Friends. This proved to be the case with many of her former pupils, with whom she kept up ties of love and interest and had a lively concern for anything which affected them. Her sympathy was as warm as her love and her philanthropy was eminently practical. She felt acutely for the outcasts of society and was always ready to lend a helping hand; her compassion extended to the treatment of animals, which she felt to be a cause of great suffering, and she was not discouraged from using every means in her power to prevent the pursuit of cruel and degrading sports. On the occasion of a fight between a lion and six dogs in 1825 at Warwick she wrote a letter to The Times and the formation in 1832 of a society to promote the more humane treatment of animals gave her great comfort.

She had a wide circle of friends and her correspondence was extensive. Her style was delicate and uplifting and her subjects were mostly of an exalted or religious character. For five or six years before her death she suffered occasionally from bodily and mental infirmity, but for most of the time her mind remained bright and clear and she enjoyed the company of her friends. She died at Bath after a very brief illness on 14 April 1855(2), at the age of eighty eight.

HOBBS, Henry (1796?-1883)

Henry Hobbs, son of Johns and Sarah Hobbs (who were by 1835 of East Woodhay, near Newbury, Berks), was born about 1796 (1). He became a corn dealer and seedsman in Reading (2).

qv
He married in 1835 Hannah Horniman (born Smith, 1798-1884), widow of Robert Horniman (1794-1832 qv) of Reading and Exeter (3): there were, probably, two children of the marriage (4) and there were two surviving children of Hannah Hobbs' first marriage. It is possible that Henry Hobbs had made an earlier marriage and that there was a surviving daughter of it (5).

At some stage between 1842 and 1851 Henry and Hannah Hobbs moved to within the compass of Darlington monthly meeting (6). By 1851 they had emigrated to Cincinnati, Ohio, where Hannah Hobbs' surviving son by her first marriage, Henry Horniman (1827-1900 qv), had also emigrated (7).

By 1871 Henry and Hannah Hobbs had returned to England, settling at Peckham Rye (8).

Henry Hobbs of 89 Peckham Rye, SE, died 20 November 1883, aged 87 years (9).

HOBHOUSE, Stephen Henry (1881-1961)

Stephen Henry Hobhouse was born on the 5th August 1881, educated at Eton and Oxford, and the son of the Rt.Hon. Henry Hobhouse, who belonged to a well-known family of wealthy Liberals. Stephen renounced his heirship to the Estate in order to identify himself with the poor and oppressed in the East End of London. The revolution in his outlook was deepened by his reading the religious autobiography of Leo Tolstoy, by the life of St.Francis of Assisi, and later, John Woolman. By tradition he was an Anglican, but through an unsettled experimental period as to the ways of worship he ceased to attend Church Services and resigned from the University Rifle Corps on pacifist grounds. He continued, however, to take Holy Communion from time to time, and joined the Anglican Pacifist Fellowship. He also belonged to the Fellowship of Reconciliation. After graduation he entered the Civil Service and before long became an attender at Friends Meetings. He became a member in 1909. During the Balkan Wars 1912-13 Stephen Hobhouse undertook relief work with the American Red Cross. He lived in the East End of London and attended the Meetings at Friends Hall, Hoxton Street, where Rosa Waugh, a fellow worker, occasionally came. Her father, Benjamin Waugh, was the founder of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Stephen and Rosa were married at Hampstead Friends Meeting House, and they started their new life together in the East End of London.

(Cap.) On the outbreak of World War I Stephen Hobhouse's swift initiative in the Meeting for Sufferings within a few days led to the formation of the Emergency Committee to aid 'enemy aliens' in this country. As Chairman the work of this Committee occupied him for about a year and a half. He resigned from this Committee, deciding that he would stand on his conviction alone against conscription. During his imprisonment which followed he came to feel that he must defy the silence rule because "the spirit of love requires that I should speak to my fellow prisoners, the spirit of truth, that I should speak to them openly." (1) His experiences in prison led to a deep interest in prison reform. In 1919 he was appointed secretary of a committee of enquiry on prison conditions under the Labour research department (2).

From about the age of forty Stephen Hobhouse was obliged to accept a life of quiet retirement, during which, for almost forty years, he devoted himself to the furtherance of Christ's Kingdom by writing and editing. His most important books were "Selected Writings of William Law", and a revised edition of the principal life of Jacob Boehme, both about Christian mystics. He also wrote many pamphlets, notably "Christ and our Enemies", "Christian Faith in War Time", and "A Christian Outline of Belief", "Truths concerning God and Man and their application to Crime and Punishment".

/P
He died on Easter morning 2 April 1961.

Margaret Hobling was born at Hartland, Devon, in 1897, the daughter of Dr. J. H. Hobling, who later became Medical Officer of Health for Bodmin. She was educated at King Edward's High School for Girls at Birmingham and at Somerville College, Oxford, where she graduated in Classics. She spent two periods at the British School of Archeology at Athens, being the first woman to be awarded a studentship there. She taught classics at Thoresby High School, Leeds, (1920 - 1923) at the Perse High School for Girls in Cambridge (1926 - 1934) and at The Mount (1934 - 1941). In 1941/2 she was a fellow at Woodbrooke and was subsequently appointed lecturer in Scripture in the Dept. of Education at Birmingham University, a post she held until her retirement. Until 1953 she resided at Woodbrooke to its untold enrichment and also gave great help to the Selly Oak Colleges, as lecturer, and then was appointed vice-warden of University House, a hostel for women students at the University.

At the age of 16 she had read Barclay's 'Apology' and had been profoundly impressed by it but it was not until the mid 1930s that she joined the Society ~~at Selly Oak Meeting.~~(1) Between the wars she spent two short periods in the Friends' office in Prague. Her service to the Society as an elder and as a member of central committees was considerable. She was a member of the committee of Sibford School. For twenty years from 1947 to 1966 she was editor of the Friends Quarterly giving distinguished service and maintaining a high quality in the journal. She contributed regularly to The Friend, prepared and edited study pamphlets and in 1958 delivered the Swarthmore Lecture on "The concrete and the universal." She was one of the Friends who prepared the draft of Christian Faith and Practice in the 1950s.

After the war she developed a strong concern for the small and struggling meeting at Stirchley in Birmingham and transferred her membership there from Selly Oak.(3) There she was a very great help to the meeting and its members. She was very fond of children and her ministry was particularly helpful when children were present. She was a fascinating talker, with wide interests and knowledge, an impish sense of humour and a delightful chuckle, although at first meeting she might seem formidable.

On her retirement she moved first to a flat in Selly Oak and then to Oak Tree House, Bournville where she died on April 1, 1977, a few days after a stroke aged 79.

HOBSON, Elizabeth Charlotte (1840-1914) born Russell

Elizabeth C. Russell was born on 13 April 1840. She was the daughter of Thomas Russell, one of the three founders of the Primitive Methodist Society.

In her father's later life they were stationed in Ireland, which was her home for many years. In Bessbrook, in 1864, she married William Hobson (1837-1912, qv) and later became a member of the Society of Friends. At Bessbrook three of their children died.

In 1878 they moved to England and in later years, living at Willesden, she became a Guardian of the Poor; she was also a member of the School Board. She loved animals and one of her activities was a cattledrovers' Sunday night supper at her house after which she tried to explain to them how unnecessary it was for them to inflict pain in their work. YK

Elizabeth C. Hobson and her husband made special visits to Meetings in England, paid a prolonged visit to America and were resident workers in some of our large centres of population.

She was an Elder of Reigate Meeting where her ministry, offered both to the adults and to the children of the meeting, was varied and spiritual.

She was of the stuff of which martyrs are made: brave, determined and most practical, yet sensitive to a degree and absolutely fearless when right and truth were at stake. Her cheerfulness of outlook 'came from constant supplies of Heavenly grace, an abiding trust in her Saviour and loyalty to God'.

She died at Reigate on 8 October 1914.

HOBSON, William (1752-1840)

William Hobson, the son of Joshua Hobson and his wife Martha, born Holmes, of London, was born there on 9 November 1752(1). He was a descendant of an old Quaker family which had originated at Skipsey in Yorkshire. He was married in 1779 to Ann Rickman, the daughter of Caleb Rickman (1730-1789 qv), herself descended from a line of Quaker ancestors(2); there were sixteen children(3).

William Hobson, who lived at that time in Southwark, was a noted builder who erected, during the scare of Napoleon's invasion, the Martello towers which can still be seen round the south coast of England. He was a clever, handsome man, a citizen of London and member of the Fishmongers Company, much admired by his twelve sons-in-law. He died a very wealthy man.

He was not a consistent Quaker. He kept a box at the opera and a Billiard table at Markfield House in Tottenham, where he moved some time after 1804. He was also fond of sport and hunted in Surrey. He is said to have been on friendly terms with George III, who wished to offer him a baronetcy, but he was sufficiently Quaker in his outlook to decline the honour. All his children left the Society, either of their own free will or were disowned, singly or in batches.

William Hobson was disowned in 1801(4) for "paying tithes & encouraging diversions in his house" and his wife in 1804(5) in that she "encourages and approves of her children being taught the practice of music." The position of the family claimed constant attention from 1800 to 1823, first in Southwark Monthly Meeting and later in Tottenham Monthly Meeting. There is no record of William Hobson's death on 23 May 1840 and it is assumed that he did not return to the Society(6).

WILLIAM HOBSON was born near Lurgan, in the north of Ireland, in the year 1837. He joined the Society (many members of his family being Friends) in 1859, and in 1880 moved to England, where he settled in Kent and later in Bristol. In 1882 he offered himself for service in the new Friends' Home Mission and visited almost every part of the British Isles in connection with this work, making his home in London.

In 1900 William Hobson and his wife were liberated for service in America, and during their stay there visited most of the Yearly Meetings, including that of Canada (1).

On retiring he lived first at Dover and then at Reigate, where he died on 23 April, 1912.

Stanley Hockey was born in Bristol in 1911 into a Baptist family. He graduated at Bristol University with first class honours in geography. He worked as a supply teacher in the Bristol area in the early thirties and then obtained an appointment at Bedlington, a mining town in Northumberland. There he began to attend Newcastle meeting and after a time joined Friends there. Whilst there he also met his future wife Marjorie and they were married in 1937.(1)

With the outbreak of the second world war he registered as a C.O. and was allowed to continue in teaching and they moved to the Cotswolds(2). He had a lifelong interest in music and at Malmesbury during this period he played the organ for services in the Abbey church there. In 1949 he returned to Newcastle as a lecturer in the Dept. of Education,(3) and ten years later he was seconded as senior lecturer in the sub-faculty of education in the college at Fourah Bay in Sierra Leone. He was there during the colony's transition to independence in 1961 and in 1962 was appointed to the chair of education, remaining there until 1965. He then returned to Newcastle as senior lecturer and from 1973 until he retired in 1976 he was head of the Higher Degrees Division of the School of Education.

He was for many years secretary of an inner city youth club, he involved himself in counselling overseas students, caring for an asian family and latterly was chairman of Wigton School Committee. In his local meeting he served as an elder and was a deeply valued member. He also served on Friends Education Council.(4)

He died suddenly in hospital on July 4, 1979, his exact age is not given.

John Hodges was born in the city of Worcester in 1674. He became convinced of the Truth while he was still young and when aged about thirty he received "a Gift of the Ministry, in the Exercise of which, he came forth with great Tenderness and Simplicity, but with a good Degree of Power and laboured fervently therein to very near the End of his Days here, to the Convincement of Many, and to the Edification & Comfort of the Church in a large Degree and notwithstanding his Education was of a low Kind." He travelled in the ministry once into Scotland and several times in England and Wales. "He was very Diligent in attending Meetings, both for Worship and Discipline, and Exemplary in his Endeavours to promote Peace and Concord amongst the Brethren, was of Good Report of those without, and was frequently applyed to by some not of our Persuasion, for his prayers for them."

He probably married Esther Armes in 1694(1), but the marriage was apparently childless.(2)

William Hodges was born at Silverton in the county of Devon in 1666. He was educated in the beliefs and principles of the Church of England, but became convinced of the truth about the twenty sixth or twenty seventh year of his age; he did not, however, appear in the ministry until he was about fifty nine. "As his Conduct was very Regular, Steady and Exemplary, he was the better qualified to exhort and advise both in Private and Publick Capacity, his Discourses in Converse were Commonly Mixt with that of Religion & were often instructive & Edifying . . . He was no eager Pursuer of the World having by his Industry procured a moderate Competency he was cheerfully therewith Content."

He appears to have married Mary Mitchell of Coventry in 1695(1) and there were four children of the marriage.(2)

HODGKIN, Alice Mary (1860-1955)

Alice M. Hodgkin was born at Lewes on 29 April 1860. Her father was John Hodgkin (1800-1875, qv) and her mother Elizabeth (his third wife) came from the old Quaker family of Haughtons in Ireland.

At the age of 18 years she had a very definite Christian experience when she felt a very clear call from the Lord to yield her life to his service: and at once started to prepare herself for this service by careful study of the Bible which was always to be the very word of God. This led her to write her book 'Christ in all the scriptures' which had a large circulation in this country and abroad. her /

In 1892, the family moved to Reigate, and during the next thirty years or so, Alice M. Hodgkin visited many of the Friends' Meetings in England and Ireland either alone, or with older Friends, with a concern to pass on her messages for the deepening of spiritual life. In 1897 she was among those who started a regular Mission Meeting on Sunday evenings, which continued for about thirty years. Her love and affection for children has left its mark on many: she knew them all, welcomed them and invited them to her home, and made them feel a part of the meeting.

Outside the Society of Friends, much of her time and energy was taken up with the Post Office Christian Association which in conjunction with her sister Annie, she started in 1887 which grew into a worldwide fellowship.

She died on 19 May 1955.

HODGKIN, David Kenneth Ronald (1914 - 1977)

David Hodgkin was born at Darlington on September 19, 1914, the youngest son of Jonathan Edward (1875 - 1953 qv.) and Elspeth Lillian (b. Beckhouse) Hodgkin.(1)

He was educated at The Downs School and at Leighton Park and after a year at Cambridge, spent some time in business firms. Then in 1938, moved by the invasion of Czechoslovakia he volunteered for relief work and went to the Friends Centre in Vienna. There he met Brigit Kelsey, already a worker there and they were married in London in 1940, at Hampstead Meeting House.(2) He continued to work for refugees and in 1941 he and Brigit became the first wardens of Friends International Centre, then in Gordon Square. After the war he took up international affairs and graduated from the London School of Economics. He then took up a post as assistant registrar at Hull University College. During these years he was a member of various central committees including those connected with relief work and with international relations.

In 1953 he and his wife and three sons went to Australia where he became assistant registrar of the Australian National University at Canberra. There, the family were founding members of Canberra Meeting, started in 1954, and David acted as its first clerk, the meeting house was opened in 1961.

David retired early from his appointment at the University to take up the duties of secretary to Australia Yearly Meeting, and he served also as clerk of Australia General Meeting through the transition into Australia Yearly Meeting. In this he played a leading role, he was a shy man, but patient and understanding, deeply interested in people and their problems. He had an impressive presence with a deep voice and was greatly concerned with seemliness and that all should be in good order. He spent some time at the Quaker United Nations Program, was chairman for a time of the Australian Council of Churches Commission on International Affairs, and was also president of the Canberra branch of the Australian Institute of International Affairs.

Despite his Quaker upbringing David Hodgkin had to struggle for his faith and an overwhelming experience in 1970 made him realise fully the joy and elation of deep religious faith, This led to his writing the pamphlet " Quakerism - a mature religion for today " which has found wide acceptance.

He developed leukemia and although he was able to continue in his duties as secretary to Australia Yearly Meeting up to within three weeks of his death he died in hospital at Canberra on March 1, 1977 at the age of 62.

HODGKIN, Elizabeth (1768-1833) born Rickman

Elizabeth Rickman, the daughter of Richard Peters Rickman (1745-1801 qv) and his wife Mary (born Verrell,) of Lewes in Sussex, was born in the year 1768(1).

She was married in 1793 to John Hodgkin (1766-1845 qv), a private tutor of Westminster and there were four children(2). Her husband had formerly been a writing master at Pentonville and at Ackworth School and finally became a barrister(3).

Her natural diffidence tended to conceal much of her real worth, but among those who knew her best she was justly valued for her sound judgment and unaffected piety. She was deeply concerned for the religious and literary education of her children, which she was well equipped to provide. She had an earnest wish to do the Lord's will and performed various social duties. She was a woman who placed her whole trust in the mercy of God.

Elizabeth Hodgkin of Tottenham in Middlesex died on 28 April 1833, at the age of sixty four(4).

HODGKIN, Elizabeth Joy (1870-1962) born Montgomery

E. Joy Montgomery was born on 20 October 1870, the eldest of the thirteen children of Henry and Euphemia Montgomery. All her life she maintained the sturdy Victorian sense of direction and purpose, and possessed great powers of self discipline and uprightness, Such, however, / spontaneity and gaiety of her character that she was able to respond to people of all ages to the very end of her life. Her father in his late twenties gave up business for the Presbyterian Ministry in Belfast. Thus in middle childhood Joy became a daughter of the Manse. She shared in the full programme of Sunday schools, Bible classes, Lectures and open-air meetings. The Montgomery household was one where Missionary work was kept in mind, so in response to a demand for more workers in India she volunteered. She was compelled to return to Britain owing to a serious illness, and realizing how much was achieved by good nursing, she decided to become a nurse. She trained at Kings College Hospital, London, and at the Mildmay Mission Hospital where she met Henry T. Hodgkin (1877-1933, qv). They were married in 1903.

Joy
Elizabeth Hodgkin became a Friend shortly before the birth of her first child, but with her experience she was able to assist Henry Hodgkin in promoting co-operation and fellowship between Christians. When in Chengtu, with FFMA they were to share in the foundation of the West China Union University. They returned to London where Henry Hodgkin was appointed Secretary of the FFMA at the time of the Edinburgh World Congress, a milestone in the development of the Ecumenical Movement. After the First World War they returned to China (1) for her husband to take up the Secretaryship of the National Christian Council of China. She was his constant and invaluable companion in all his work of reconciliation. Their last service together was in the foundation of Pendle Hill. Henry died in 1933, and it was typical of Joy Hodgkin that she accepted the opportunities of her widowhood for continued service, which in her last years was to her Meeting. She did not find speaking easy and her Ministry sprang from a true inward compulsion, being just what was needed at that particular meeting; it was usually an exposition of a Biblical passage and was notable for its clarity and brevity. She died on 17 November 1962.

HODGKIN, George Lloyd (1880-1918)

George Lloyd Hodgkin was born on 22 August 1880 at Benwelldene, Newcastle-on-Tyne, the youngest child of Thomas (1831-1913, qv) and Lucy Anna Hodgkin. He had a happy childhood and went to school, first at Ackworth and then at Leighton Park. In 1898 he went to Trinity College, Cambridge, in due course gaining a First in the Natural Science Tripos. He hoped to take up medicine but a break-down in health, followed by serious eye trouble, put an end to all thought of this. For two years he travelled in Europe and Palestine, and later in New Zealand. On returning to England he took up the study of civil engineering, and after a three-year course at Sunderland took up the post of Assistant Inspector of Harbours and Piers in the Isle of Man. In 1909 he visited Australia with his parents and sister and on the way home stopped at India and Burma. From 1910-1912 he worked at the Newcastle Guild of Help, and in the autumn of 1913 attended as a representative of English Young Friends the Five Years Meeting in America.

In 1913 he married Mary Fletcher Wilson, daughter of Henry Lloyd and Mary Theodora Wilson of Selly Oak, Birmingham (1) and settled down to work at Gillett's Bank in Banbury. Three sons were born in 1914, 1916 and 1918 (2)

In 1916 he undertook his first journey on relief work to Armenia, going out with a party under the Lord Mayor's Armenian Relief Fund. Returning after four months he found himself in difficulties with tribunals, as he refused to accept anything but complete exemption from military service. Eventually he set out on his second Armenian journey, having to go via Mesopotamia; and at Baghdad he was taken to a military hospital where he died after only ten days' illness on 24 June 1918, aged 38 (3)

His short life had its full share of troubles. Ill health repeatedly dogged his path and often he could not see which was the right course to follow, but his own experiences enabled him to understand and sympathise with the troubles of others. The journals which he kept on his travels show how wide were his interests and how thorough he was in all his undertakings. He had friends all over the world among men and women, old and young, and was always at home with very little children.

Elaf Hodgkin was born at Darlington on April 16, 1879, the son of Jonathan Backhouse (1843 - 1946 qv.) and Mary Anna (b. Pease 1840 - 1928 qv.) Hodgkin. He was educated at Leighton Park School and then taught for two years as a pupil teacher at Stramongate School, Kendal. He then spent a short period at the Glasgow Bible Training Institute and in 1904 went out to Madagascar as an educational missionary under the Friends Foreign Mission Association. A year later in Antananarivo, having fulfilled the compulsory requirement of learning the malagasy language he married Lydia Grubb (1878 - 1965). They stayed in Madagascar for fifteen years during which time their six children were born. On returning to England they lived first in Leeds (1) and then moved to Broxbourne in Hertfordshire (2) where he ran a poultry farm. Being near to London enabled him to undertake service on Friends Central committees including Meeting for Sufferings and the Friends Foreign Mission Association (later the Friends Service Council)(3). He also for a time served as clerk to the Hertford & Hitchin MM.(4)

During the second world war he and Lydia worked with Friends Relief Service as wardens of an evacuation hostel for old people outside Belfast. He was interested in caring for the elderly and in 1946 was involved with the beginning of the Swarthmore Housing Association. One of his main contributions however was to the Friends Fellowship of Healing which he helped to found and of which he was the first chairman. He was also involved from the beginning in the establishment of Claridge House in which he took a deep and continued interest. Later when he went to Australia he took this interest with him and before his death four groups had been started there. Another important interest was in temperance and he not only worked for this with Friends but served as co-treasurer of the Temperance Council of Christian Churches from 1956 - 1970 and also as treasurer of the Overseas Temperance Council. In 1967 at the age of 88 he was appointed a representative to the centenary celebrations of Friends work in Madagascar and he travelled throughout the island and then went on to visit his family now mostly living in Australia and New Zealand. In 1970 he left England at the age of 91 to live in Australia and to continue his work for healing there, and he made a great contribution to the life of the Society of Friends in that country.

He was a vigorous, healthy man, spartan in temperament, a great walker and a good man deeply concerned for peace and spiritual healing through the power of prayer.

He died on July 13, 1981 aged 102.

Henry T. Hodgkin, son of Jonathan B. and Mary Anna Hodgkin was born on ~~the~~ 21st April 1877. The influence of his home at Elm Ridge, Darlington gave him a standard of right living, of justice tempered with mercy and of heart-whole devotion to the work of the Church of Christ.

This he did in so many ways, as for example in Chentu in 1905-1910 when the West China Union University came into being: lecturing and acting as one of the Secretaries of the National Christian Council of China; as Secretary of the Friends Foreign Mission Association (1910-1920) and helping to mould the expression of its thought in his Swarthmore Lecture of 1916. He was a strong exponent of the Peace Testimony and instrumental in the founding of the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

It was given to him "to make known the mystery of the Gospel" in many different places - college groups, Cathedral services, small country Meetings, or to the individual seeker. He spoke with a conviction and freshness from his own wide experience in medicine, travel, ability in games, love of literature and nature and all the opportunities for friendship and helpfulness these afforded.

He loved young people and they responded with trust in his leadership and guidance. He was connected with the Student Christian Movement all his life. His last two years were spent as first Director of Pendle Hill, Philadelphia and in many journeys over the U.S.A. where he was well remembered from his visit as a Delegate to the Five Years Meeting in 1922.

From the time of his marriage to E. Joy Montgomery of Belfast in 1903 she ~~had~~ supported him in all his work. With their three sons they completed a home circle dearly loved by members of Winchmore Hill Meeting.

It is not possible to recount all that Henry T. Hodgkin did but of him it can be truly said he was "a servant of Christ doing the will of God from the heart".

He died on the 26th March 1933.

Quaker World Service 7 Nos (May 1, 1933) 1-3 (portrait)

Herbert Hodgkin was born in London on December 5, 1904, the eldest of the three sons of Henry Theodore (1877 - 1933 qv.) and Elizabeth Joy (b. Montgomery 1870 - 1962 qv.) Hodgkin.(1)

Part of his childhood was spent in China but he developed at school a love of literature and an interest in natural history and the English countryside. In his adolescence he developed narcolepsy, from which he was to suffer for the rest of his life, and this, with its fits of drowsiness and apparent laziness, not being diagnosed for several years, he failed at Cambridge and failed also to keep to any occupation, so that for a time he endured unemployment, loneliness and near despair, his parents being away in China once more. However, his condition was finally recognised and treatment began and he was some years later able to complete the medical studies he had begun at Cambridge. His first appointment was to a cottage hospital, and there he gained the experience he needed as he was preparing himself for working abroad. He tried to develop his own skill at diagnosis rather than depend on X rays, and also worked for a time in a large children's hospital.

In the years preceding the second world war he was involved with the activities of the Peace Pledge Union and then in 1939 was sent by the Friends Service Council to Shanghai with Harry Silcock (2) to start the Friends Centre there. Much of his time there was spent with the European refugees from the Hitler regime, his flair for language, his own earlier despair and his sense of humour and intuitive sympathy were of tremendous help both to the sufferers and to his colleagues. With the entry of the Japanese into the war and the fall of Shanghai, he was interned in 1943 and again his qualities, coupled with his medical skills and his knowledge of medicinal plants were of great value in the years there, but although he entered whole-heartedly into the recreational activities of the camp, he also sought opportunities for loneliness and privacy.

In August 1945 he was released and in November 1945 he returned to England,(3) became a general practitioner in a working class suburb of London and settled down to what must have seemed an uneventful life. He lived in Hampstead Garden Suburb with his mother (4) until she died in 1962, and he was a loved and valued member of the community there. He was very fond of gardening, was a familiar figure in inter-church circles, serving for a year as chairman of the Golders Green & District Council of Churches. He was greatly loved in his own meeting of Golders Green and in the Monthly Meeting and served on Friends Service Council for several years.(5)

He died on November 3, 1971, aged 66.

HODGKIN, John (1800-1875)

John Hodgkin was born in 1800, a birthright Friend in London and Middlesex Quarterly Meeting. He was a barrister.

In 1836 he first spoke in Meeting and a few years afterwards he was recorded a minister by Tottenham Monthly Meeting. In 1843 he had a severe illness, and on recovery retired from practice of his profession in order to give his time fully to the work of Christ. He travelled extensively in the ministry, visiting most of the meetings of Friends in England and Ireland as well as the small meetings in the South of France. He also spent a considerable part of a year in America.

John Hodgkin was Clerk to the Yearly Meeting in 1850 and 1851, and for several years was clerk to the Yearly Meeting of Ministers and Elders.

He undertook much philanthropic work, visiting Spain in 1863 with other Friends, to present to the Queen an address 'on behalf of some of her subjects suffering imprisonment for conscience sake.' This journey was under appointment of the Meeting for Sufferings. He worked in connection with the 'Freedmen's Aid Union' and the 'War Victims Fund', and was interested in the Irish at the time of the great famine. He also largely promoted both elementary and higher education.

'Sympathy was a marked feature of his character; whether among his fellow-labourers in the cause of truth, or with the christian traveller to whom a less public walk was assigned, or the youthful disciple - with those who rejoiced or with those who sorrowed - he was ever ready to tender encouragement and comfort in the loving spirit and with the gentle words that were best adapted to reach the heart'.

John Hodgkin died 3 July 1875.

HODGKIN, Jonathan Backhouse (1843-1926)

Jonathan Backhouse Hodgkin was born at Tottenham on 27 December 1843, the son of John (1800-1875, qv) and Ann Hodgkin. He was educated at Grove House School and University College London. When a young man he went on a voyage to Australasia for his health and retained a life long interest in Friends he met there. He moved to Darlington in 1870 and served for four years in Backhouse's Bank, before he retired from business to devote himself to religious and philanthropic work.

He married in 1873 Mary Anna, younger daughter of John and Sophia Pease. They had five children(1). They made their home at Elm Ridge, Darlington (2).

He was recorded a minister in 1878 and undertook a number of visits in that capacity, usually accompanied by his wife. He took part in the revision of Part II of the Book of Discipline between 1907 and 1911. He was clerk of his monthly and quarterly meetings, served on the Home Mission Committee and on the Board of the Friends Foreign Mission Association. He was instrumental in the training home for missionary work being moved from Chester House, London to Kingsmead, Birmingham. He was a founder of Leighton Park School and chairman of its Board of Governors for 24 years. He was a founder of the Friends' Prayer League.

He had many civic interests in Darlington and was mayor in 1884-85. During and after the 1914-18 war he promoted the work of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, although a seizure in 1914 somewhat limited his active life.

He died on 26 April 1926.

HODGKIN, Jonathan Edward (1875-1953)

J. Edward Hodgkin, the son of Jonathan Backhouse (1843-1926, qv) and Mary s/ Anna (born Pearce) Hodgkin of Darlington, was born there on 4 November 1875 (1). He was educated at Leighton Park School, being its first scholar in 1890. He later became chairman of the Board of the school, and was also associated all his life with the school at Great Ayton. He married in 1902 Elspeth Lilian Backhouse (2): there were 6 children (3).

Edward Hodgkin was an elder for many years, and was one of the last recorded ministers. He was for ten years clerk of Durham Quarterly Meeting. He served as second assistant clerk of London Yearly Meeting from 1923 to 1926 (4). He was chairman of the Friends Education Council and its executive from 1920 to 1935.

He undertook much public service and as a magistrate gave much time to visiting the prisoners in Durham Gaol, being chairman of the Visiting Committee.

'It can truly be said of him that he was a big man, physically and mentally, with a quick grasp of essentials and a wonderful aptitude for drawing people together in purposeful groups. His true greatness, however, was seen in his gift for personal friendship which in the midst of an exceedingly active life showed itself in his readiness to help and to stand by those in need' (5).

He has also been described as a 'man of strong - indeed dominating - personality, impatient of opposition and not always quick to understand any point of view but his own' (6).

He died 19 December 1953.

HODGKIN, Thomas (1798-1866)

Thomas Hodgkin was born at Pentonville in August 1798, his father being a man of considerable learning who gave his sons a liberal, yet guarded, education. Both parents were sincere Christian people. Thomas Hodgkin studied medicine at Edinburgh, and after travelling extensively in Europe settled in London, where he quickly became established as a physician of repute. In 1839 he moved from central London to the west end, and became a member of Westminster and Longford Monthly Meeting for the remainder of his life.

In spite of his outstanding ability and his eminence in the medical world, he was essentially a humble man who delighted in doing good. Having a strong sense of the brotherhood of man, he took a keen interest in any movement directed towards the welfare of the oppressed, and especially of the coloured people. Pressure of outside engagements never caused him to relax his regular attendance at meetings for worship and discipline. He served his Monthly Meeting for many years as Overseer and as Clerk, and in the last two years of his life he became an Elder, overcoming a diffidence which for many years caused him to decline to accept this office. He did very good work among the young men of his Monthly Meeting, inviting them to his home and being always ready with counsel or encouragement.

In 1866 he accompanied, for the third time, his friend Sir Moses Montefiore on a philanthropic mission abroad. Whilst at Alexandria he was taken ill, but he continued to Jaffa, where three weeks later he died, on 4 April 1866, in his 68th year. He was buried the following day in the protestant cemetery at Jaffa.
