HOPKINS, Caroline (1808-1874) born Green 2+

Caroline Green, the daughter of Joseph Markes Green (1771-1840 qv) and his wife Mercy (born Day, 1775-1855 qv) of Saffron Walden in Essex, was born there on 10 March 1808(1).

She was married in 1844 to Henry Hopkins (1812-1881 qv), a grocer of Scarborough and there was one daughter(2). She was a minister, but her health was very frail; during the last ten years of her life, when her feebleness and failing sight left her little ability for ordinary occupations, she was almost constantly employed in making up clothes for the very poor in London.

She died after a painful illness on 19 April 1874, at the age of sixty six(3).

HOPKINS, Henry (1812-1881)

Henry Hopkins, the youngest son of Jonathan Hopkins (1773-1821 qv) and his wife Susanna, born Smith, of Brandycar in the parish of Cadney in Lincolnshire, was born there on 31 January 1812(1). His father died when he was only nine years old and the care of the farm and family fell upon his eldest brother Joseph (1801-1880 qv).

At the early age of thirteen Henry was removed from school and apprenticed to a grocery business in Hull. Later on he lived for some years at Saffron Walden in Essex and in the year 1836 he set up in business on his own at Scarborough. He was married in 1844 to Caroline Green, the daughter of Joseph Markes Green (1771-1840 qv) and his wife Mercy (born Day, 1775-1855 qv) of Saffron Walden(2) and there was one child(3). A few years after his marriage his health gave way and in 1849 he was forced to retire from business, but he welcomed the opportunity which this gave him for work in the ministry.

He was recorded a minister in 1853 and travelled widely in England and Ireland. He visited most of the English quarterly meetings, some of them repeatedly and in his later years he was seldom without a minute for religious service, not only holding public meetings but bearing the Gospel message from house to house. He loved the Yorkshire dales and never seemed to enjoy life so completely as when he was travelling through beautiful countryside, proclaiming his message of the love of God to audiences crowded into little village chapels or closed meeting houses. His preaching was especially adapted for meetings of this kind; it was simple and homely, but loving and earnest.

"Henry Hopkins' ministry was particularly adapted to awaken the careless and to stimulate the lukewarm, and it was his desire 'to be instant, in season and out of season.' Possessing a lively faith, a cheerful spirit and a large power of sympathy, he was enabled, through Divine grace, practically to commend the religion he professed to those around him." (Testimony) He was also a firm advocate of total abstinence.

Henry Hopkins of Scarborough died on 13 April 1881, at the age of sixty nine(4).

Joseph Hopkins, the eldest son of Jonathan Hopkins (1773-1821 qv) and his wife Susanna, born Smith, of Brandycar in the parish of Cadney in Lincolnshire, was born there on 21 March 1801(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1813 to 1815, where he worked hard and made many friends. After leaving Ackworth he went for a time to a school at Waddington in Lincolnshire, where he was the only Friend. When he returned home his father expected him to help on the farm, but he was a studious young man and continued his studies in botany and chemistry.

His father's early death in 1821 left him the responsibility of the farm and the care of his mother and a large family of brothers and sisters. He reacted well to his changed situation and became grave beyond his years, taking charge of the farm and learning all he could about his new occupation.

He was married in 1837 to Eliza Ann Green (1806-1866 qv), the daughter of Joseph Markes Green (1771-1840 qv) and his wife Mercy (born Day, 1775-1855 qv) of Saffron Walden in Essex(2) and there were two children(3). He and his wife were regularly engaged together in the work of the ministry.

In his religious life he was greatly helped by his friendship with Joseph John Gurney (1788-1847 qv), James Backhouse (1794-1869 qv) and Christopher Healey (1773-1851 qv). In 1827 he accompanied James Backhouse as guide to several meetings in Lincolnshire and in 1831 he travelled in the north of England and in Ireland as companion to Christopher Healey. He was recorded a minister in 1832. He was a Poor Law guardian and in this capacity and in other local and benevolent matters, as well as in the affairs of the Society, his time was much occupied; his services were highly valued by his fellow-townsmen. HOPKINS, Joseph Green (1840-1912)

Joseph Green Hopkins, the son of Joseph Hopkins (1801-1880 qv) and his wife Eliza Ann (born Green, 1801-1866 qv) ~~and the~~ [daughter of Joseph Markes Green (1771-1840 qv)], of Brandy Carr near Howsham, was born there on 2 October 1840(1). He received his first education at a British School in his native village and at the age of twelve was sent to Ackworth School from 1852 to 1855. He was married in 1863 to Elizabeth Drewett (1838-1895 qv), the daughter of William Drewett (1810-1866 qv) of Luton(2); the marriage was apparently childless(3).

The village schoolmaster had exercised a profound religious influence over the mind of his young pupil, an impression which was deepened by his schooldays at Ackworth and he was early convinced that he was destined for a religious life, but it was not until he was about thirty that he first spoke in meeting at Ampthill; five years later he was recorded a minister by Lewes & Chichester Monthly Meeting, in 1876. He was always ready as minister, elder and overseer to give what help he could and "whilst conscious of his own imperfections and limitations, our Friend was enabled to glorify God in his generation, and to magnify that grace which made him what he was."(Testimony)

For many years he was a farmer, first in Lincolnshire and later at Whitehill near Luton. In 1875 he gave up his farm and accepted the position of secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Lewes in Sussex, a post which he filled with ability for sixteen years. Soon after the death of his wife in 1895 he resigned his appointment and spent the rest of his life in quiet retirement at his home in Lewes. When his health allowed, he travelled extensively in the ministry. He paid a week-end visit to Ackworth in 1905 to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the close of his school days and gave very solemn addresses to the school, both in meeting and in the Sunday evening reading.

Joseph Green Hopkins of Lindholme, King Henry's Road, Wallands, Lewes, died on 24 August 1912, at the age of seventy one(4).

Thomas Hopkins, the son of Thomas and Rebecca Hopkins of Cross Hall in Morley, Yorkshire, was born there on 22 May 1801(1). He was married in 1831 to Hannah Scales of Nottingham(2) and there were four children(3).

He was an elder and a valuable member of his meeting, solicitous for the welfare of the Society and concerned to fill his own place faithfully and with Christian love. He possessed a clear, sound judgment, while his courtesy and genial disposition made him a general favourite. He was frequently called upon to act as an arbitrator in reconciling differences of opinion and was deeply interested in many philanthropic movements, giving them liberal aid and much time and attention.

As he grew older his spiritual life deepened, but he had no very great opinion of his own attainments. His useful life was somewhat unexpectedly brought to a close. HOPKINSON, Ellen Oldham (1886-1965)

Ellen O. Hopkinson was born on 13 April 1886. She spent much of her life abroad; for several years she held a post as lecturer in domestic science at the University of Dunedin, New Zealand, leaving in 1918 to take up a similar position in South Africa.

In 1921 she returned to England to care for an aged mother. It was at this time that she transferred her membership from South Africa Meeting to Notts & Derby Monthly Meeting .

In 1927 she again visited South Africa and then travelled to Rhodesia, USA, Canada, Germany and Denmark. Her chief concern during these travels was that of the reform of the penal system. She enquired into prison conditions and into the treatment of prisoners. On her return she became active in the care of prisoners' families, and the discharged prisoners in Mansfield and district, raising money and involving other people in the problem.

Ellen often made her home at Edwinstone, a holiday refuge for boys from Remand Homes, and for maladjusted boys and girls in need of friendly care. She shared the responsibility for establishing the Elizabeth Fry Home for mothers needing care and training, at Spofforth Hall (later transferred to York)

During a twelve-month visit to relatives in Australia and New Zealand in 1920 she became concerned for the welfare of the Aborigines, especially those living near the Woomera rocket range.

Ellen Hopkinson served the Monthly Me ting as elder and overseer. She was an active member of the Penal Reform Committee and of Meeting for Sufferings and she took an active interest in the work of the Friends Service Council. She died on 31 May 1965.

HORNE, Mary (1699/1700-1772) born Grover

Mary Grover, the daughter of John Grover III (1677-1752 qv) and his wife Elizabeth, born Harrison, of Brighton, was born there on 5.i.(March) 1699/1700(1). She was a clever, capable woman, who in 1726/7 or 1727/8 married Robert Horne (1692/3-1756 qv) of Arundel and there were apparently at least two children(2). The Hornes were an altogether slower witted family than the Groves and Mary was much tried at times by her husband's heavy ways. She would sometimes say when irritated with him "If I had a drop of Horne blood in my veins I would prick myself and let it out."

She had an active and affectionate disposition , which shows to great advantage in the letters written between herself and her daughter Elizabeth, who married John Kemp. In spite of the demands of her own family life, she found time to go frequently to Brighton to help her widowed sister-in-law Elizabeth Grover and her nephew William, advising him on the care of the property he had been left in Brighton. She had a great affection for her nephew and her wise letters to him, besides being full of family gossip and news, show a warm concern for his spiritual welfare.

There is unfortunately not at present (1976) any trace of her services to the Society, but so good a woman was also probably a good Friend. Shortly before her death she wrote "I have been very low and can walk but little, I have been with Tomey were I have wanted for nothing that love and tenderness can get for me he have been and is afficttinately tender in deed to me I desire to be thankfull for these as well as all other mercys."

She died in London, while on a visit to her children there, on 6 September 1772(3).

HORNE, Robert (1769-1813)

Robert Horne, the eldest son of John Horne (1730/1-1788 qv) and his wife Sarah, born Rickman, of Arundel in Sussex, was born there on 27 October 1769(1). He was married in 1792 to Elizabeth Rickman, the daughter of Caleb Rickman (1730-1789 qv) of Hookland(2); she was first cousin to her husband's mother. There were three daughters(3).

Robert Horne was a miller of Arundel and lived in a very pretty place called Swanbourne Mill, about half a mile outside the town. It had been in the family for many years and here the three little girls led an idyllic existence. Apart from the delights of the mill stream, on one side of the lane where the mill stood there was a large park belonging to the Duke of Norfolk, in which the children often rambled. The eldest girl, Susannah, went to a boarding school at Isleworth, but the two younger girls were educated at home. When Susannah was about sixteen the family moved into Arundel for the benefit of their mother's health, but their father continued to run the mill until a tragic accident brought about his death.

He was attending to some repairs to the water wheel, in the absence of the workmen, when one of the cogs caught in his clothing and he was drawn into the machinery before anyone could go to his assistance. He died almost instantly, on 1 January 1813(4). The accident was reported in the Sussex Advertiser, which described him as a member of the Society of Friends, much esteemed for the rectitude of his conduct. His death ended the long family association with Swanbourne Mill.

John Horne died in 1788 and Sarah survived her husband for thirty years, carrying on the bakery business with the help of her sister Ann Rickman. The old baker's shop was a delight to her grandchildren, who were allowed to make twists of dough into plaits. The bread was delivered to Arundel Castle by one of Sarah's assistants, riding on horseback with baskets slung on either side and sometimes a lucky grandchild would be allowed to ride in front.

HORNE, Thomas (-1718)

Thomas Horne, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1976) traced(1), lived at Arundel in Sussex with his wife Susanna(2) and their ten children(3) in the second half of the seventeenth century. In 1688 they were probably living at Swanbourne Mill, on the outskirts of the town. They were almost certainly convinced Quakers. Thomas' name appears as a witness to a marriage at Arundel in 1673 and also in the records of Arundel & Chichester Monthly Meeting in the second month (April)1684.

He suffered for his refusal to pay tithes. In 1707, on the demand of the vicar of Arundel for forty shillings tithe, he had taken from him cheese to the value of fifty shillings and again in 1711 he lost cheese to the value of twenty three shillings and threepence. It is possible only to speculate as to his occupation, but the loss of cheese suggests a cheese merchant, or perhaps a farmer.

He died on 27.ii.(April)1718(4).

HORNIMAN, Ann (1800-1900) born Smith

Ann Smith was born on 27 March 1800, at Witney, Oxfordshire, the daughter of Thomas (c1759-1843) and Hannah Smith (1765-1817, born Thackwell, qv). (1) After her mother's death, her father married Hannah Horniman (c1775-1848, born Brewerton), widow of Thomas Horniman (c1766-1817 qv) of Reading, Berkshire; on 15 December 1825, Ann Smith married John Horniman (1803-1893 qv), one of the sons of Thomas and Hannah Horniman. (2) There were six children of the marriage, of whom only two, William Henry Horniman (1831-1900) and Frederick John Horniman (1835-1906 qv), survived childhood. John Horniman founded a successful tea-packing business, which his sons took over.

John and Ann Horniman eventually settled at Coombe Hill, Croydon, where they were much given to hospitality, often entertaining travelling ministers. Ann Horniman grew more frail in health, but found great support in her husband. She survived him by seven years, however, living to celebrate her hundredth birthday on 27 March 1900. She weakened in the course of the year and died on 20 July 1900. She was buried in the burial ground adjoining Friends meeting house at Croydon, where her daughter Hannah had been buried in 1854. HORNIMAN, Ann (1800-1900) born Smith

Ann Smith, the daughter of Thomas and Hannah Smith of Witney was born there on 27 March 1800 (1). In December 1825 she married John Horniman (1803-1893, qv) of Reading. They passed nearly 68 years of married life together until John died in 1893. They met many ups and downs and sorrows in their early married life, but these only made their union of heart closer and more tender, John exercising an almost parental care of his wife, who grew more frail in health as the years went on. They were much given to hospitality and often entertained those travelling in the service of the Gospel, among them Isaac Sharp. Ann was a most kind and helpful hostess.

In her later years of physical weakness, she sometimes expressed her feelings of complete dependence and trust in Jesus and she found hymns a great comfort and was able to recall many of them, especially Cowper's:

'God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform'

In February 1900 after her husband's death, her elder son, William Henry died at Torquay where he had lived for nearly 20 years. After having been educated at Sidcot School, he had been engaged with his father and brother in the tea trade until his health gave way and he had in 1869 to retire from business. His distressing illness was a great trial to his parents.

Despite her frailty, Ann Horniman survived her husband by seven years. She greatly enjoyed her 100th birthday on 27 March 1900, but during the summer her strength ebbed away and she died peacefully on 19 July 1900. At her own wish she was buried in the burial ground adjoining the then Meeting House in Croydon, where her only daughter, Hannah, had been buried many years before.

She was a gentle and loving spirit who always spoke kindly of others, trained her children without harshness or scolding, and was continuously helpful to others in word and deed.

HORNIMAN, Henry (1827-1900)

Henry Horniman, third child of Robert (1794-1832 qv) and Hannah (after 1835 Hobbs, born Smith, 1798-1884) Horniman of Reading, was born there on 20 October 1827 (1). He was educated at Croydon School from 1837 to 1841 (2). After leaving school he settled within the compass of Coggeshall MM (3).

At the age of 19 he emigrated to America "where, after twenty-three years of great self-denial and industry, he became a successful merchant in the State of Wisconsin, was a magistrate and member of the School Board, and also held other offices of trust and honour" (4). A certificate of removal was sent by Coggeshall MM to Cincinnati MM in 1849, being returned because he had married contrary to the discipline: a further certificate sent in 1854 was accepted the following year (5). His marriage was to Margaret (1823?-1883 qv) (6): there were at least 3 children (7).

In 1869 Cincinnati MM issued a certificate of removal to Chicago MM (8) but the following year he visited England with his daughter, and his uncle John Horniman (1803-1893 qv) persuaded him to sell out his business in America and return to England (9). By 1874 the family were living at Bletchingley, Surrey, where he was a farmer: they were members of Reigate meeting (10).

"During his residence in America, although he was far away from Friends, he always upheld their views, and he refused to serve in the Civil War. He was from early life an earnest advocate of the Temperance cause". (11)

After his return to England he accompanied his uncle John Horniman on his foreign tours, spending winters with him in Egypt, Rome, Naples, and the south of France (12).

Two years after the death of his first wife he married, secondly, in 1885 Hannah Crews Dann (1850-1886 qv): there were no children (13). He married, thirdly, in 1891 Caroline Agnew (1856?-1912 qv) (14): there was one child (15).

Henry Horniman, who had moved from Bletchingley to Redhill about 1884, left the district about 1888: by 1894 he had settled at Tunbridge Wells (16). His health, which was gradually failing, "in the winter of 1898 quite broke down, and for two years he suffered from great weakness and exhaustion" (17). The family had finally removed to Malvern (18) and though in the spring of 1900 his strength again failed, "up to the last he took a keen interest in the events of the day, and was much distressed over the South African war and the state of affairs in China" (19). He died at his home in Malvern on 20 October 1900, being his 73rd birthday (20).

While Henry Horniman was living in America he was far away from Friends, but he upheld their principles and refused to serve in the Civil War. He was, too, an earnest advocate of temperance.

He had many disappointments and sorrows to bear, and they were borne with Christian fortitude and unwavering faith. In 1895 his health, which had been failing for some years, finally broke down and for two years he suffered from great weakness and exhaustion. Up to the last he took great interest in the events of the day, including the South African war and the happenings in China.

He was an affectionate husband and father, bright and uncomplaining, patient and thoughtful for those around him. A favourite text of him which he had always tried to live up to, was "And what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God". Nearly his last words were, "My only hope is in Christ". He died peacefully at the age of 73 on 20 October 1900.

HORNOR, Benjamin (1667-1740)

Benjamin Hornor was born at Leeds in 1667 of parents who had suffered as Friends, and who brought him up strictly in the Truth.

He was a diligent Attender at Meetings for Worship, and rarely missed Monthly or Quarterly Meetings, often attending Yearly Meeting in London.

His house was always open to travelling Friends, and to the Poor of his neighbourhood he was beneficent and humane.

"He had the general Esteem of those who knew him, of every Denomination; So forcibly does the Principle, by which he walked, recommend itself to all considerate Men, that it would be a Blessing to us, and the Society in general, did all carefully follow so bright an Example."

He died 4.x.[December] 1740, aged nearly seventy three years.

Edward Hornor, the son of Benjamin and Alice Hornor of York, was born there on 3 June 1811(1). He was married in 1842 to Anne Moline, the daughter of Robert Moline(2) and there were three children(3).

For the greater part of his life he was a most sincere though humble Christian. He took an active part in every movement which he felt was calculated to benefit the community and was a good friend to the poor and to all those in need of any kind of distress. His advice was frequently sought by people in all ranks of life and he spared no to understand and help in any situation brought to his notice. He was a county magistrate and also regularly taught in the Sunday school he had built near his own house. He also took an active part in holding religious meetings for the poor. He was a total abstainer, not only in his own household but on public occasions, and was vice-president of the National Temperance League.

He became ill in the spring of 1868 and died at The Howe, Halstead in Essex on 16 June 1868, at the age of fifty seven(4).

HORNOR, Tabitha (1694/5-1746/7) 3

Tabitha Hornor, the daughter of Benjamin and Christiana Hornor of Leeds, was born on 23 xii.[February] 1694/5. After receiving a good education she began her work in the Ministry about 1722, travelling through most parts of England, and also in Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

"Her Ministry was well received, being in the Demonstration of the Power and Spirit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and often had its intended Effect: The Gainsayers were reproved, the Careless and Negligent admonished, the Babes replenished, and the Weak confirmed: for indeed the Spirit of the Lord was renewedly upon her, and she was graciously anointed to preach the Gospel to the Poor."

She died 16.xii.1746 [i.e., February 1746/7] and was interred in Friends Burying Ground, Leadow-lane, Leeds, aged about fifty two years, a Minister about twenty four years.

1706(?) he was returning from a religious visit to Holland in a little lugger or fishing boat which was pursued by French privateers. The wind sank. W.H. said, "have you no oars?" Receiving an affirmative answer, he said "Now is the time to use them." And so they did, and drew away from the enemy; and a fresh wind springing up, they made port safely, landing at Harwich.

He was very industrious to hold meetings in places where none had been, or not for some years past.

"He was a diligent attender of Meetings, and his Ministry was clear, sound and edifying; not consisting in a Multitude of Words, especially in his latter Years, the chief Tendency being rather to turn People to the Gift of Grace in their own Hearts, that in the Ability thereof they might labour for themselves, to witness the experimental work of Sanctification, and not settle in a bare form and Profession of Religion, or have their Dependance upon Instruments."

HORSLEY, John (1822-1901)

John Horsley was born near Thorton-le-Dale in the moorland district of Yorkshire in 1822. He was a shoemaker by trade, and though for a few years a member of Swarthmoor Meeting, his association with Friends was principally at York.

He had a very rough upbringing, at one time being turned out of his father's house into the snow on the moors for persisting in attending a nearby Friends Meeting. His early hardships left him with a certain ruggedness and masterfulness of temperament, which mellowed in later years when his patience in time of trial, his humility and his gratitude for kindesses done him, won him warm regard and sincere respect from all who knew him well.

Limited in education and speaking with the accent of the Dales, he ministered valuably in the meetings at Swarthmore and at York. His ministry was marked by earnestness and quaint directness of application, and he was very amenable to the advice of sympathetic elders on the question of the great length at which he spoke. This advice was given to him in an understanding and aceeptable form: 'Thou knows, John, thou'rt very fond of trees, and if thou wants more fruit on a tree, thou hast to lop off the branches; and so we must bear in mind in our speaking not to have too many branches'. The force of the homely illustration appealed to him and he would come up to the Friend who said this, and say to him, 'Nah, I lopped off t' branches this time'.

Often his ministry was directed to the scholars from the York schools who attended his meeting there, and his ministry, as also his work impressed the staff of the schools by its honesty and sincerity. His homely illustrations were telling, and no one could forget his saying, 'You can't hinder the crows flying over your head, you can help them building in your hair'.

His last illness was sudden and brief, but he was ready - 'packed oop' - and he died at the age of 78 on 25 July 1901.

HORSNAILL, Alfred Edmund (1856-1936)

Alfred Edmund Horsnaill, son of William Clevely & Louisa Horsnaill, was born 28 September 1856

In 1881 he married Millicent Headley, daughter of Henry & Maria Headley of Ashford and Canterbury, but she died in the following year leaving an infant son Headley. Eight years later he married her sister Gertrude Mary, and of this marriage there were four children. Their home radiated love, tenderness and consecration.

His early activities were centred round Adult School and Mission Work, Temperance, work for blind and crippled, and with the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children. He was at one time President of the Friends Tract Association.

During the war years he was fearless in stating his Quaker principles in the Rochester Town Council. He shared fully the pacifist outlook of Conscientious Objectors and became Chaplain to those in Maidstone Gaol. Many outside the Society testify to the beauty of his life and influence and unselfish service.

Alfred Horsnaill's gift for the ministry was early recognised and he was recorded a Minister. He spoke with utmost simplicity and directness, interpreting the spirit of God which permeated his whole life.

He died 11 June 1936

Millicent Horsnaill died in childbirth in 1882(2), leaving a son(3). In 1890 Alfred married her sister Gertrude May (1864-1948 qv); the marriage was not recorded by the Society, probably because it was within the degrees of prohibited relationships and did not take place according to the Society's usage(4). There were four children(5). No action was apparently taken, as the family appear as members of Rochester Monthly Meeting in 1901; Alfred Edmund Horsnaill was an elder and was also Clerk to the Meeting(6).

His family were all delicate and six brothers and sisters died before him. During his father's long illness the management of the business devolved entirely upon him and he fulfilled his duties faithfully and conscientiously. The first symptoms of his own ill health appeared in 1863.

He spent two winters at Torquay in an effort to restore his health and was then advised to try a voyage to Australia. The long sea voyage and the more favourable climate were for a time of much benefit to him, although he still continued much of an invalid. He spent the summer of 1867 in England, returning to Australia in the autumn, where he died on 16 February 1872 at the age of thirty one. He was buried near the mouth of the river Mooloolah.

She was educated at The Mount School, York, from 1878 to 1880(2) and in 1890 married Alfred Edmund Horsnaill (1856-1936 qv)(3), formerly the husband of her sister Millicent, who died in childbirth in 1882(4); the marriage was not recorded and was probably not according to the usages of the Society. There were four children(5).

Gertrude May Horsnaill had a happy disposition. She was a true home maker and from the time of their marriage she and her husband were liberal in their hospitality, first at their house in Canterbury and later at Meopham and Rochester, to which they moved about 1914(6). Her outlook on life, based on a deep and simple faith, made her look always for the best inothers and thus helped to call it into being. She had great physical energy and a zest for living and was a true helpmeet to her husband in all his varied service and activities.

She was also a faithful servant of the Society and was a member of the Meeting for Sufferings from 1916 to 1921, of the Home Service Committee and of the Friends Service Council from 1930 to 1932/3(7).

She died at Rochester on 1 March 1948(8), at the age of eighty three.

He became a miller at Bulford Mill, Cressing in Essex(2) and was married in 1856 to Eliza Catchpool (1830-1929 qv) of Bocking in Essex(3); there were eight children(4).

He was of an earnest, practical turn of mind, always willing and anxious to be useful to those around him. He took a keen interest in the cause of temperance, peace and kindred subjects, frequently presiding at meetings for their advancement. For several years he was chairman of the Braintree School Board.

He was much attached to the Society of Friends and maintained his convictions with firmness, although he was careful not to give offence to those who differed from him. But although he earnestly sought the love of God, his religion brought him little joy; he was more given to self-condemnation than to trust in the Lord's forgiveness. He seldom started the day without a quiet period of retirement and prayer and often prayed during the morning and evening family readings.

His last illness was very painful, but he endured it with calmness and patience. Henry Horsnaill of Braintree in Essex died on 2 December 1881, at the age of fifty three(5).

Richard Horsnaill, the son of William and Elizabeth Horsnaill of Dover, was born there on 6 September 1800.(1) His health was poor for many years, but in spite of the suffering he had to endure he took a deep interest in the Society and his religious life was active and fruitful. He was particularly interested in the welfare of the young and his efforts on their behalf gained him their respect and good will. He was also concerned for the crews of the British and foreign ships using the port of Dover and for many years supplied them with Bibles and religious tracts; his manner was so kind and unassuming that he was almost universally well received. The means by which he gained his livelihood are not at present (1975) traced, but he is known to have refused business where his clients required a display of taste which he thought extravagant.

He was probably the brother of Catherine (1806-1878 qv), who married George William Alexander (1802-1890 qv).

He died apparently unmarried(2) at Dover on 23 July 1850, aged forty nine.

HORSNAILL, William Cleverly (1812-1861)

William Cleverly Horsnaill, the son of Robert Horsnaill and his wife Sarah (born Cleverly, 1768-1829 qv) of Strood in Kent, was born there on 30 January 1812(1). He was a corn dealer and seedsman(2) and was married in 1836 to Louisa Horsnaill of Strood(3); there were eight children(4).

He was highly regarded by all who knew him and was active in promoting charities for the relief of the poor and afflicted, but he had such a high standard of Christian behaviour and such a deep sense of his own shortcomings that he scarcely felt himself fit to be a servant of the church. If he had not been so concerned with the depressing sense of his own unworthiness it is possible that he might have been a more useful member of the Society, but he felt that eternal values were of supreme importance.

He died at Rochester on 5 August 1861, at the age of forty nine(5).
