William Impey, the son of Robert Impey (1660?-1746/7 or 1747/8 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Olney, fl 1689-1706 qv) of Barton in the Clay in Bedfordshire, was born there on 10.viii.[October] 1693(1).

He was a brazier of Saffron Walden in Essex(2) and was married in 1721 to Ann Pettitt (1698/9 or 1699/1700-1777 qv) of Little Walden in Essex(3); there were six children(4).

He was a faithful Friend, solicitous for the growth of the Society and for the Truth, one who loved and encouraged the good in all and who shared universal love and charity, caring for the widow, the fatherless and those in distress. Humility was shown in all his actions and he was ready to receive as well as to give advice. He was a reconciler and knew well the fatal effect of "discord among brethren." As an elder he discharged his duties devotedly and he was "zealous for the promotion of good order." He was a good and beloved husband and father, friend and neighbour and his home was open to others.

He was "concerned in the ministry" for more than twenty years and his ministry was characterised by love, humility and gentleness. He travelled cheerfully to Ireland, Scotland and to almost every county in England and when at home was frequently engaged in public service. His last journey, during which he was afflicted with illness but persisted in carrying out his duties, was to the city of London.

William Impey of Saffron Walden died peacefully on 24 September 1759, at the age of sixty six and was buried in the Friends Burial Ground at Saffron Walden(5).

IMEY, William (1821-1901)

William Impey, the son of William Impey (1790-1840 qv) and his first wife Mary (born Levitt, 1790-1831 qv) of Parls Colne in Essex, was born there on 25 October 1821(1).

He became a farmer at Broomfield near Chelmsford in Essex(2) and was twice married. He married firstly in 1844 Elizabeth Marriage (1820-1854 qv) of Springfield in Essex(3) and there were six children(4). He married secondly in 1856 Mary Dix (1830-1917 qv) of Haverhill in Suffolk(5) and there were four children(6).

He filled the office of elder and was a regular attender at all meetings. His urbanity and his willingness to take any duty or office which would serve the meeting were greatly valued. He was a genial and kindly man who was loved and respected by both old and young. He did not often speak in the ministry, but his upright and consistent life was an object lesson perhaps more powerful than any sermon. Although he was a busy man, he found time to visit the sick and his help and sympathy were always readily available.

William Impey of Broomfield died on 27 June 1901, at the age of seventy nine(7).

William White Impey, the son of Frederic Impey (1847-1920 qv) and his wife Eleanor (born Clark, 1846-1915 qv) of Longbridge, King's Norton near Birmingham, was born there on 20 August 1883(1). He was educated at Bootham School, York, from 1895 to 1899, where he achieved fame as the owner of some boiling breast bones, which were left to simmer and forgotten and so were, according to tradition, the origin of the great fire at Bootham in 1899.

He went on to Birmingham University from 1903 to 1904, where he studied engineering. He played first eleven football for the university and for Bootham.

He was married in 1910 to Ellen Hale(2) and there were two children(3). His wife never became a member of the Society of Friends(4).

He was a farmer and was on the executive committee of the Worcestershire National Farmers Union and was also a member of the Redditch Urban District Council.

William White Impey of Norgrove Court Farm, Redditch, died as the result of an accident on 11 February 1935, at the age of fifty two(5).

INGRAM
~~FELL~~, Susanna (1650?- ) born Fell

Susanna Fell was the sixth daughter of Thomas and Margaret Fell, of Swarthmoor. In 1691, she became the second wife of William Ingram of the parish of St Margaret, New Fish Street, London. In 1698, Susanna Ingram presented, in person, an address to King William III, written by her mother. The address is printed in full in Maria Webb's Fells, 1865, (p.394; see Jnl. F.H.S. vi. 81). William Ingram 'appears to have been a man of good education, excellent understanding and devoted piety' (Fells, p.379). He died in 1706, aged about sixty-six years. He left a legacy to Peel Monthly Meeting, in London (Minutes of Peel MM, MS in Friends House). The date of the death of Susanna is not known, but it is said that she survived her husband. She left no children, but there are descendants among Friends today, of William Ingram through his first marriage.

INGRAM, William (1639-1706)

William Ingram was a citizen and tallow-chandler of Fenchurch Street. In 1676, when the Meeting for Sufferings was set up, he was appointed to act on behalf of Hertfordshire Friends his country correspondent being Henry Stout. (179.2). In vol.ii p.452 it is stated that Ingram had descendants through his first marriage - we can now give more information. Ingram's first wife was Susanna Robins (1648-1688), daughter of Jasper Robins, of Godmanchester. Joseph Ingram (1686- ) son of William and Susanna (Robins) Ingram, married in 1710, Mary Bellers (1689?-1751), elder daughter of John Bellers, and inherited Coln St Alwyns (Jnl FHS xii. 103; Second Period, p.572). He was a trustee of Yoakley's Charity, 1731. Frances, daughter of Joseph of Cheapside, married in 1737, at the Bull and Mouth, Joseph Vandewall (Jnl FHS xiii.27). Hester Ingram (1674- ) married in 1697, John Ayre (1664-1713) a quo Vaux family (information from George Vaux, Junr., of Philadelphia, Pa., 1924).

INNES, Kathleen Elizabeth (1883-1967) born Royds 2

Kathleen Innes was born on 15 January 1883, the daughter of a Reading doctor. She took a B.A. Honours Degree at London University, winning both the Chancellor's Diploma in Literature for her University Extension work, and two prizes for literary achievement. Subsequently she became an LCC lecturer, and wrote Coleridge and his poetry, Mrs Browning and her poetry and The Bible as Literature.

The experiences of the 1914-18 war led her into politics and peace work. In 1915, while in Salonica serving with a unit of the Scottish Women's Hospital, she accompanied a flood of refugees to Corsica, receiving for this service the Order of St Sava. In Corsica she met her future husband, George Innes, who shared with her a keen interest in the League of Nations. She wrote several books for young people about the League and in 1936 the Hogarth Press published her Story of the League of Nations for a wider public.

Before the end of the war she had become secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and finally became its Vice-President. She joined Friends in the middle 1920s, and worked for the Friends Peace Committee for a time before becoming its secretary. She was in this post from 1926 to 1936.

In 1938 George and Kathleen Innes retired to St Mary Bourne where they worked hard to enrich the life of the village. Kathleen became President of the local Women's Institute, and the first woman Chairman of the Parish Council. Her love of the country inspired her to write Life in a Hampshire Village and, annually, Village Records.

Her many activities, however, did not prevent her from being able to stop and be calm, from listening to and helping others. She helped greatly to sustain the life of her small meeting at Andover, and was an Elder for some years. Her breadth of vision and depth of compassion enriched all who knew her.

She died on 27 March 1967, aged 84.

IRVING, Lydia ~~189~~ (1797-1893)

Lydia Irving was born at Wellbury (Yorkshire) on 15 May 1797, the eldest daughter of John and Hannah Irving (1). She was brought up by her grandparents until the death of the latter, when she returned to her parents' home.

Soon after settling in London she began to help Elizabeth Fry in her prison work, taking an active part in forming the "British Ladies' Society for the Reformation of Female Prisoners". Later, following the death of Elizabeth Fry, she was an important member of the Elizabeth Fry Refuge Committee - her upbringing with her ~~grandparents~~ (who were both strict Friends) and her spiritual character "eminently fitting her" for this work. She was also an ~~Overseer~~ for many years at the Ratcliffe & Barking Monthly Meeting and later at Devonshire House.

She lived towards the end of her life at Stoke Newington with her devoted niece Louisa Dodson, maintaining her strict adherence to the principles and dress of the Society of Friends to the end. For the last few years of her life she was almost blind and physically unable to take an active part in her prison and other charitable work, but her intellect and memory remained perfectly clear. Her final illness commenced on 18 November 1892, but it was not until 22 February 1893 that she died, at the advanced age of 95.

Margaret Irwin was the second daughter of Richard and Rachel Irwin of Manchester, where she was born on 20 October 1856 (1). She went to Ackworth and The Mount Schools, and continued her studies under Theodore Neild, Principal of the small Hall of Residence which preceded Dalton Hall. Later she attended the School of Art and studied painting, finding in this great joy and fulfilment. At Manchester Meeting she was active in Sunday School and temperance work, and later became Superintendent of the Physical Education department of the British Women's Temperance Association. Her chief work was done in her capacity of President of the Manchester Women's Peace Association, to which she devoted unstinting energy. She arranged public meetings and herself went to speak to any local organisation which was willing to receive her, though she was of a nervous temperament, and speaking did not come easily to her. Once, when a treaty of arbitration with America was under consideration, she collected signatures from 65 people including a number of eminent Church of England clergy.

On November 13 1905 she gave a lantern lecture on William Penn at Radnor Street Women's Christian Temperance Association, and repeated it at Leigh on January 24 1906.

At one period of her life she had to nurse both her parents, and after their death she herself had a nervous breakdown and decided to go with her sister on a visit to relatives in America. The three months they spent there were a rich experience and resulted in the formation of lasting friendships with some American Friends.

In 1906 she and her sister removed to Shattock Hall, between Cockermouth and Lorton; and here Margaret Irwin gave herself up to the enjoyment of country life and gardening. She took a lively interest in the activities of the neighbourhood, and served as a Manager of the local Elementary School.

She was a regular attender at Cumberland Quarterly Meeting and assisted in holding Meetings at Thornyland and Sikeside, places closely associated with her father's boyhood. In 1906 she addressed the Women's Yearly Meeting on "The cultivation of spiritual gifts". She also wrote papers on the history of local Quakerism. She was a most conscientious Elder, encouraging the gift of ministry in others, and her own ministry, especially to children, was most effective.

The coming of war in 1914 was a great blow to her for she had worked so hard in the cause of peace. She and her sister left Shattock and moved to Brigham; but in 1917 her health failed, and in November she underwent a serious operation in Edinburgh. She never recovered from this and lingered on in great weakness until February 1918. She died on 10 February, aged 61, and was buried at Pardshaw Hall.

IRWIN, Wilfred (1858-1928)

Wilfred Irwin, the son of Richard Irwin (1823?-1902 qv) and his wife Rachel (born Watson, 1822-1902 qv) of Cheetham, Manchester, was born there on 8 September 1858(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1868 to 1871, during a bad period in the history of the school and had to leave prematurely at the age of thirteen due to a serious illness, caused by the spartan conditions then existing. This experience did not prejudice him against the school, but made him rather determine to do what he could to improve conditions for future scholars and he served for many years on the school committee and the Art School. He had a continued interest in education and taught at the Adult School.

He was well known in Cumberland, both as a business man and as a Friend, serving the Society as an elder. He was universally looked up to, his employees appreciated his kindness and conscientious justice and he had a reputation for great charm as a Christian gentleman. He made two notable contributions in his early years to the science behind the gas industry; he discovered a method of extracting benzol from coal gas by washing with oil and he also worked out a cheaper method for extracting carbolic and cresylic acids from coal tar by using carbonic acid. He was a Fellow of the Chemical Society and of the Society of Chemical Industry. His researches on the saltiness of rivers and rain were published in the Journals of the Royal Geographical Society, of which he was also a Fellow.

He began the chemical industry in the Cumberland coalfield by utilising in his works at Flimby and Maryport the bye-products of the coke ovens for making sulphuric acid and other things and his personality so impressed the coal owners that he obtained his raw materials at a lower price than others offered. His connection with fuel questions and his humanity made him a supporter of smoke abatement schemes and if he had had an entirely free hand he would have introduced co-partnership and housing schemes.

He was always on the look out for occasions for generosity, sometimes publicly as in his gift to the Art School at Ackworth, but far more often his help was private and little known. He was married in 1906, rather late in life, to Mary Louisa West (1880-1926 qv) of Swinton(2) and it was delightful to see how marriage renewed his youth and changed his retiring ways. There was one adopted daughter, Kathleen, and their home at Derwent Lodge, Cockermouth was a charming and hospitable place under Mary Irwin's control. After her death he established a scholarship at Ackworth in her memory.

Mary Irwin was killed in a car accident in 1926, which may have weakened his heart. While in Palestine doing research into the saltiness

IRWIN, William (1815?-1878)

William Irwin, the son of Benjamin Irwin, was born at Wigton in Cumberland about the year 1815(1). He belonged to a congregation of Independents, but became interested in the Society through reading the works of early Friends. He began to attend Friends' meetings, although he maintained a lifelong close friendship with the Independent minister. He joined the Society about 1837, when he was twenty two.

Through the remainder of his life he was conspicuous for his straightforward and unflinching zeal in the faithful discharge of the precious trust he believed had been committed to him and this frequently led him into conflict with members of the Society whom he believed to fall short of the profession they made, causing him much sorrow. By profession he was a printer and he maintained in his business the same strictness of principle, refusing to execute orders which he felt would compromise his testimony as a Friend.

He was married in 1842 to Deborah Sayce (1810-1844 qv) of Stockport(2) and there was one child(3). After his wife's early death he married in 1849 Elizabeth Lydia Burtt (1817-1878 qv) of London(4), but the marriage was apparently childless(5).

On 5 May 1878 he left his home at Sale to attend Liverpool Meeting, but while walking home from the station in the evening he suddenly collapsed and died, at the age of sixty three(6).

ISAACHSEN, Annie Benbow (1896-1980) born Pudney

Annie B. Pudney, daughter of Robert Leaper ( ) and Elizabeth Jane (born Matthews ) Pudney, was born at Colyton, New Zealand, on 4 June 1896 (1). Her parents had emigrated to New Zealand shortly after their marriage, but returned to England early in the century so that their children might attend Quaker schools. She was educated at Sidcot 1907-1909 (2).

She then returned to New Zealand. She married on 8 December 1931 Harold Eivind Isaachsen (3): there were three children (4). Their home at Bamboo Farm, on the outskirts of Auckland, was a centre of hospitality to many overseas Friends. Annie Isaachsen had a keen interest in Quaker history and in family connections. She was an indefatigable correspondent, particularly with isolated Friends or those travelling. Her ministry was deeply valued.

She later moved into Auckland itself and remained enthusiastic to the end of her life, despite grave physical disabilities.

Annie Isaachsen died in hospital in Auckland on 21 August 1980, aged 84 years.

travelled extensively in nearby prefectures as a Bible colporteur, tract distributor and interdenominational rural evangelist. This was his life for several years.

He is best known for his writing of the whole Bible, Old and New Testaments, in tiny Chinese and Japanese characters (so small that a magnifying glass was always required in writing them) on one large scroll about 3 by 6 ft.
in size. In order to perform this service he practiced 1000 times the writing of the Chinese "Thousand Character" classic.

JACKSON, Benjamin H. (1870-1918)

Benjamin H. Jackson was born at Islington, London in 1870 and joined the Society of Friends in 1891. For some years he was one of a group of young Friends at Holloway and his enthusiasm did much for the meeting.

He was interested in Foreign Missionary service, being specially concerned for China and in 1893 he entered Chester House to prepare for work there. On account of the state of health of Florence Ellwood to whom he was engaged to be married, the FFMA Board decided in 1894 that it could not accept him as a missionary, but after a period of successful work at Witney in connection with the Home Mission Committee, he and his wife renewed their offer for service in 1900 and were accepted. They sailed for China for the first time in 1901.

They worked in the two counties of Tungliang and Tachoo, being the only Protestant missionaries there. Benjamin Jackson trained at Livingstone College for medical work and afterwards did much work in this field which earned him the gratitude of hundreds of Chinese.

Benjamin H. Jackson died on 4 October 1918 when the Japanese ship ss 'Hirano Maru' was torpedoed off the Irish coast.

JACKSON, Eliza (1847-1900) born Wood

Eliza Wood, the daughter of John and Jane Wood, was born at Highflatts near Huddersfield on 7 April 1847(1). In 1856 she accompanied her elder sister to Ackworth School, where she spent five and a half years. She made many friendships at school and began to develop the firmness of disposition and unselfishness which marked her character in later life. On leaving school she remained at home for some years, helping her mother; in addition she was a devoted worker in the Highflatts Sunday School and Band of Hope.

She was married in 1876 to Jonathan Jackson (1837-1907 qv), a cotton spinner of Vale House, Garstang in Lancashire and there were two children, one of whom died in infancy(2). Thirteen years later she and her husband and son moved to Bishop Auckland and there she became president of the British Women's Temperance Association and was an active member of the District Nursing Committee.

Her only son died in 1899 at the age of eighteen and she never recovered from the shock. Eliza Jackson of Bishop Auckland died on 8 January 1900, at the age of fifty two(3).

JACKSON, Helen Maria (Fiske) Hunt, 1830-1885

Poet; author; reformer.

b. 15 Oct. 1830, Amherst, Mass., dau. Prof. Nathan Welby Fiske and w. Deborah (Vinal).

Ed.: Ipswich Female Academy, Mass.; Spingler Institute, N.Y.C.

m. 28 Oct. 1852, to Edward Bissell Hunt (U.S. Army career officer; d. 1863 when submarine weapon of his invention exploded during experiment). Ch.: Murray (d. 1854, age 11 mos., of a brain tumor); Warren Horsford (d. 1865, age about eight yrs., of diphteria). m., 2d., 22 Oct. 1875 (possibly 28 Oct.), to William Sharpless Jackson (Qu. banker and financier in Denver, Col.; b. 16 Jan. 1836, s. Caleb Sharpless Jackson and w. Mary Ann [Gause]; d. ), in Qu. ceremony. No issue.

Grief after death of first husband and son caused H.J. to turn to writing: first poem pub. 1865, first prose sketch in 1866. 1868-70, traveled in Europe. Winter of 1873-74, spent in Colorado Springs, Col. for health; here H.J. met her 2d. husband, and resided after her marriage. Life in the West aroused her sympathies for Indian's plight;<sup>it's</sup> said she "felt a Quakerly 'concern' to fight for their cause." 1882, appointed a special Indian Commissioner to investigate problem; 1883, filed a report which was ignored; 1884, pub. most famous work, Ramona, in hopes it would do for Indian what H.B. Stowe's bk.
did for the Negro slave.

Jackson, James, 1637 -
JACKSON, James (1637?- )
of Nottinghamshire and London.

James Jackson was a parish priest and later an Independent minister of Nottinghamshire. In 1668, apparently, he was still in this latter position, in which case Fox's date for his conviction is incorrect. In 1674 he wrote The Strong Man Armed, Cast Out, and his Goods spoiled, being a True Convert's Testimony of the Power of the Lord. A rejoinder by Ralph Austen, The Strong Man Armed not Cast Out, 1676, brought Jackson out again with The Malice of the Rebellious Husbandman, 1676. A postscript, dated 1697, to Jackson's Friends Enquirer's Doubts and Objections Answered, 1698, referring to the writer's 'sinful Prevarications and publick Revolt' makes it evident that something had gone wrong with him, but even this recantation was followed ten years later by 'An Appeal to County Friends at this General Meeting... against the City Quakers unchristian Carriage'.

From 1701 to 1708 Jackson was constantly in collision with the Morning Meeting (the committee of Friends who acted as super-visors of the Quaker press), which Meeting declined to print several of his MSS. He is cautioned to be 'careful considering his former fall' (Minutes, iii. 40, anno 1701, MS in Friends House), and, finally, Friends of this Meeting say 'They Esteem not James Jackson nor his paper worth their Notice, he being denied by Friends' (ibid. p.308, anno 1708, and letter of Henry Pickworth of the same year, in Friends House). In 1708 Jackson wrote a long letter to some Friends in Nottingham (preserved in Nottingham Meeting House), expressive of gratitude to God for the restoration of his eyesight, he being then above seventy years old.

JACKSON, John (1793-1875)

John Jackson, the son of Esther Jackson junior of Crossdale Beck in the parish of Sedbergh in Yorkshire, was born there on 4 December 1793(1). He opened a school at Warrington in Lancashire in 1821, which he conducted for about thirty years and was well known as a mathematician and a solver of abstruse calculations.

He was married in 1846 to Mary Handley of Rowanstonedale* in Westmorland(2), but the marriage was apparently childless(3). About 1851 he retired to a life of quiet repose, with the affectionate regard and esteem of his many pupils and friends. The Warrington Advertiser, in announcing his death, spoke of him as "kindly-hearted, simple-minded and guileless."

John Jackson of Penketh died on 27 September 1875, at the age of eighty one(4).

JACKSON, John Fletcher (1860-1930) 2

J. Fletcher Jackson was the eldest of the family of six sons and a daughter of Thomas and Ann F. Jackson, who left England in 1878 in a sailing vessel for the three months voyage to New Zealand.

Their pioneer life in North Auckland, with Maori and European neighbours long distances apart, proved a valuable experience in early life for Fletcher Jackson who was enabled to give understanding and practical advice to many new Colonists.

In 1905 he married E.L. Farrand. His bright, happy family of sons and daughters owe much to the Christian influence of their wise and loving father.

He was the devoted comrade and assistant to his sister Bertha Harle, author of The History of Friends in New Zealand.

From 1904-1912 he was Clerk of Auckland Monthly Meeting. He will be remembered as the travelling companion of his mother when, in 1888 and 1889 she visited, under concern almost all the isolated Friends in Australia and Tasmania. Often at great cost to himself he joyfully undertook similar service of visitation in North and South Islands of New Zealand.

He died suddenly in the midst of home occupations it was his pleasure to share.

JACKSON, Joseph (1697?-1776)

Joseph Jackson was born about the year 1697.(1) Nothing is at present (1975) known of his antecedents and he emerges at the age of about forty three as a convinced Friend. He was diligent and faithful and about 1746 he received a gift in the ministry, in which he was zealous in the exercise and in the promotion of the cause of Truth. About ten years later, in 1756, he retired from business in order to have more time to give to the service of the Society. "He visited at different times most of the Religious Meetings of Friends in Great Britain. This concern remained with him until the Summer of 1775 when returning home, he was some little time after seized with an Illness, which continued with him until his end."

There is no record that he married(2) or had children(3) while a member of the Society, but he may well have done so before his conviction.

He died on 16 December 1776(4), aged about seventy nine and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Gildersome, a minister for about thirty years.

Leonard Labrey Jackson, the youngest son of James Jackson (1826-1903 qv) and his wife Martha Waddington (born Labrey, 1830-1910 qv) of Garstang in Lancashire, was born there on 15 October 1866(1). He was educated at Bootham School, York from 1881 to 1882 and at Bolton Technical School, where he became a Prizeman in carpentry and joinery. He gained his City and Guilds certificate in 1895, his Professional Associate Surveyors' Examination also in 1895 and the Associate Members Sanitary Institute Examination in 1896.

He settled at 184 Kidmore Road, Caversham in Oxfordshire and became a land surveyor. In 1900 he married Caroline Wilkinson (1871?-1952 qv), not then in membership with the Society(2) and there was one child, Labrey Hall Jackson, born in 1907, whose birth was not recorded by the Society(3).

Among Leonard Jackson's services to the Society was the design of the new Meeting House at Maidenhead. It was re-opened for regular use on 14 September 1935, when Reading Monthly Meeting was held there for the first time since the old meeting house had become almost derelict. Leonard Jackson's new meeting house was a pleasant, cheerful place, which accommodated about fifty people(4). His hobbies were natural history and gardening.

Leonard Labrey Jackson of Caversham died on 9 September 1938, at the age of seventy one(5).

JACKSON, Maria (1794?-1874) born Pasco

Maria Pasco, the youngest of the four children of John and Louisa Ann Pasco of Deptford, was born about the year 1794(1). She was a thoughtful child, early drawn to an awareness of religion; her father, to whom she was deeply attached, died when she was only four years old and it was a source of great anxiety to the little girl to be assured that he was happy. It was her great good fortune to have in her mother a woman of superior intelligence, kind and unselfish, whose good influence Maria treasured throughout her life.

While she was still quite young she went to live with a Friend's family as housemaid, but her stay was short; her mother became ill and Maria had to return home to look after her. Later on Maria entered the service of some Friends in York as a shop assistant and after her work was finished she often helped to look after the children. She had a great interest in children and one of her proteges was a little, half-starved orphan boy of about six years old, to whom she gave clothes and money; but finding that he was no better off for her help and that he had been sent out to beg by the woman who looked after him, she had him removed to more kindly care and with the help of her brother and a few friends, saw to his support and education.

She spent two years at Ackworth School as matron in the boys' department and then went to Dublin, where with her brother Nathaniel Pasco she helped to superintend the Retreat for the Insane at Bloomfield. Her time there was brought to an end about 1843 by her marriage to Robert Jackson (1790?-1848 qv), a butcher of York and a widower with six children(2), the two youngest of whom, a boy and a girl, particularly needed the loving care their stepmother gave them. Her own marriage was apparently childless(3).

Her married life lasted only five years, for her husband died in 1848. After his death she moved for a time to Manchester, and later moved to Bristol, where she opened a small shop with her brother Nathaniel. She carried on the business for a while after Nathaniel died, but his death and the strain of nursing him proved too much for her strength and brought on an attack of paralysis. The little shop had to be given up and she was removed to the Friends' Alms House in Bristol. But she was extremely independent and when she recovered she astonished all her friends and relations by taking on the care of an elderly invalid living at Hoddesden; she was then about sixty five. The invalid died after about three years, but Maria Jackson settled at Hoddesden and her house there was a source of great pleasure to her for the remaining twelve years of her life.

She had always been kind to those in need and these were frequent visitors, but her counsel and sympathy were sought by many and she was often able to give good advice. She had a firm belief in the efficacy of prayer and believed that in trouble a sense of the divine might be brought nearer. Towards the end of her life she was cared for by her niece and died very peacefully at Laurel Cottage, Hoddesdon on 9 March 1874 at the age of eighty(4).

She possessed a powerful mind and a very strong will and was naturally of a lively temperament and independent spirit. At one time she was much given to speculative reasoning, which led her to doubt the divinity of Jesus, but after a serious illness she admitted that she had received fresh light on her doubts and anxieties and from this point there was a marked change in her life and conversation.

Her husband was not successful in business and his failures and the trials of bringing up a large family on insufficient means caused her some humiliation. * She was an affectionate and devoted mother and her deep religious feeling and cheerful resignation to the will of God were chiefly shown in her later letters to her children. JACKSON, Richard (1783-1846)

Richard Jackson, the son of Richard Jackson ( - ) and his wife Mary (born ) of Nether Wyresdale in the parish of Garstang in Lancashire, was born there on 29 September 1783(1). His father was a yeoman and Richard's education was very limited, as he was only able to attend school during the winter months.

He became a yeoman at Spout House in Lower Wyresdale(2) and was twice married. He married firstly in 1817 Elizabeth Labrey (1788-1818 qv) of Rootenbrook in Quernmore in Lancashire(3), but the marriage was childless(4). He married secondly in 1820 Mary Wilcockson (1779-1854 qv) of Preston in Lancashire(5), but this marriage was also childless(6).

In 1828 he grew tired of attending the distant Wyresdale Meeting and built a meeting house behind his home(7). His brothers helped him and a live meeting grew up within the compass of Lancaster Monthly Meeting; it was still in existence in 1939(8). He was recorded a minister in July 1836, when he was fifty three.

Richard Jackson of Calder House, Garstang, died on 2 December 1846, at the age of sixty four(9), a minister for ten years. He was buried at Calder Bridge.

JACKSON, Richard (1783-1846)

Richard Jackson, the son of Richard and Mary Jackson of Nether Wyresdale in the parish of Garstang in Lancashire, was born there on 29 September 1783(1). His father was a yeoman and Richard's education was very limited, as he was only able to attend school during the winter months.

He became a farmer(2) and was married in 1817 to Elizabeth Labrey (1788- qv), the daughter of William Labrey (1757-1825 qv) of Rooton-brook in Quernmore, Lancashire(3), but the marriage was apparently childless(4). In 1828 he grew tired of attending the distant Wyresdale Meeting and built a charming meeting house behind his home. His brothers helped him and a live meeting grew up, joined to Lancaster Monthly Meeting and was still in existence in 1939(5). He was recorded a minister in July 1836, when he was fifty three.

Richard Jackson of Calder House, Garstang died on 2 December 1846, at the age of sixty four(6), a minister for ten years. He was buried at Calder Bridge.

JACKSON, Robert (1823-1872)

Robert Jackson, the son of John and Phebe Jackson of Liverpool, was born there on 12 April 1823(1). He was married in 1855 to Rachel King(2), but the marriage was apparently childless(3).

He began his career as a chemist near Rochdale(4), but perhaps because of his weak and uncertain health he turned to farming(5). He was a ministering elder of his meeting, his words being always welcome, and there was much in his life which promised a deep and enlarged religious experience. But Robert Jackson of Waterend, Loweswater, died on 2 August 1872 at the age of forty nine(6), with his early promise still largely unfulfilled.

JACKSON, Sarah (1675-1750/1)

Sarah Jackson, the daughter of Thomas Jackson of Burton in Kendale, Westmorland, was born there on 6.i.i.(April)1675.(1) Her parents professed with Friends and she received a religious education. From her youth she was of a sober and orderly conversation, but she did not appear in the ministry until she was about forty six. She visited most of the meetings of Friends in England and Wales and also in Scotland and Ireland, many of them repeatedly, and her ministry was acceptable and of good service to the Society.

She died at the house of Robert and Grace Chambers in Sedgwick on 5.xii.1750 (i.e. February 1750/1) and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Yeuland.

JACKSON, Sarah (1809-1876) formerly Ingle, born Smith

Sarah Smith, the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Smith of Sheffield in Yorkshire, was born there on 1 May 1809(1). When she was about seventeen years old she was placed as an assistant in a linen draper's shop in Sheffield, where she remained for about twelve years. Her services were greatly valued by her employers and their daughter became her close friend.

She had a sensitive disposition and often used to reconcile the misunderstandings arising between the young women employed in the business; she was also of a thoughtful and religious turn of mind and occasionally offered welcome counsel and advice. Her character was quiet and unassuming, she was guarded in conversation and upright in her conduct and was an elder of her meeting. On leaving her situation she joined a younger sister in business on their own account, which they carried on successfully for some years.

She was married in 1852 to Joshua Ingle (1782-1862 qv) of Sheffield(2), a happy marriage which lasted for nearly ten years, but was apparently childless(3). After her husband's death in 1862 she was married in 1863 to William Jackson (1788- qv) of Ipswich(4).

For the last two years of her life she was confined to her home a great deal by ill health. She spent the winter of 1875 and some part of 1876 in London, under the care of an eminent surgeon and suffered much pain and discomfort, which she bore with exemplary and uncomplaining patience.

Sarah Jackson of Ipswich died on 25 September 1876, at the age of sixty seven(5).
