HUGHES, John Robert

( - 1962 )

John Robert Hughes seems to have joined the Society of Friends in about 1944 at Cardiff, with his wife Gaynor being an attender, but she joined the Society in about the year 1950.(1) Later in around 1954 they moved to Arthog and then in 1957 to Aberystwyth.(2)

He was a keen naturalist, a skilful water colourist and gave much time and labour to research into the history of the Society of Friends in Wales. It is thought that his manuscript may eventually be lodged with the National Library of Wales. He was an elder of Western QM a man of great sweetness of character of kindness and of good humour.

He died on May 27, 1962 in hospital - no age is given.

HUGHES, Mary (1860-1941)

Mary Hughes was born on 24 February 1860. Her well-to-do Anglican family were sensitive to their responsibilities as Christians and cultured people.

Mary learned to love and serve the people in her brother-in-law's East End Parish of St. Jude's, Whitechapel. So strong was her concern for them that she gave up what she felt was her unjustly privileged position in society. She bought the 'Earl Grey's Castle' public house and converted it into the 'Dewdrop Inn'. Here she lived and worked for 23 years, keeping an ever open door to anyone needing lodgings, food, advice and sympathy.

Her spiritual insight made her a pacifist in the 1914-18 war and she joined the Society of Friends, uniting also with the line of thought of the Industrial & Social Order Council. She was persistent in reminding Friends of the miseries of their fellow-citizens and urging them to action.

Mary Hughes carried on her vigorous mode of life despite failing health, maintaining to the last a certain youthful spirit and her childlike and direct approach to life.

She died on 2 April 1941

HULL, John

John Hull was, apparently, younger in the Truth than the other companions of Fox (p.196). On the arrival of the Industry at Barbados, Thomas Hudson visited the ship, and reported that 'most of them had beene sea sicke but were prittay well Tho: Briggs was one of ye best & Jno Hull ye puniest' (Swarth. MSS.i.150). Hull seems to have acted as Fox's secretary while on the Island. His log of the voyage shews considerable knowledge of natural objects. He did not accompany Fox on his further travels, but returned to England early in 1672, with Elizabeth Miers (Swarth. MSS.i. 52; Webb, Fells, 1865, p.278). Edl. edd. do not mention him except in the passenger list.

Hull wrote, with Fox, To the Ministers, Teachers, and Priests ... in Barbadoes, 1672, signing himself, 'From Him that was once of you; but now through Mercy is come out from amongst you'. He mentions Arias*Montanus and Junius and uses several Latin quotations. The London Registers contain the record of the death of a John Hull, of Peel Monthly Meeting in 1690/1, aged 80. Tn

He was concerned for the spread of knowledge of the Bible and assisted in the formation of an Auxiliary Bible Society in 1810(3). He was also associated with Elizabeth Fry in her religious service and advised her on various subjects(4).

John Fowler Hull, the youngest son of Samuel Hull (1764-1819 qv) and his second wife Ann, born Fowler, of Uxbridge, was born there on 28 May 1800(1). Details of his childhood and early life are not at present (1975) traced and it is only known of him that as a young man he went to India; it is not at present possible to establish the date of his voyage out or the purpose of his journey(2). While on his travels he endured a period of intense religious doubt and, in his own words, lived without God, but enlightenment came to him during a passage from Mocha to Bombay, when he wrote the following memoranda:-

"I have for some time past disbelieved the existence of any religion, and have lived without God . . . But it has pleased the Lord today . . . to incline my heart to him . . . How inestimable is the privilege of being born in our Society, where the true principles of the everlasting Gospel are so purely and so publicly professed . . . In travelling through these Countries, how many proofs I have witnessed of the fallacy and absurdity of all religion, except that under the guidance of inward revelation! And how many times seeing the devotion and obedience of the Mahometan . . . have I been ashamed of my own lukewarmness?"

12 mo 5th My mind has been carried about with every wind of doctrine . . . my distress of mind became so great that I was almost tempted to commit suicide; at that critical moment the Lord did not abandon me, but was graciously pleased to make me sensible of my error and to favor me with so extraordinary a manifestation of himself that my spirit magnified the Lord." (3)

He died in India on 18 December 1825(4), at the age of twenty five.

HUME, John Basil ( 1893 - 1974 )

a| Basil Hume was born in 1893, at Whitby, the son of David and Mary Elizabeth ( b. Jarrett ) Hume. (1)

He was educated at Ackworth and Bootham and qualified in medicine in 1916. This was followed by three years service with the R.A.M.C. in East Africa, an experience which was to prove most helpful when later he became medical officer to the Friends Foreign Missionary Association ( later the FSC. )

In 1919 he returned to St. Bartholomew's Hospital as a young registrar. He gained the distinction of "Brackenbury Scholar in Surgery" and as "Luther Holden Research Scholar" spending one year in the States.

In 1925 he married Marjorie Constance Poole, (2) and in all there were four daughters of the marriage. (3)

He was appointed consultant surgeon at St. Bartholomews in 1931 and from 1946 until his retirement in 1958, at the age of 65, he held the post of senior surgeon. He was also surgeon to other hospitals - St. Andrews, Dollis Hill, and Finchley Hospital. He was also a member of the court of examiners of the Royal College of Surgeons. But "Barts" was the background of his life and the object of his deep devotion.

After his retirement he interested himself in the University of London, was a member of the senate for 17 years, chairman of the external council for 11 years and deputy vice-chancellor of the university from 1964 to 1966. In 1959 he also became a governor of The Retreat and from 1966 until his retirement from the position in 1970 he was chairman of its committee of management.

He was a straightforward, sometimes somewhat intolerant man, with a deep kindness and humanity beneath. His concern was always for truth, and he was willing to change his attitude when the facts required it. He was perhaps more direct in manner than is usual among Friends.

He served on the Marriage and Parenthood Cttee from 1932 to 1944. (4)

He died at The Retreat, York on March 2, 1974 aged 80 years (5)

HUME, Marjorie Constance

( 1902 - 1982 ) b. Poole

Marjorie Poole was born in the year 1902.(1) We have no knowledge of her early life but in 1925 she married John Basil Hume ( 1893 - 1974 qv.)(2) who became a distinguished surgeon, and either just before or just after the marriage she joined the Society of Friends and they settled down in Golders Green meeting.(3) There were four daughters of the marriage.

In March 1932, Meeting for Sufferings appointed a second committee on Marriage and Parenthood and both Marjorie and Basil Hume were appointed to it. Outside the Society the British Hygiene Council had a Marriage Committee and these two committees led to the formation of the, what is now, National Marriage Guidance Council in 1938. Marjorie Hume not only acted as secretary to this new body but was one of the prime movers in its establishment and development. She served on several Friends Central Committees, on Friends Education Council from 1935 to its last meeting in 1978, being a member of the Executive Committee from 1960 and its chairman from 1970. She served on the Ackworth School Committee from 1937 - 1976 being clerk to the committee from 1968 to 1972. (4) To all this service she brought her energies and her great capacity for quiet listening. She was a valued elder both at Golders Green and later at Swarthmore, Gerrards Cross to where she moved after her husband's death in 1974. There she found a new sphere of needs and of activity as correspondent to the meeting and as its only elder, despite a gradually crippling illness.

She died on June 20, 1982, aged 79.

A very able and interesting woman, of wide influence. She was great-granddaughter of Mary Fisher, one of the two Quakers first to come to Massachusetts in 1656. Mary Fisher's first husband was William Bayley, whom she married in 1662. He was a preacher and mariner of Poole, Dorchester, and was lost at sea in 1675. Her second husband was John Crosse, of London. They settled in Charleston, South Carolina, for what reason is not known. He died 1687. There were no children by the second marriage. Of the three by the first marriage, William, Mary and Susanna, the latter married 1st Edward E. Rawlins; 2nd Henry Wigington, Deputy Secretary of the Province of South Carolina. She died 1733. The eldest, and probably the only child of the second marriage was Sophia Wigington, born 1702. She married Robert Hume, of Charleston, a prominent citizen, "the 15th. day of (month illegible) 1721". The mother of Sophia Hume, Susanna Wigington, was a Friend, but her father was an Episcopalian, and had much influence over her. At thirty eight, as a widow, Sophia became very serious, and in 1741 joined the Quakers. About this time she removed to London to live: In 1747 she came back to America on a religious visit, made under difficulties and amid much reproach, as her children disapproved of the step she had taken, and her former friends in the fashionable world quite misunderstood her. While in Charleston, she prepared an address to them, published when she reached Philadelphia by Benjamin Franklin with the title, 'An Exhortation to the Inhabitants of South Carolina' &c. This remarkable production, showing great grasp and ability, went into several editions. She was the author of other letters and pamphlets, notably one on 'Days and Times' &c. and was an able writer. The pamphlet of 1748 was submitted to a Committee of Philadelphia Friends before publication: one of these Friends was John Woolman. They met at the house of John Smith, then living in Philadelphia, whose diary

Additional Information

HUNT, Ann Hunt was born in Bristol in the year 1810, the daughter of Henry and Ann Hunt, and lived all her life in that city.

She was recorded a minister by Bristol and Frenchay Monthly Meeting, and in 1884 and 1885 she visited Friends in her own Quarterly Meeting with Joseph Storrs Fry. She took great interest in Meetings in Ministry and Oversight, and exercised a marked influence in the Women's Yearly Meeting when she was able to attend.

'She was a warmly attached Friend, loyal to the principles and practices of Friends, and deeply interested in all that concerned its usefulness, and the growth and character of the Society's work; she held her own opinions firmly, while sympathising more or less with every sincere endeavour to do good. In her own meeting and beyond it she exercised a uniting and establishing influence, which, if difficult to define, was truly felt'.

HUNT, Arthur Marshall (1860-1938)

A. Marshall Hunt, the son of Arthur John Hunt (1827-1915 qv) and his second wife Elizabeth (born Smith, 1829?-1904 qv) of 6 Seymour Villas, Stapleton Road, Bristol, was born there on 6 July 1860(1). He was educated at Sidcot School from 1871 to 1875(2). He valued his time at Sidcot and continued to take an interest in the school all his life, serving from 1925 to 1929 on the management committee.

After leaving school he studied engineering at Bristol University and in a workshop at his father's house he put into practice much that he had learned. Later he became assistant and then manager of a small engineering works and in 1891 he went into business on his own account at Bristol. In all his business life he was very thorough and took great care; he never scamped any work he undertook nor departed from the strictest integrity.

He was married in 1899 to Matilda Geraldine Holborrow Lansdowne (1875?-1966 qv) of Bristol(3) and there was one child, who died in infancy(4).

When he was only fifteen years old he became a teacher in the Friends First-day School at The Friars, Bristol and continued this work without a break for nearly fifty years, during most of the time (from 1882) as assistant superintendent of the boys' school. He was very happy in this work and made many friendships; towards the end of his life he was elected president of the First-day School Old Scholars Society.

He was greatly interested in education. He went with Wilfrid Grace (1872-1920 qv) to London, when the First-day School was closed, to interview the authorities about a new Trust. This resulted in money from the Trust being used chiefly towards the maintenance of poor children in secondary schools. He was secretary of the Trust committee from its foundation until his death. He also took a great interest in the monthly meeting education committee, started about 1924 and formed as the outcome of the Yearly Meeting committee on the religious education of young people. He acted as clerk to the committee for some years.

A. Marshall Hunt of Bristol died on 11 October 1938, at the age of seventy eight(5).

HUNT, Henry (1780-1862)

Henry Hunt, the son of George Hunt (1741-1804 qv) and his wife Ann (born Hawkins, 1741?-1824 qv) of Hallen in Gloucestershire, was born there on 13 November 1780(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1790 to 1794(2).

At the age of sixteen he was placed with a mercantile house in London, where he remained for nearly seven years. He looked back on this period as one of great comfort and thankfulness, for he acquired a knowledge of men and affairs, while his early training enabled him to withstand the temptations of life in London.

On returning to Bristol he went into business as a chocolate manufacturer (3) and was married firstly in 1804 to Ann Marshall (1772-1825 qv) of Evesham in Worcestershire(4); there were six children, born between the years 1805 and 1814(5). He married secondly in 1828 Martha Towill (born Ash, 1775-1833 qv), the widow of James Towill (1779?-1813 qv) of Bridgwater in Somerset(6); the marriage was apparently childless(7). He married thirdly in 1834 Elizabeth Southall (1791-1874 qv) of Leominster in Herefordshire(8), but this marriage was also childless(9). By the time of his second marriage Henry Hunt had given up the manufacture of chocolate and become a tea dealer of Bristol, a business which he followed for the rest of his life(10).

He had a deep and abiding interest in the welfare of the Society of Friends and in spite of growing business and family cares he gave to Friends much willing service over a long period. He was an elder and he sought to use his talents and responsibilities for the benefit of those within his sphere of influence. His views of the Christian life were eminently practical and he was reluctant to talk about his personal religious experience. But his faith was undeviating and Henry Hunt of Bristol died with an unclouded mind, after a short illness, on 5 December 1862, at the age of eighty two(11).

HUNT, John (1712-1778)

John Hunt began his ministry when quite young, and in 1738 visited America, accompanying John Churchman on a preaching tour. John Smith of Burlington described him at this time as 'slow of speech, correct, and very devout.' At this time he met John Woolman, then eighteen. He returned to his home in London in the spring of 1740, accompanying the older minister, Michael Lightfoot, from America, and married 1740, 'an agreeable widow, with a fortune of £2000'. (John Smith.) John Hunt's house in London was a home for visiting Friends. Daniel Stanton writes, in 1749, 'he would have me to his house and gave me a kind reception, where I made my home for the most part during the time my lot was cast in that great city.' (Friends' Library, Vol.XII, 161)

In 1756 John Hunt and Christopher Wilson were sent from London Yearly Meeting to look into the question of the alleged mismanagement of the Indian affairs. Their mission bore fruit of grave import to Pennsylvania history, Quaker and other, in the ultimate departure of all the Quakers from the Assembly of that Province. Doctor Fothergill was in constant touch with Hunt and Wilson during their sojourn in America. The Philadelphia Meeting for Sufferings held a special meeting before they returned home in 1757, to present an account of the state of affairs among them. (Minutes, Vol.I p.141.)

John Hunt was in America at least once more before he finally emigrated to Pennsylvania. R. Foster writes from Gravesend to John Pemberton, Jno. 29th 1769, that he had seen off 'Cos. John Hunt, his two daug<sup>s</sup>, Jcs. Elliott & in the ship 'York' for New York'. (Pemberton Letters, Vol.19 p.133, Hist. Soc. Penna.) John Hunt settled in Darby. He was one of the twenty two Friends banished to Winchester, Va. for their Quaker neutrality during the Revolution, and, with another, died in exile there March 31, 1778. He was called by John Pemberton, 'a great, wise and experienced minister and elder.' (Bowden, 'Hist .Friends in America,' II Chap X. Gilpin; 'Exiles in Virginia' 1848)

Son of Robert Hunt, Junior, (Son of Robert and Elizabeth [Woolman, Paine] Hunt) and Abigail Wood. Born at Mansfield New Jersey, 1740. His father and John Woolman were first cousins, Elizabeth Hunt (afterward Harvey) having been the sister of John's father, Samuel Woolman, and a widow when she married Robert Hunt. Their grandson John became a minister, and resided all his life as member of Chesterfield Meeting, N.J. He and his neighbour Joshua Evans, both under the influence of John Woolman, were much interested in the aid given to the Indians of Edgepellick and Brotherton, and often visited the reservations. He married Rebecca, daughter of Henry Warrington.

John Hunt kept a very interesting diary, extracts from which near the time of the Revolution are published in 'Friends' Miscellany', Vol.I p.97. William Hunt, also his cousin, was an intimate relative, and one is interested in thinking of John Hunt, his father's half brother, Peter Harvey, and his cousins William Hunt and John Woolman, all being eminent ministers in their day and generation.

John Hunt died 9mo. 21, 1824 aged 84, and was buried at Moorestown, N.J.

"...a peculiar soundness of judgment and correctness of discrimination, which were often exercised in the discharge of her duties in the church, especially as an Elder, much to the comfort and edification of her Friends. She more than once made a considerable journey on the Continent of Europe, in company with Friends who were ministers... It is probable, that the unavoidable exposure to changes of weather, and the fatigue which she endured in her last journey, in 1825, produced the rudiments of the disease which terminated her earthly course... Her last illness was not very protracted..." (p 31)

William Hunt of New Garden in Guilford County, North Carolina, accompanied by his nephew Thomas Thornbury, was on a visit to English Friends when he died at the house of James King, who lived near Newcastle. The two Friends arrived just after Yearly Meeting in 1771, and then travelled north to York and Durham Quarterly Meetings. "In these Meetings William Hunt was eminently favoured with wisdom and power in his Ministry". They then attended other Quarterly Meetings, travelling on to Scotland and visiting Friend families where no meeting existed. "Solemn, memorable" meetings were held during their long visit, which extended into the winter and on to the next Yearly Meeting in 1772. They afterwards visited Holland, accompanied by Samuel Emlen junior, and Morris Birkbeck. William Hunt's ministry was "living and powerful, deep and searching" wherever he went, and his conversation was "grave and instructive, seasoned with love and sweetness." He was a "man of sound Judgment, quick of Apprehension and deep in divine things, and although he was only in the 39th year of his Age, yet such was his Experience and Stability that he stood as an Elder and a Father in the Church."

He contracted smallpox after he had returned to Newcastle, and died 9 September 1772, a minister for 24 years, and was buried in the Friends burial ground in Newcastle.

HUNT, William (1733-1772)

Authorities differ as to the early ancestry of William Hunt. We find a minister of that name in Barbados on a religious visit, noted in the Minutes of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting for 6mo. (August) 3. 1685. The same source shows that Samuel Carpenter was appointed by the meeting 8mo. (October) 5, 1685, to write William Peachey for copies of papers regarding William Hunt, to be sent to William Frampton. Both the latter were Burlington County Friends.

Burlington (N.J.) Monthly Meeting minutes have for 4mo. (June) 6, 1687, a most unusual record, when they state that William Hunt and Margaret Pearson, 'having no certificates, are advised to be married before a magistrate.' The actual marriage is not on the records which would indicate that the recommendation was complied with. All the evidence points to their final settlement in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, where a great many Friends were moving at this time. The minutes of the Women's Meeting (now in private hands) show the removal of a Sarah Hunt from Darby, Penna., to the 'Falls', (as Fallsington was generally known), her certificate bearing date, 2d of 8mo. (October) 1717. The marriages of Burlington MM for 2mo. (April) 14, 1720, record for 2mo. (April) 14, 1720, that of 'William Hunt of Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and Mary Woolman, daughter of John, late of Northampton, deceased', at Springfield Meeting (Burlington Co.) (Book A. p.58). William, Margaret and Sarah Hunt, are among the witnesses. The Women's meeting at the 'Falls' has record of the removal from Burlington MM (of which Springfield was a part,) to their meeting of Mary Hunt, her certificate dated, '1 of 6mo.' (August) 1720. Mary Hunt was John Woolman's aunt. Soon after this, the Quaker steam of migration to North Carolina and the South began to gain volume, and from this point the records coincide with an uncertain family tradition. This states that William Hunt, Senior, died while William, Jr. was a child, and the family became scattered, William going to live with an aunt, whose name is not given, in Virginia, and who brought him up as a strict Friend.

William was a very sober, religious child, and began to preach at the age of fifteen. Finding himself somewhat vain of the gift, which was encouraged by the elder Friends, he held his peace for some time, and finally began all over again, becoming eventually one of the foremost ministers of his denomination. He married early, before his majority, Sarah Mills, in 4mo. 1753. Just before this, the minutes of Cane Creek, N.C. under date, 11mo. 4, 1752, state that William Hunt produced a certificate of removal from the Monthly Meeting of Hopewell, Virginia, dated 6mo. 1, 1752. Unfortunately, the Hopewell minutes have been destroyed by fire. He eventually became a resident at Guilford, N.C., with which most of his later life is associated. He had eight children, one of them his famous son Nathan. He traveled much in the ministry, one of his descendants writing, 'he had at one time preached in nearly all the Friends' meeting houses in America'. His cousin John Hunt of Chesterfield N.H. relates in his own Journal under date, 4mo. 11, 1771 that William Hunt attended meeting at Upper Springfield at that time and preached an impressive sermon. He was making a farewell visit to his early home before sailing for England. John Hunt says 'he told us to note it down; that there was little hope for this generation, but it was his belief that the next would make better progress in the Truth.' Exactly a year to the day before his cousin John Woolman sailed, William Hunt embarked on the same vessel. John Hunt writes, 'My wife, her sister, Elizabeth Haines, brother Robert and myself went to Philadelphia to take leave of Cousin William who was about to sail for old England on a religious visit. Divers friends went on board the vessel with him, and we had a meeting in the cabin, in which Cousin William preached and prayed in a very affectionate manner, and we took leave of him in dear and tender love, with strong desires for each other's preservation'.

John asked William if he were not afraid to go to sea? He replied, that it was an 'anxious prospect', 'but when the mind has passed through the necessary baptism, there is not much for the fear of death to lay hold on'.

William Hunt was accompanied by his nephew, Thomas Thornborough, the 'cousin Thomma' of the letters. They reached London after a short voyage. A letter to John Hunt and Peter and Mary Harvey brought the family word of their arrival. 'My right dear and inwardly beloved relations, not only by consanguinity, but by the immortal seed and Heavenly birth of immortal life.... We got to London and to our lodgings eight days after we parted with you'. A tiny missive was sent 'to my dear little cousins, John and Esther Hunt'. Four of his letters to Uriah Woolman have been printed (Memorials, W.&N. Hunt, p. 82 ff)

During the year the two visited Yorkshire, Lancashire and Ireland, meeting John Woolman in London in June, 1772. They sailed thence to Holland, a letter which William Hunt wrote his wife from Amsterdam, dated '8mo. 1772' reaching her after his death. Embarking on the return to England for Scarborough, they were forced by contrary winds into Shields, where they landed on the 16th. of August, and went to the house of James King at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. They attended meeting there on the 27th, and William Hunt preached. Being asked where he intended going next, he replied that he 'saw no further at present than Newcastle.' Next day he was taken with an illness which on the fourth day proved to be smallpox. He was devotedly nursed by Elizabeth Carter, whose account is given in 'Friends Miscellany', Vol. VI. 176, ff. His nephew had not had the disease, and at his desire, Thomas Thornborough removed to the house of Joseph King at Kenton. William Hunt died September 9th, 1772, his last words being 'Truth reigns over all!'. Esther Tuke whose good offices were extended so soon to John Woolman under similar circumstances, wrote a sympathetic letter to his children, dated 'York 26th 10mo. 1772.'

HUNT, William (1733-1772) (con't)

Thomas Priestman's Diary contains the following;
'Dear William Hunt of North Carolina Died at Newcastle in the small pox, He being on a Religious Visit to this Nation had been to Visit Holland and landed at Shields from thence, on 26 of 8mo: on 27th began to be Ill at Newcastle. In a few days the smallpox appear'd. He was a deeply exercised minister; very sound and living, tho' in many places he pass'd unknown, having many silent meetings yet in some places he was wonderfully favoured to preach the Gospel, to the Comfort of the heavy hearted and Travailed deep that Truth might rise into dominion;
his exercise on this acct. was Great. The Loss seems unspeakable that the Church has sustained by being deprived of such a Member, seemingly one of the Greatest in our Society, according to my apprehension.
I never heard or was acquainted with his fellow. His nephew Thomas Thornborough was his companion, and is now left like a Dove without its mate'
John Woolman arrived soon after at Thomas Priestman's where he died of the same disease. Sarah Mills Hunt died '14 of 7mo. 1778'.

HUNTER, John (1631- )

The village of Hedsorley near Shotley Bridge in the county of Durham was the home of the Hunter family for at least three centuries, it having settled in the locality some time before 1607. John Hunter, the son of Robert Hunter of Housington or Horsington, was baptised in 1631 and shortly after he came of age the first Quakers arrived in the district.

He was converted to Quakerism by George Fox(1) and a meeting was held at his house at Benfieldside on 19 October 1654. This meeting was attended by a clergyman, Thomas Tillam of Hexham, who wrote an account of it to his friend Giles Firmin; this account was included in an anti-Quaker book Giles Firmin published in 1656 called Establishing against Shaking, and the following is a portion of the narrative:-

"At the earnest desire of some friends I went with John Ward and Anthony Hunter to a meeting of the deluded souls called Quakers, at John Hunters of Benfieldside in the county of Durham, where we found about twenty persons sitting all silent; after we had sate awhile (all being mute), the Lord moved me to arise, and call upon his name by prayor . . . While I prayed to GOD as a Creator, there was but little disturbance, but when I cryed in the Name of JESUS CHRIST, my Mediator, God in my nature, . . . then the Devil roared in the deceived soules in most strange and dreadfull manner, some howling, some screeking, yelling, roaring, and some had a strange, confused kinde of humming, singing noise. Such a representation of Hell, I never heard of, nothing but horror and confusion."

As with other religious bodies, there was some unhealthy excitement in the beginnings of Quakerism, but Edward Burrough called it a "foolish babbling story," and gave Tillam no good character.

John Hunter suffered heavily for his beliefs. In 1660 he was imprisoned for five months and later had distrants laid upon him amounting to £51.4.0:- "twenty oxen and other kine, three Horses & eleven Sheep." (Besse, Sufferings, vol 1, p.187) In 1672 he was one of the four hundred and ninety one Friends liberated by the pardon granted by Charles II in connection with his Declaration of Indulgence of that year.

John Hunter married Mary Smith(2) and there were at least two children(3). The date of his death is not at present (1976) traced(4).

John Hunter was born on 11 October 1890 at Belper, Derbyshire, the son of Lt.Col. Hunter, an architect and civil engineer. He went to Repton School, afterwards working with an uncle who was estate agent to the Lord Lieutenant of Derbyshire.

In 1914 John Hunter, who following OTC at school had become an officer in the Territorial Army (Sherwood Foresters) was automatically called up at the outbreak of war; he went out to France in January 1915 and served for three years in the trenches. His experiences so filled him with horror of war that he resigned his commission, was court-martialled and sentenced to death, though after questions in Parliament the sentence was changed to imprisonment, and he was in prison for nine months, being released in May 1919. Almost immediately he went to Poland with a FWVRC Relief Mission, helping to restore agriculture, the group being led by Florence Barrow (1876-1964 qv) with whom he was in close friendship till his death. He became Treasurer of the Mission. In his spare time he learned to knit very skilfully and all his life he ~~stylised~~ this gift for benevolent causes.

In 1922 he returned to England and took up work as an accountant, first in his brother's business and then at Scarborough as account to the firm of Wallis and Blakeley. In 1924 he met Nellie Mary Hunter, whom he married in 1929 (1). Shortly afterwards they both joined Friends. John and Nellie Hunter had 3 children (2). In 1930, by invitation of John Stephenson Rowntree, John Hunter became Assistant Secretary to the Yorkshire Friends Service Committee, and for 20 years the two men were close friends. He retired in 1961. In 1934 he became a QM representative on the Northern Friends Peace Board, joined its Executive in 1936, and served continuously on it until 1962, being a Vice-Chairman from 1944. In the preparation of its work he had not only an inborn talent but also a "willing acceptance of... the drudgery of continuous effort". His courage and understanding made him an inspiration to old army friends and young COs, and it was his deeply felt concern that the Peace Testimony should be regarded as a part of Christian understanding.

His ministry was striking and he excelled in prayer.

He died on 26 January 1963 aged 73.

HUNTER, Mary (1777?-1864)

Mary Hunter, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1977) traced, was born at Easingwold about the year 1777(1). Circumstances deprived her of her mother's care and she was brought up by her maternal grandmother, who was a pious Wesleyan. It was among the Wesleyans that Mary had her first religious experiences.

When she was seventeen she went into domestic service at York and often spoke with thankfulness of the different families whose well ordered lives she had in some measure shared. The last of these was that of Lindley and Hannah Murray of Holgate, where she was housemaid for three years. She had great faith in the power of love to smooth the path of life and on being told that a young woman about to be engaged as cook had a sharp temper, she replied "I'll cure her with love." This she did to such good effect that the two became close friends for fifty years. While with the Murrays she joined the Society of Friends, to which her fellow servant, Mercy Ward, also belonged.

On leaving Holgate, she and Mercy Ward opened a small confectionary shop in York. As their business increased they moved to successively larger premises, until in 1860 they were able to retire with a competency. In their business they did not neglect their religious life; they were always ready to help the poor and afflicted, kept a box for contributions to the Ragged School and Mary also carried about with her tracts and little books which she often slipped into the hands of customers at the shop.

For several years before she died Mary Hunter was unable to get to meeting, but she remained very cheerful. She died at York on 19 March 1864, at the age of eighty seven(2).

HUNTER, Sarah (1775-1857) born Dickinson

Sarah Dickinson, the daughter of Elihu and Sarah Dickinson of Highflatts in Yorkshire, was born there on 30 August 1775(1). She was married in 1799 to Simeon Hunter of Sherburn in Yorkshire(2) and there were five children(3).

Her health was never robust and during long periods of her life she was a complete invalid, often being prevented from attending her meeting, which was some miles from the country town in which she lived. Her isolation both from the active practice of her religion and from her friends might have stunted her religious growth, but she appears to have sought the love of God from her youth and as she grew in years she grew in the grace of the Holy Spirit.

Her husband was a shopkeeper and was much occupied with his business, so that the care and upbringing of their young family fell mainly upon her frail shoulders. Her children died young, one son only surviving to manhood, but she was comforted in her grief by the knowledge that she had set their feet on the road towards the mercy and love of God.

Her long life closed peacefully, in widowhood, on 31 March 1857(4), in her eighty second year.

HUNTER, Thomas (1653-1712)

Thomas Hunter, the son of John Hunter (1631- qv) and his wife Mary, born Smith, of Benfieldside near Shotley Bridge in the county of Durham, was born there on 23.viii.(October)1653(1). He lived at Tinkler's Hill, Snous Green, Benfieldside.

He was married three times. His first wife was Hannah Trowhitt, whom he married in 1690(2) and who bore him two daughters, the younger of whom survived(3). Hannah Hunter died in 1705(4) and Thomas took as his second wife a woman named Esther, about whom nothing is at present (1976) traced(5), but who bore him a daughter(6). His third wife was Elizabeth(7), who bore him two children(8) and who, after his death, became the second wife of Ralph Dixon III (1673-1743 qv).

John Hunter was one of the earliest convinced Friends and Thomas followed his example. In 1697 he was prosecuted in the Ecclesiastical Court for tithes and was imprisoned in Durham gaol. In 1710 he was again prosecuted for three years' tithes and lost cattle and horses worth £40; however, Thomas appeared in the Exchequer Court to oblige the prosecutor to prove his demand and it was finally assessed at only £2.17.6, but he died before the suit could be settled.

Thomas Hunter died on 22.vi.(August)1712(9).

HUNTLEY, Hannah (1749-1835) born Cowdry

Hannah Cowdry, the daughter of Thomas and Mary Cowdry, was born at Oak Mill near Chalfont in Buckinghamshire on 11.iv.(June)1749(1). From an early age she was distinguished by religious zeal and was an assiduous attender at meetings. When she was twenty one she moved to Burford in Oxfordshire, where in 1778 she became the second wife of Thomas Huntley (1733-1813 qv), who kept a school called Hillside Academy at the top of a steep hill in Burford; there were seven children of the marriage(2).

In addition to the care of her own family and her two stepchildren she acted as matron of the school. She also found time to rear pigs for bacon, which went to feed her many charges, and to make biscuits which she sold outside the school, where coaches had to stop to put the drag on when going downhill, or to allow the horses to regain their breath at the end of the steep climb. Some of her recipes may well have been used later on by Huntley and Palmer of Reading.

As soon as her youngest child was old enough to be left, she was recorded a minister of the Society and made at least one journey outside the area of her monthly meeting. On one occasion, hearing that a large party of nobility and gentry were to assemble at a Burford inn for the races, she felt called upon to make them a religious visit; Thomas preceded her in testimony and she was received with respect and attention. She felt afterwards that her visit had given her "the sweetness of the reward of obedience to the Holy Spirit."

21
She died on 2 January 1835(3), at the age of eighty five.

HUNTLEY, Henry Evans (1833-1919)

Henry Evans Huntley, the only son of Thomas Huntley (1803-1857 qv) and his wife Jane, born Evans, of Reading, was born there on 19 April 1833(1). Details of his early life and education are not at present (1975) traced, but when he was seventeen the question arose of his admission to the family firm of Huntley & Palmers, biscuit makers of Reading. His father hoped that he would eventually become a partner, but George Palmer (1816-1897 qv) was against the proposal; he considered that the boy's character was being ruined by a mother who alternately spoiled and bullied him. It was agreed that he should be sent to Colchester to receive professional training and the question of his future would be reconsidered when he had finished his training.

In 1855 he came into the firm for a trial period, but this was not a success and lasted only twenty months. He lacked both the competence and interest to earn him a place in the business. About 1858 he married, in the Church of England, Augusta Ainsworth, the daughter of a Dorset landowner and had three children(2), but neither of his sons showed any interest in the business.

Shortly after his marriage, Henry bought an estate in Dorset, at Charlton Marshall near Blandford and settled down to the life of a country landowner. He took his seat on the board of Blandford Workhouse and on the governing body of a school in the next village. He maintained tenuous links with the business and used to receive a Christmas cake annually until he died; from time to time he made a tour of the factory while staying with his daughter Ada Frances Wright in Reading. Both his sons, Henry Ainsworth Huntley and Frederick Huntley, died childless and the three children of his daughter never married.

He died in 1919, at the age of eighty five(3).

HUNTLEY, John (1784-1871)

John Huntley, the son of Thomas Huntley (1733-1813 qv) and his second wife Hannah, born Cowdry, of Burford in Oxfordshire, was born there on 24 January 1784(1). He became a biscuit baker at Uxbridge and for about two years his nephew Thomas Huntley (1803-1857 qv) lived with him, to learn the trade. John Huntley returned to Burford rather abruptly about 1822; family tradition has it that he was in financial difficulties and his situation may have influenced his nephew in his later reluctance to expand his own business beyond what he considered its capital resources would stand.

John Huntley died at Reading, apparently unmarried(2), on 18 December 1871(3), at the age of eighty eight.

HUNTLEY, Joseph (1775-1849)

Joseph Huntley, the son of Thomas Huntley (1733-1813 qv) and his first wife Mary, born Goles, of Burford in Oxfordshire, was born there on 3 December 1775(1). His mother died when he was very young and he was brought up by his stepmother Hannah Huntley (born Cowdry, 1749-1835 qv), a lively and energetic woman who later became a minister of the Society, as did his father. He probably received his education at Hillside Academy, the Quaker school kept by his father at Burford and although early in life he became a yeoman(2), later on he turned to schoolmastering and in about 1806 took over a small Quaker school at Sibford Ferris, with twenty one pupils.

The Huntleys as a family were honest, trustworthy and plodding, but Joseph could not have been more different; his honesty on at least one occasion was a somewhat doubtful quantity and he seems to have imbibed from his stepmother some of her spirit and energy. He married in 1801 Mary Willis, a Reading heiress two years his senior(3) and there were six children of the marriage(4). Mary's grandfather, Binfield Willis, had been a wealthy Quaker maltster and he left his property in trust to his three grandchildren, so that after his death Mary became a householder in her own right in a handsome house in London Street. She suffered for her beliefs and her property was distrained at various times for non-payment of church rates.

This independence she sacrificed when she married Joseph, exchanging it for the life of a farmer's wife at Sibford Ferris and an erratic husband. Since the early age of twenty he had been a Quaker minister and his ministerial journeys took him far afield; he also had a number of financial dealings, for which he used his wife's money and was a not very competent farmer. His change of occupation to schoolmastering in 1806 did not solve his financial problems and in 1811 he and his wife and four young children moved to Reading. It is not known precisely what he did there, but he may have been drawn there by his wife's Reading connections and the greater educational opportunities the town offered.

Whatever occupation he followed, it gave him an established position in the Reading Quaker community and on the strength of the customary certificate of clearness from Banbury Monthly Meeting he was immediately accepted as a minister. But in 1814 Reading Monthly Meeting learned that he was insolvent and in no position to educate his children and this situation produced an acrimonious exchange of notes flying backwards and forwards between Banbury and Reading Monthly Meetings. Reading MM held that Banbury MM had incorrectly forwarded a certificate of solvency and that that Meeting should take the responsibility of educating the eleven year old Thomas and his sister, who "require immediate attention in this respect." Whilst accepting this responsibility, Banbury MM refused to take back the offending certificate, on the grounds that it had been true to the best of their knowledge and belief.

As a rejoinder, two elders of Reading Meeting drew up a statement of Joseph's affairs at the time of his arrival in 1811, an interesting document which has unfortunately not been preserved. But this had scarcely been completed when Joseph announced that he had become possessed of considerable property by the death of a relative and that moreover he had an interest in this property which he could have sold, so that technically he had been quite solvent in 1811. The two monthly meetings were too relieved at the outcome of the affair to enquire into it too closely, but it shows that Joseph was a man to cut corners and sail a little close to the wind in matters requiring financial probity.

Joseph then became involved in a series of wrangles with his wife's trustees in an endeavour to wind up the trust and secure the capital for his own use, and while this was going on he took a small house which had belonged to Binfield Willis, in Church Street near the Meeting House. He took his financial reverses lightly, but they were more than his wife could bear. She had returned to Reading, where she had once been a substantial householder, to bring up her family in a small house on a slender income; during 1815, when the dispute between the two monthly meetings was at its height, she felt obliged to resign her office of overseer of the Women's Meeting and six years later she died, aged only forty seven(5).

Joseph never married again and in 1822, with the help of his son Thomas (1803-1857 qv), who had served an apprenticeship in the bakery and biscuit business, he decided to open a biscuit bakery and confectioner's shop, managing the business and keeping the books while Thomas did the baking and one or more of his sisters served in the shop. The lease of a shop in London Street became vacant in November 1822, the Huntleys were installed before the end of the year and this was the beginning of the business later to achieve world wide fame as Huntley & Palmers of Reading.

Trade was on a very modest scale at the beginning; it was one of three Reading shops which specialised in biscuit baking, while most of the other thirty bakers in the town made at least some biscuits. But the Huntleys' shop happened to be situated opposite the Crown Hotel, from which three coaches departed daily for the west country and which was a regular staging post. Travellers dissatisfied with the fare offered by the hotel were drawn to the little shop across the way to buy refreshments for the journey and Joseph used to send his delivery boy round the inn yard with packets of biscuits wrapped up in twists of paper. The biscuits became so popular that travellers began to demand them from their grocers at home and the potential market suddenly ceased to be a purely local one.

Joseph therefore took two crucial steps. His younger son Joseph (1807-1895 qv) had been apprenticed to an ironmonger who was also a brazier, coppersmith and tinplate worker in London Street, Reading. He had completed his training in the Black Country and on his return he had in 1832 opened an ironmongers shop next door to the Crown Hotel, exactly opposite to his father's shop. Joseph persuaded him to make tins and tin lined boxes, which solved the problem of keeping the biscuits fresh for long periods. He also employed a traveller to assist his own labours in canvassing his wares. Joseph's canvassing was often combined with his ministerial journeys and may indeed have impeded them, since after his death Reading Meeting recorded in carefully chosen words:- "We believe he was desirous of walking in the path of apprehended duty."

By the late 1830s the firm was selling about twenty different kinds of biscuit and the first surviving account book, opened at the beginning of 1837, shows that turnover on credit accounts came to £1410 in that year. The firm had its financial crises due to bad debts and slow payers and in addition to these there was a growing managerial problem. Joseph Huntley, although not much over sixty, was afflicted by shaking paralysis and in 1838 he retired. He did not withdraw his capital and accepted an agreed income of £80 a year from the business.

Even in his illness and old age he was still mentally irrepressible and went off to live with a brother at Stoke on Trent, where he died of paralysis on 24 May 1849(6), at the age of seventy three.

HUNTLEY, Joseph (1807-1895)

Joseph Huntley, the son of Joseph Huntley (1775-1849 qv) and his wife Mary, born Willis, of Sibford Ferris and Reading, was born at Sibford Ferris on 8 October 1807(1). His father had for a short time run a small Quaker school at Sibford Ferris, but he relinquished it to go to Reading in 1811 and there is at present (1975) no trace of Joseph's early education. He was apprenticed to an ironmonger in Reading, who was also a brazier, coppersmith and tinplate worker and was distantly related to the Huntley family by marriage.

He completed his training in the Black Country and in 1832 he returned to Reading, joined Reading Meeting and opened an ironmongers' shop next door to the Crown Inn, immediately opposite the biscuit bakery and confectionery business started by his father and elder brother Thomas (1803-1857 qv) in 1832. One of his first commissions was a request from his father that he should make tins and tin lined boxes which would keep biscuits fresh in transport. In 1838 he took on as an apprentice William Isaac Palmer (1824-1893 qv) and the first tenuous link between the Huntleys and the Palmers was formed.

During the 1840s he acquired a partner to assist in his expanding business, his nephew by marriage Joseph Boorne (1824-1910 qv) and the firm became known as Huntley and Boorne. By this time the Reading biscuit partnership of Huntley and Palmer, consisting of Joseph's brother Thomas and William Isaac Palmer's brother George Palmer (1818-1897 qv) had come into existence and about a third of the business done by Huntley and Boorne was in tin biscuit boxes; the remainder comprised retail sales of ironmongery. Later on the firm acquired a third partner, Samuel Beavan Stevens, and became known as Huntley, Boorne and Stevens. One of their most important commissions from Huntley and Palmer was the design of star tins for the Christmas trade. In 1918 the firm, after over eighty years of successful trading, was finally taken over by Huntley and Palmer.

Joseph was married in 1851 to Mary Lamb, a confectioner of Banbury(2), but there were no children of the marriage(3). He was a man of a remarkably modest and retiring disposition, but was a decidedly religious character from his youth, which was largely influenced by the ministry of Joseph John Gurney (1788-1847 qv) and his association with Peter Bedford (1780-1864 qv), and throughout his life he was a consistent Friend; on various occasions he was distrained for the nonpayment of Church rates. In ~~1853~~, like his father and his grandfather before him, he was recorded a minister of the Society; his appearances in the ministry were usually brief and infrequent, of a simple and feeling character and were mostly confined to the area of his own quarterly meeting. "His influence was great and continuous in the direction of 'the word spoken in due season,' in strict privacy, or by correspondence."(4)

He took no active part in municipal or political life, but had an early interest in philanthropy and in various peace, temperance, educational and other organisations, both local and of a more general character. His Will, including bequests to many missions, schools, orphanages and charitable institutions, reflected his lifelong concern for the welfare of his fellows.

He died at Reading on 24 July 1895(5), in his eighty eighth year.

HUNTLEY, Mary (1773-1821) born Willis

Mary Willis, the daughter of Binfield Willis (1749-1782 qv) and his wife Ann (born Speakman, 1751-1789 qv) of Reading, was born there on 26 December 1773(1).

Her grandfather Binfield Willis (1710?-1786 qv) had been a wealthy maltster and left his property in trust for his grandchildren, so that after his death Mary became a householder in her own right in a handsome house in London Street, Reading. She suffered for her beliefs and her property was distrained at various times for non-payment of church rates(2).

She sacrificed her independence to marry in 1801 Joseph Huntley (1775-1849 qv) and there were six children(3). Her husband was a farmer at Sibford Ferris, but he gave up farming to become a schoolmaster in 1806 and, although he was a Quaker minister, he proved an erratic and unstable husband. He suffered financial reverses which reduced the family to living in a small house in Reading on slender resources, a position which Mary felt keenly. After his wife's death, he became the founder of Huntley & Palmer, the biscuit manufacturers(4).

Mary Huntley of Reading died on 14 April 1821, at the age of forty seven(5).

HUNTLEY, Thomas (1733-1813)

Thomas Huntley, the only son of Joseph Huntley (1706/7-1756 qv) and his wife Mary, born Potter, of Burford in Oxfordshire, was born there on 11.vii.(September)1733(1). His early life and education are not at present (1975) traced, but from 1751, when he was about eighteen, until the early 1800s he was headmaster of a day and boarding school for the sons of Friends, known as Hillside Academy, at the top of the steep hill which is one of Burford's most noteworthy features. It was one of the two most important Quaker schools in southern England, he was well known amongst Friends and his house was regularly visited by members of the Society going to and from meetings, especially London Yearly Meeting, of which he was Clerk in 1792. Like his father he was a competent scholar, but in languages rather than divinity, for he compiled French, Latin and English grammars and wrote fairly good Latin verses as well as indifferent English ones. His most celebrated pupil was the astronomer and manufacturing chemist Luke Howard (1772-1864 qv).

He was a cautious, pedantic man and was approaching forty before he was married for the first time, in 1770 to Mary Coles(2); there were four children of the marriage, only two of whom survived infancy(3). Mary died, probably in childbirth, in 1777(4) and in 1778 he took as his second wife Hannah Cowdry(5), who bore him seven children(6). Although he gained the affection of everyone who knew him, he has been described as a colourless personality beside his second wife Hannah. She brought both energy and religious zeal to the task of bringing up her family and her two step-children and also became matron of the school. As soon as her youngest child was old enough she was recorded a minister and made at least one journey outside the area of her own meeting.

Thomas Huntley was accepted as a minister when he was about fifty / seven and his ministry was unexpectedly lively and refreshing(7). "He was exemplary in the practice of reading the Holy Scriptures and diligent in the attendance of our religious Meetings, even in the latter part of his time when Infirmity rendered him unable to walk, and in the support of the Discipline he was zealous and active."(8)

After the beginning of the nineteenth century the school began to decline in numbers, perhaps due to Thomas Huntley's advancing age, perhaps to the competition from schools like Ackworth, which was founded in 1779.(9)

He died at Burford on 20 June 1813(10), in his eightieth year.

HUNTLEY, Thomas (1803-1857)

Thomas Huntley, the elder son of Joseph Huntley (1775-1849 qv) and his wife Mary, born Willis, of Sibford Ferris and Reading, was born at Sibford Ferris on 7 April 1803(1). He probably received his early education at the school kept by his father for a few years at Sibford Ferris, but nothing is known of his subsequent schooling except that during a reversal in his father's fortunes, when he was about eleven, his education was part of the subject of a dispute between Reading and Banbury Monthly Meetings. He was gentle and scholarly by nature and an academic career would have suited him, but his father had other ideas for him and at the age of fourteen he was sent away to be apprenticed to a Quaker grocer, Benjamin Doubleday, at Epping near London. After spending two years with Benjamin Doubleday he moved at the age of seventeen to Uxbridge, where he lived with his uncle John Huntley (1784-1871 qv), who had a bakery and biscuit shop there.

In 1822 he returned to Reading, where his father had decided to open a biscuit bakery and confectioner's shop in London Street. Thomas was by then a fully trained baker and the arrangement was that his father would manage the business, Thomas would do the baking and one or other of his sisters would help in the shop. The business prospered, although it had initial financial difficulties, and by 1837 the first surviving account book showed a turnover on credit accounts of £1410 for the year.

Joseph Huntley, whose energy and drive had established the business, retired in 1838; although not much over sixty he was badly affected by a shaking paralysis and could no longer take an active part in its day to day affairs. He did not withdraw his capital, but agreed to accept an annual income of £80 until his death eleven years later.

Joseph Huntley's retirement posed a managerial problem. Thomas Huntley, excellent craftsman as he was, did not really possess the capacity to run the business on his own and had not been made a partner until he was twenty six. Although in 1832 he had married Jane Evans(2), who bore him an only son(3), and Joseph had moved into a nearby house with one of his unmarried daughters, Joseph had remained effectively in charge of the business. The situation was complicated by Thomas' own ill health, for he was suffering from prostate trouble. He therefore had to find a partner to take his father's place and to provide capital for future expansion. The kind of partner he sought had first of all to be a Quaker, secondly to be thoroughly trained in biscuit making; third, he would preferably be a former journeyman working for the first time on his own, since Thomas wished to be the senior partner; and fourth, he must be able to bring into the partnership a reasonably large amount of capital, in the region of £500 for a half share.

Thomas had to wait three years before the right partner arrived on the scene. According to tradition George Palmer (1813-1897 qv), of the Quaker family of yeomen of Long Sutton in Somerset, happened to be passing through Reading on his way to London, with plans which would revolutionise biscuit production. He stopped at the Crown Inn, saw Thomas Huntley's shop across the road, struck up an acquaintance with him and on learning that he was looking for a partner, offered himself for the situation. But it is much more likely that George Palmer went to Reading deliberately; his brother William Isaac Palmer (1824-1893 qv) was already an apprentice ironmonger in the town and would have kept him in touch with events. But however it came about, the partnership agreement was signed on 24 June 1841 and the business of Huntley and Palmer, biscuit makers of Reading, was born.

Thomas Huntley's status as senior partner was recognised in various ways and he was to keep the accounts and ledgers as well as supervising the packing department, seven hours a day on this work; over and above this he was "not obliged to attend any further than he shall think proper." This change was not entirely to his liking. He had worked contentedly on biscuit making for twenty years and disliked accounting; he did not understand the difference between a profit and loss account and a balance sheet and his first efforts at accounting had to be corrected by George Palmer. There were other causes for tension; George Palmer's energy and initiative tended to develop the business beyond what Thomas thought its capital resources would stand. "George will ruin us," he lamented, and to the dynamic young man who was not yet twenty nine he pleaded "George, thee let well alone."

But George was not content to let well alone. Under his guidance a new factory was built, up to date machinery installed and a team of representatives appointed who covered most of the country. In all these projects the impression is that he carried his partner along with him, but if his methods and industry won him the respect of his workpeople it was Thomas Huntley who earned their devotion.

A further cause of trouble arose about 1850, when the question of taking other members of the family into partnership was broached. George Palmer wanted to introduce his brother Samuel (1830-1893 qv) as manager, with a prospect of a partnership after four or five years. Thomas refused to consider the proposal unless his son Henry (1833-1919 qv), a young man of seventeen, was given a similar opportunity, but George had no confidence in Henry, an only son alternately indulged and bullied by his mother, and the matter was referred to three Quaker arbitrators. It transpired that Thomas Huntley had been neglecting the accounts, so a full time accountant was appointed to relieve him and Henry Huntley was sent to Colchester to receive professional training. Samuel Palmer came into the Reading office to take charge of sales.

This arbitration and its results marked the effective end of Thomas Huntley's association with the firm. His untreated prostate condition caused him much pain and discomfort; early in 1857 he wrote his partner a poignant letter with the news that a cold had worsened and thrown him sadly back. Two months later, on 3 March 1857(4) he was dead, a merciful release from sufferings which he had borne for many years with patience and resignation.

HURST, John (1776-1855)

John Hurst was born at West Woodside in the Isle of Axholme in 1776, his parents being in low circumstances. At the age of 7 he was sent to work in a brickfield, and continued there for nine years. He then went into agricultural service and about this time began to attend Methodist meetings, but failing to find what he sought there, attended the established church in which he was confirmed.

About this time he moved into South Lincolnshire and entered the employment of a Friend. He taught himself to read and, helped by Turford's Grounds of a holy life, began to attend Friends' meetings. He was received into membership in 1813.

He was a regular attender of meetings for worship and discipline, and for many years walked to Quarterly Meetings, a distance of some 50 miles. He was a frequent attender of Yearly Meeting. He was for some years an elder and in 1836 was recorded a minister. His service was chiefly within the compass of his own Q.M.

Though his strength declined with advancing years he was able to attend meetings for worship until within a few weeks of his death on 21 April 1855, aged 79 years. His body was interred at Spalding.

HURTLEY, Helen (1826-1911) born Burtt

Helen Burtt, the eldest surviving daughter of William Burtt (1791-1863 qv) and his wife Mary, born Petchell, of Lendenham in Lincolnshire, later of Hull and Selby in Yorkshire and finally of Wellingore in Lincolnshire, was born at Lendenham on 3 December 1826(1). She was educated at Ackworth School from 1839 to 1841(2) and soon after leaving school she went to York to keep house for her brother Petchell Burtt (1818-1865 qv). When Petchell married in 1865 she returned home to help her parents.

She was married in 1876 to Henry Hurtley of Old Malton(3) and their home became a place of rest and refreshment for many relatives and friends. She was an elder of Malton Meeting.

She died at Malton on 30 May 1911(4), in her eighty fifth year.

HUSTLER, Christiana (1731-1811) born Hird

Christiana Hird, the daughter of William Hird (1694-1762 qv) and his wife Sarah of Woodhouse in Rawden in the parish of Guiseley, Yorkshire, was born there on 24.ix.(November)1731(1). Her parents were honourable and exemplary members of the Society and brought up their children in the knowledge and love of God. In spite of her early training, she did not altogether escape the normal temptations of youthful high spirits and her struggle was the greater in that she gradually became convinced that she would be called to the ministry. She came forth in public testimony when she was twenty years old and was frequently engaged in travelling in religious service, visiting at different times most, if not all, of the meetings of Friends in Great Britain and Ireland. In the year 1792 she went to Dunkirk.

She was married in 1763 to John Hustler (1715-1790 qv) and there were six children(2). She was an excellent example of dedication and a regular attender at meetings for worship, in spite of an illness which gradually weakened her. Her ministry was "sound, clear in discernment and zealous in the support of the cause of Truth in its ancient purity. Her testimonies, tho' generally distinguished by their earnest and persuasive simplicity, were at times pointed . . and always attended with an affectionate solicitude that we might not be inactive or superficial in our pursuit of the one thing needful; but that we might really be what we professed to be, even built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

In private life her manners were kind and engaging, her conversation interesting and instructive; she had a cultivated mind and was gentle and lady-like(3). She had a great influence over young people, especially those who were wandering from the fold. Her health began to decline about the year 1810 and she proceeded rapidly to become worse, being forced to keep to her room although she still enjoyed the company of her friends.

Christiana Hustler of Undercliffe in Bradford died on 27 June 1811, at the age of seventy nine(4).

HUSTLER, John (1674?-1724)

John Hustler, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1978) traced, was born about the year 1674(1). Members of the Hustler family were among the earliest followers of George Fox and John Hustler, together with three other Friends from Yeadon where he lived, was prosecuted in the Exchequer for tithes at the suit of William Wilson, the Rector of Guiseley. "The Parson, after some Time, dropt his Proceedings in the Exchequer and took his Demands by Warrant from a Justice of the Peace."

It was said that to the Hustlers Bradford owed more than to anyone else the extension of its trade and the development of the town; as woolstaplers and merchants they became very wealthy.

John Hustler was married in 1708 to Mercy Overend(2) and there were three children(3). He is described as of Yeadon in the parish of Guiseley, Yorkshire, and died on 13.viii.(October)1724 at the age of fifty(4).

HUSTLER, John (1715-1790)

John Hustler, the son of William Hustler (-1759 qv) and his wife Jane, born Jowett, of Bolton in the parish of Calverley, Yorkshire, was born there on 5.viii.(October)1715(1). He was married in 1763 to Christiana Hird (1731-1811 qv) of Rawden in Yorkshire(2) and there were six children(3). He is variously described as a merchant, woolstapler and woolcomber, and sorter; and by means of application and industry he acquired a large fortune.

He first lived at Bolton House, a fine mansion of which the site of Peel Park formed the grounds and farm lands. He afterwards bought an estate at Undercliffe of about ninety acres, laying out the grounds and building Undercliffe House, where he kept open house for Friends and where any person of reputation in the Society had a cordial welcome. His hospitality was not limited to Friends and many of other denominations were also entertained there.

He was a man of great energy, foresight and tact, with strong natural abilities, pleasing in his person and consistently polite in his manner. Wise, benevolent and indefatigable, he was ever ready to promote the interests of mankind. He took a large share in the formation of the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, helping to steer the Bill through Parliament when he was suffering from his last illness, and for this project he spared neither time nor money. He undertook the erection of many public buildings, including the Public Hall at Bradford and he also helped in the founding of Ackworth School.

In the discipline of the Society he showed sound judgment and great candour. He did not speak in meetings for the sake of speaking, doing nothing for ostentation or a display of knowledge and upon many occasions when matters were being rightly conducted he was quite silent. He was of a cheerful disposition, steady in his friendships and charitable to the poor, an affectionate husband, a tender father and a kind master.

John Hustler of Undercliffe, Bradford in Yorkshire, died peacefully after a painful illness on 6 November 1790, at the age of seventy five(4).

RUSTLER, John (1768-1842)

John Hustler, the younger son of John Hustler (1715-1790 qv) and his wife Christians (born Hird, 1731-1811 qv) of Undercliffe, Bradford in Yorkshire, was born there on 29 November 1768(1). He lived at Bolton House and later at Undercliffe, which he bought from the representatives of his elder brother William (1766-1802 qv) for £12,000. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Pease (1770-1806 qv), the daughter of Joseph and Mary Pease of Darlington, whom he married in 1798(2), but the marriage was childless(3). His wife died in 1806 and after being a widower for nine years he was married in 1815 to Mary Mildred (1778-1871 qv), the daughter of Daniel Mildred, a well known banker of London(4); there was one child(5).

Like his father, John took an active part in public life, becoming the most energetic and progressive man in Bradford. Hustlers by nature as well as by name, they seem to have lived ahead of their generation and, perhaps because they were Dissenters, met with uncompromising opposition in their efforts to improve the town. Within the Society of Friends they were powerful leaders and whatever they set their hands to they did with energy and determination. They inspired confidence by their uprightness and honesty as well as by their liberality and John Hustler was an elder of his meeting.

He organised the Friends' School in Chapel Street and gave generously to its funds. He took a large part in founding the Friends' Provident Institution in 1832 and was treasurer and a director from 1832 until his death in 1842. At the inception of the Institution guarantors were necessary to underwrite £10,700 and John Hustler's name headed the list. He took up in earnest the minute of London Yearly Meeting which resulted in the founding of Rawden School, was a leading botanist and had an extensive library and a large collection of scientific objects. He was a noted farmer and is said to have been the first man to use bone as manure. He was reputed to have owned property valued at over a quarter of a million pounds.

John Hustler of Undercliffe, Bradford, died at York, where he had a country house(6), on 18 January 1842, at the age of seventy three(7), deeply mourned by many and especially by his old servants and retainers.

John Mildred Hustler, the only son of John Hustler (1768-1842 qv) and his second wife Mary (born Mildred, 1773-1871 qv) of Undercliffe, Bradford in Yorkshire, was born at York on 21 July 1816(1). He was as gay as his father was sedate. A popular young man, of good address, he had entree into the best society and was easily misled. He was very fond of sport and was of an excitable and wilful disposition yet he was not without ability.

His extravagance brought both him and his father into serious financial difficulty and was a matter of concern to his relations, who could not help contrasting his immature judgment and over confidence with the dignity of his grandfather and the respect in which his father was held.

He died at Bradford on 19 August 1849 at the age of thirty three(2), when he had set himself the task of retrieving the family fortunes.

HUSTLER, Mary (1778-1871) born Mildred

Mary Mildred, the twin daughter of Daniel Mildred, a noted London banker, and his wife Lydia, was born in London on 29 August 1778(1). Her father died when she was only nine years old and this tragic loss deprived her of the parental care which would have ensured her upbringing strictly in accordance with the views of the Society. Nevertheless, she was impressed by the beauty and consistency of Quaker worship and she and her twin sister Martha, the youngest of a large family and the devoted companions of their mother in her widowhood, endured many trials of spirit before they were wholeheartedly able to embrace Quakerism.

In the year 1799 Mary Mildred moved with her mother and sister to Tottenham, a change which she welcomed both on social and religious grounds. In 1811 she left Tottenham for York, on the occasion of her sister's marriage and lived there until 1815, when she became the second wife of John Hustler (1768-1842 qv) of Undercliffe, Bradford; there was one child(2).

By her marriage she entered upon an enlarged sphere of usefulness, devoting much of her time to visiting the poor and taking a warm interest in the promotion of education. Besides organising and superintending local schools she was for some years a valued member of the Ackworth and Rawden School Committees. Her cheerful disposition endeared her to the young, for whom she felt a loving interest and her presence and encouragement often inspired fresh energy to work. She was concerned for spiritual instruction and her own wide knowledge of the Bible and her habit of devoting some time each morning to reading and meditating upon the Scriptures made her particularly fitted for this task.

She first appeared in the ministry in the year 1837 and was recorded by Brighouse Monthly Meeting in 1842. Her ministry, which had its spring in loving allegiance to her Saviour, was mainly given within her own quarterly meeting and "was exercised in humility and in the fear of the Lord. Her communications, whilst brief, were lively, and to the comfort and edification of her friends." (Testimony) Living through many troubles herself, she was able to enter sympathetically into the trials of others.

After her husband's death in 1842 she moved to York and a few years later her only son died at Bradford after a short illness. Almost simultaneously with these bereavements she had to face great and unexpected financial losses, which she bore with great fortitude; her widowhood and her loneliness did not embitter her and her whole life was characterised by Christian love and unselfish kindness. As long as she could she loved to join her friends at meeting for worship, which she was able to do until over ninety years of age. To the last her natural cheerfulness did not forsake her, nor her considerate thought for others; her faith in the goodness and mercy which had been shown her throughout her life was unshaken.

Mary Hustler of St Paul's Square, York, died after a short illness on 26 February 1871, at the age of ninety two(3).

HUSTLER, Sarah (1765-1817)

Sarah Hustler, the daughter of John Hustler (1715-1790 qv) and his wife Christiana (born Hind, 1731-1811 qv) of Undercliffe, Bradford in Yorkshire, was born there on 26 February 1765(1).

She had a naturally strong and vigorous mind, tempered by the Christian principles in which she had been educated. She first appeared in the ministry when she was about thirty three, in few and halting words and her struggles to overcome her natural diffidence were many, but she was in the end well qualified to offer counsel and advice to those on a similar course. She was recorded a minister about 1799 and gave much valuable service, principally in the compass of her own monthly meeting. "In the discipline of the Church her discernment was clear, her judgment sound, and her zeal in support of it in the right authority - the wisdom and power of God, well tempered; equally concerned to discourage any unsanctified intrusion into religious service, and tenderly to cherish every little act of obedience, performed in childlike simplicity, with maternal solicitude."

When her father died the care of her aged mother devolved increasingly upon her and she discharged faithfully every duty that filial tenderness could suggest. She was able for the years 1795 to 1800 to act as Clerk to the Women's Yearly Meeting(2) and after her mother's death she went in 1814 to Germany and the south of France with Elizabeth Goggeshall (1770-1851 qv)(3).

In 1816 she moved into Bradford and in August 1816 she travelled with certificate to the half year's meeting at Aberdeen and visited a few other meetings in Scotland. On her return from Scotland she joined a London Yearly Meeting Committee appointed to visit the quarterly meetings of Cumberland, although she was not well at the time. Her illness increasing, she was obliged to stop at the house of a Friend at Maryport, where she partially recovered to the extent of looking forward to returning home, but she had a relapse and died on 26 October 1817, at the age of fifty three(4). 7
