HUTCHINSON, Alfred (1860-1931)

Alfred Hutchinson, the son of Henry Hutchinson (1829-1915 qv) and his wife Elizabeth (born Richardson, 1833-1924 qv) of Selby in Yorkshire, was born there on 27 July 1860(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1872 to 1876(2).

On leaving school he joined his father on a farm at Bozeat near Wellingborough in Northamptonshire, until in 1882 he went to Canada. He first settled in the west on Long Lake, about eighty miles from Regina and in 1884 he was married to Harriet Allen of Mount Forrest, Ontario.

After three years of drought he went in search of better land and settled on the White River, near Yorktown, but finding himself in the midst of colonies of people all speaking different languages, he decided to move back to Mount Forrest.

He did not take any part in public life but was associated with the local Wesleyan Church and was an elder amongst them. He was also a justice of the peace for Yorktown. He had a large circle of friends and was highly respected in the district for the sterling worth of his character.

Alfred Hutchinson died on 20 October 1931, at the age of seventy one.

HUTCHINSON, Anna (1787-1853)

Anna Hutchinson was born at Richmond, Yorkshire in 1787. Her parents were members of the Church of England in which she was brought up. After the death of her mother when she was aged 12 she was some years given to the amusements of the card table, the ball room, and the theatre. After her father's death in 1814 she became interested in the Wesleyans whom she joined in 1817, removing shortly afterwards to Darlington. A few Wesleyans there were accustomed to meet together for silent worship and occasionally to attend Friends Meetings. It was on such an occasion, and under the ministry of Nathan Hunt, that she was convinced that she must throw in her lot with Friends and she was admitted into membership in 1822., appearing in the ministry the following year.

She lived for a short time at Beverley and afterwards at Reeth but for the last 20 years she lived at Bishop Auckland. Her health was for many years delicate and often precarious. She died on 23 December 1853 aged nearly 67. Her body was interred in Friends' burial ground at Bishop Auckland.

HUTCHINSON, Edmund (1870-1926)

Edmund Hutchinson, the son of Henry Hutchinson (1829-1915 qv) and his wife Elizabeth, born Richardson, of Flaxley Lodge near Selby in Yorkshire, was born there on 11 May 1870(1). He was educated at a Friends' School and was married in 1900 to Lydia Mary Davy (1872-1964 qv), the daughter of Dennis Davy (1835?-1872 qv) of Derby(2) and there were three children(3).

Brought up to farming, he continued in that occupation all his life, spending nine years at Burton Latimer near Kettering in Northamptonshire and nearly twenty years at Broughton. In 1910 he was elected to Kettering Rural District Council and to the Board of Guardians and was chairman of the latter in 1919. He was a member of the National Farmers' Union, a member of the County Agricultural Committee, chairman for a time of Broughton Parish Council as well as occupying several other public offices.

He was a man of sterling character who never spared himself and it is possible that his public duties, carried out without consideration for his own ease or comfort, on top of his work as a farmer, contributed to his early death. He was above all things a man of action, not precipitate, but once convinced of the rightness of a particular course he would pursue it regardless of cost. A firm believer in total abstinence, he refused to grow barley, although it would have been profitable and useful in his rotation of crops. He was conservative in character, but he had a mind open to improvements and was constantly trying out new methods.

He was a fine example of Christianity applied to daily life and men trusted him. He was faithful in his attendance at Kettering Meeting, although it was very small and he and his family sometimes made up half the members present.

He died at ^{Cransley} Grange, Broughton on 14 April 1926, at the age of fifty five(4).

HUTCHINSON, Emily (1868-1947) 2+

Emily Hutchinson, the daughter of Henry Hutchinson (1829-1915 qv) and his wife Elizabeth, born Richardson, of Flaxley Lodge, near Selby in Yorkshire, was born there on 13 April 1868(1). She was educated at Polam School, Darlington and Minden House, Colchester. By profession she was a kindergarten teacher and later a midwife.

In 1896 her brother-in-law Theodore Burtt (1863-1944 qv), the husband of her sister Jessie (1866-1956 qv), started his work for freed slaves in Pemba and in 1898 Emily joined him there. Her service was mainly among the women and children and the Indian women of the island, among whom her maternity work was mainly done, presented her with beautiful gold ornaments as tokens of their gratitude. A member of the Universities Mission said of her that "Wherever she went in East Africa she brought calm, peace and joy." She retired officially in 1927, but continued to live for many years in her little Arab house, helping wherever she could and developing her artistic talent.

In 1946 she returned to England and died at the house of her sister Jessie on 17 October 1947(2), at the age of seventy nine. One who knew her well wrote of her:-

"To remain so youthful in spirit, so active, so unaffected by the years, at the same time so faithful and steadfast, is a wonderful achievement. She was always ready with the right word of encouragement. Her trust in the Lord she served, and 'in that of God in every man,' gave her a cheerfulness in the face of every difficulty."

HUTCHINSON, John (1794-1875)

John Hutchinson, the eldest son of Jonathan Hutchinson (1760-1835 qv), 'the good man of Gedney,' and his wife Rachel (born Procter, 1766-1808 qv) was born at Gedney on 12 September 1794(1). Nothing is at present (1976) traced of his early life and education, but his mother died when he was about fourteen and he was brought up with the help of his cousin Sarah Burtt, the eldest daughter of his uncle William Burtt (1761-1832 qv), who had married his father's sister Lydia; Sarah moved to Gedney and became his father's housekeeper(2).

Some years before his death in 1835 Jonathan Hutchinson made over the farm to John(3). It is probable, as six of his children were born in Lincolnshire, that John continued to farm at Gedney until his father's death, but he had connections at Chatteris in the Isle of Ely, where in 1823 he had married Elizabeth Bateman(4); there were eight or nine children(5). John appeared in Chatteris about 1835(6), where he became a wool dealer(7). He is believed to have returned to Lincolnshire for a time(8), but he finally moved to Selby in Yorkshire(9), where his brother Jonathan (1797-1872 qv) was a flax merchant.

He took over from a poor relation a farm called Summercroft, a few miles out of Selby; it was an old family property and near the farmhouse there was a Quaker burial ground. The Hutchinsons, however, did not live on the farm; they rented a house in Selby and John rode out daily to Summercroft to superintend the work of the farm(10).

He died on 23 August 1875(11), in his eighty first year.

HUTCHINSON, John Bateman (1827-1897)

John Bateman Hutchinson, the son of John Hutchinson (1794-1875 qv) and his wife Elizabeth (born Bateman, 1800-1884 qv) of Gedney in Lincolnshire, was born there on 13 September 1827(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1838 to 1842(2). He spent most of his life in Nottingham.

In politics he was a Liberal from deep and sincere conviction and was a leader of the local party. He held wealth to be a sacred trust, to be used to promote such causes as advanced the moral, material and intellectual welfare of the people and for these purposes he gave his invaluable aid, his advice being formed on reason and a well balanced judgment. He knew that financial help was a first necessity to development and he gave without stint, only requiring that the funds of the various institutions which he helped should be wisely and honestly expended.

But his chief interest in life was that of religious equality. He held that its beauty and influence were best secured by freedom and individual conviction and to this end he joined the Liberation Society and was for twenty five years a leading member of the local branch.

He was transparently honest, generous to his opponents, extremely modest and hopeful that right would triumph by the intelligent wish of the electorate.

John Bateman Hutchinson of Park, Nottingham, died on 5 August 1897, at the age of sixty nine(3).

HUTCHINSON, John Burtt (1857-1929)

John Burtt Hutchinson, the eldest son of William Hutchinson (1828-1911 qv) and his wife Lucy (born Burtt, 1833-1896 qv) of Gunby near Selby in Yorkshire, was born there on 9 November 1857(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1868 to 1872(2) and went on to Bootham School, York, from 1872 to 1873(3).

After leaving school he was apprenticed to Priestman Brothers, engineers of Hull. Following his apprenticeship he went to Manchester for a year and then joined the Great Northern Railway works at Doncaster, being in the shops and drawing office until 1883, when he went to Natal as draughtsman to the Natal State Railways for about six years. On returning to England he joined the firm of Reckitt's at Hull as works engineer for some years. He then started in business for himself, but was not successful; he obtained a post with Earle's Ltd of Hull, where he remained until his death.

He was married in 1892 to Agnes B.Gee(4), who never became a member of the Society of Friends(5) and there were three children(6).

John Burtt Hutchinson of Hull died on 11 July 1929, at the age of seventy one(7).

HUTCHINSON, John Henry (1864-1956)

John Henry Hutchinson, the son of Henry Hutchinson (1829-1915 qv) and his wife Elizabeth (born Richardson, 1833-1924 qv) of Selby in Yorkshire, was born there on 9 December 1864(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1876 to 1880(2).

Five years after leaving school he went out to join his elder brother, who was farming in north west Canada. He took up a homestead, but owing to difficulties about water supply he gave it up and returned to England for six months. Then he went back to join his brother and two other young Englishmen in a cattle raising project.

In 1891 he crossed the border into Oregon, bought a farm at Newberg and became a United States citizen. Two years later he married Cora Lena Bates and in 1895 they moved to Whittier in California. There he worked in the oilfields, but not wanting his family to grow up in such surroundings, he bought a house at Lawndale, a new town, in 1909. The same year the family paid a visit to England.

On his return to California John Hutchinson went into partnership in a grocery store business, but after six years he took a position with the Shell Oil Company at Coalingo, retaining his house at Lawndale. He remained with the Shell Oil Company for nineteen years, until his retirement from business life. He was an active man, clear headed and interested in many sides of social life. He held several offices in the local Improvement Association, was an elder of the Community Church and was for many years superintendent of the Chapel Sunday School.

He was very fond of gardening and remained active until nearly the end of his life. His wife died in 1940 and shortly before his death he sold his house and went to live with his eldest granddaughter.

John Henry Hutchinson died in hospital, following a stroke from which he never recovered consciousness, on 10 July 1956, at the age of ninety one.

HUTCHINSON, Jonathan (1760-1835)

Jonathan Hutchinson, the son of John and Lydia Hutchinson of Gedney in Lincolnshire, was born there on 7 February 1760(1). He was educated at Hartshill School in Warwickshire, where he formed a close friendship with William Burtt (1761-1832 qv) who later married his sister Lydia. In early life he deviated very far from the principles of the Society, but the death of the girl to whom he was engaged turned his thoughts into more sombre channels and he became aware of the extent to which he had fallen away both in his conduct and his associates from the path of rectitude.

1792/ He became a plain Friend and after an interval of some years he married Rachel Froster(2); there were six children of the marriage(3).

He was a skilful farmer, excelled by none of his neighbours in such matters and was a man of considerable intellectual ability. He read widely and thought deeply on many subjects, was fond of poetry and nature for him was clothed in splendour. With such pursuits, tastes and habits of mind he was the chosen companion of all who enjoyed his intimacy. He was also very hospitable and friends and acquaintances were made very welcome at his home at Gedney. His wife died in 1808(4) and his niece Sarah, the elder daughter of William and Lydia Burtt, came to Gedney to keep house for him; she lived with him for about ten years and only left Gedney for her own marriage.

He appeared in the ministry when he was about forty five years old and was a frequent attender at Yearly Meeting for many years; his services therein were greatly valued and he was several times appointed to serve on committees visiting the quarterly and monthly meetings, where his services were much appreciated. He was a devout and faithful Quaker, most regular in attendance at meetings for worship and discipline and never allowing distance or inclement weather to impede him. His monthly meeting was usually held at a considerable distance from Gedney and his quarterly meeting at Lincoln, fifty miles away; his weight of character and sound discretion gave him great influence and were a comfort to his friends. It was during one of these solitary journeys on horseback that he had a vision which changed the course of his life and made him thereafter a power for good for all those with whom he came in contact.

Looking back on his life near its close he told a friend that "the last thirty years of his life had been much occupied in going from home, and attending meetings: that he dare not stop at home when duty appeared to call him therefrom, though it might appear that for which he was called was very small; that he had often known when travelling alone on these occasions, they had proved seasons of great spiritual comfort and refreshment."

Some time before his death he gave up his farm at Gedney to his eldest son John (1794-1875 qv) and retired to a house nearby, where he spent his declining years in peace and quiet. He had become known as 'the good man of Gedney'. When he died on 1 April 1835(?) many Friends from distant parts were present at his funeral and the people of the neighbourhood flocked to pay their last respects. "So the best man in Gedney is gone," said one labourer to another. "What," said the other, "is Mr Hutchinson dead?"

HUTCHINSON, Jonathan (1797-1872)

Jonathan Hutchinson, the second son of Jonathan Hutchinson (1760-1835 qv), 'the good man of Gedney,' and his wife Rachel (born Procter, 1766-1808 qv) was born at Gedney on 7 November 1797(1). Nothing is at present (1976) traced of his early life and education, but his mother died when he was about eleven and he was brought up with the help of his cousin Sarah Burtt, the elder daughter of his uncle William Burtt (1761-1832 qv), who had married his father's sister Lydia; Sarah moved to Gedney and became his father's housekeeper(2).

At the age of fourteen he was sent to Selby in Yorkshire, where his uncles Thomas Procter (1754-1840 qv) and William Procter (1764-1855 qv) were in business as flax merchants; Thomas Procter was perhaps the wealthiest man in Selby(3). Jonathan settled in well to the trade and remained a flax merchant of Selby all his life. He had also an intense love for agricultural pursuits, which in spite of his business pre-occupations he managed to find time to maintain, and in his latter years the management of a small farm was his chief employment and recreation. He was married in 1825 to Elisabeth Massey(4) and there were twelve children(5). His brother John (1794-1875 qv), who later came to live nearby with his large family, gave plenty of scope for a warm and happy family life.

Jonathan Hutchinson's life was one of home quiet. He had his warehouses for the storage of flax, linseed and cheese and visited all the market towns round Selby to meet the farmers and buy flax. The assessment of the quality of flax had its humorous side. The orthodox way was to take the head of the bundle between the knees and holding it firmly gripped, to stoop over it in a good light and turn the fibres with both hands; a group of flax merchants thus engaged presented a ludicrous spectacle.

Jonathan was a zealous politician, always on the Liberal side, and a keen advocate in turn for the Reform Bill and for the Repeal of the Corn Laws. But the reform which engaged his interest to an overwhelming degree was that of temperance and from the day on which he took the pledge he devoted his best energies to its promotion. He attended all the temperance meetings in the town, often took the chair, subscribed liberally to the funds and frequently entertained lecturers in his home. The temperance movement made such headway in Selby that for a time it seemed likely that the whole town would be abstinent. The clergy, however, held coldly aloof or were even opposed to the work. There was also a quiet but determined opposition among the upper and middle classes. Neither doctors nor lawyers joined the movement and no licensed houses were actually closed, although at the height of the enthusiasm their profits must have suffered.

*He was granted a certificate of removal from Spalding & Mainfleet MM to York MM on 13 May 1813 (Letter from Norman Leveritt, 8 May 1976)

He was an elder of his meeting, a sensitive, quiet man, easily wounded; yet he possessed courage in emergency and a clear judgment which made him, even in his declining years, a sure guide and adviser to his large and scattered family. Throughout his life he was a regular attender at Friends' meetings, was often nominated for Society appointments and gave his time and services freely. In later life he often spoke in meetings, both in prayer and testimony, and his communications, although short, were always acceptable to Friends. He was a man in whom, through all his life, the love of Christ burned with a clear and steady flame.

He died on 5 July 1872(6), at the age of seventy four.

HUTCHINSON, Jonathan (1828-1913) J

Jonathan Hutchinson was born at Selby, Yorks, 23 July 1828, the son of Jonathan (merchant) and Elizabeth Hutchinson (1). He was not sent to school, but educated by Jane and Elizabeth Procter, who afterwards founded Polam Hall School. In January 1845, at the age of 17, he was apprenticed for 5 years to Caleb Williams of York, during the last 2 of which he was to be allowed to attend York Hospital. In 1846 he entered the York School of Medicine. In 1850 he went to London, took his diploma at the College of Surgeons, and attended lectures at St. Bartholomew's Hospital. He returned to York for part of the year as House Surgeon, but was in London again in 1851 as Clinical Assistant at Liverpool St. Chest Hospital.

As a young man he showed great earnestness and industry. He rose early, worked hard, read widely in French and English - history, biography and poetry - and kept a journal in which he noted sermons he had heard, and reviewed his conduct week by week. Although convinced of the truth of Quaker doctrine, he regarded minor peculiarities, such as the broad-brimmed hat, as "foolishness".

He married, 31 July 1856, at Stoke Newington, Jane Pyncent West, the daughter of William West of Leeds (2). They lived at 14 Finsbury Circus. His life included hospital appointments, private practice, research, examination and teaching. In 1859 he was elected Assistant Surgeon to the London Hospital, and 25 years later a 'Hutchinson Tri-Annual Essay Prize' was founded to commemorate his work there. He was outstanding as an accurate clinical observer, and Nature said of him that 'he did more than any man of his time to solidify the foundations of the surgeon's art'.

He filled many posts in the Royal College of Surgeons, being elected upon the Council in 1879, upon the Board of Examiners from 1880-87, and President in 1889-90. In 1891 he delivered the Hunterian oration. He was president of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society 1894-6; the Pathological Society 1879-80; the Hunterian Society 1869-70; the Ophthalmological Society 1883; the Medical Society 1890; and the Neurological Society 1887. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society and of many foreign learned societies, and a corresponding member of the Société de Chirurgie de Paris. He sat on the Royal Commission of 1881 to enquire into the provision for fever and smallpox cases in London hospitals, and on the Royal Commission on Vaccination. Six universities - Glasgow, Cambridge, Edinburgh, Oxford, Dublin and Leeds - conferred honorary degrees upon him. In 1908 he was knighted.

He was always concerned for medical education. His lectures set high ideals before medical students, and stressed the uses of imagination and the importance of personal observation. For some years medical students lodged in his home. He was particularly interested in post-graduate study, and was instrumental in the foundation of the Polyclinic, or Medical Graduates' College. He also founded museums at Selby and Haslemere, which illustrated his ruling idea that the inter-relation of information is the foundation of knowledge.

In 1866 he had purchased a country home at Haslemere, and though he seldom took long holidays he spent weekends there whenever possible.

In 1874 he moved his London home from Finsbury Circus to 15 Cavendish Square, where 'the married life [which] was a very simple and frugal one together, when it began... widened out, as lives will, into a full and sometimes awesome one...' Jane Hutchinson brought up a family of ten, and yet found time to support the work of the Friends Home Mission Committee, the Peace Committee, and other good causes, including Westminster Mothers Meeting.

Jonathan Hutchinson served for many years as hon. medical officer to the Friends' Foreign Mission Association. At the age of 73 he went (of) South Africa to investigate leprosy, and returned to work under very real concern for the isolated on Robben Island. Two years later he visited India to make a further study of leprosy; on his 80th birthday he was in Switzerland, and his last journey was to Norway, also investigating leprosy.

His religious thinking was much influenced by the scientific discoveries of his time, especially by Darwin's theory of evolution. However, he stated that differences in creed and faith between himself and his ancestors were 'differences in phraseology and in models of thought and belief, rather than in the thoughts and the beliefs themselves' and that 'advance in physical knowledge may rid us of superstitions, but it will never do otherwise than help true faith, and tend to devotedness of life', and claimed that his faith grew more rather than less spiritual. He continued constantly to read the Bible. 'Religion consists rather in becoming than believing' was another of his statements. He directed that on his

HUTCHINSON, Maria (1786-1861)

Maria Hutchinson was born at Richmond, Yorkshire, in 1786 and was brought up in close association with the Church of England. She herself told how she was committed for some time to a worldly way of life, but was gradually led to a new and living faith. She was greatly helped by the ministry of a Friend (Isaac Stephenson) and later attended meetings at Darlington, joining the Society in 1823. In the years which followed she was an active worker and evinced a gift for the ministry which was acknowledged by Darlington Monthly Meeting in 1831. Her good natural abilities and her sound Christian faith enabled her to give a rich ministry which was also characterised by great reverence and weightiness of spirit. For several years she was severely tried by ill health, but retained her faith unimpaired throughout. She died at Bishop Auckland on 8 March 1861, aged 75 years, and was buried in the Friends burial ground there on 13 March.

Procter Hutchinson, the youngest son of Jonathan Hutchinson (1760-1835 qv), 'the good man of Gedney,' and his wife Rachel, born Procter, was born at Gedney on 5 January 1808(1). His mother died shortly after his birth and he was brought up by his father's sister Lydia, who had married William Burtt (1761-1832 qv) of Fulbeck in Lincolnshire; he became the especial care of his cousin Ann(2). He was married in 1840 to Hannah Woolley(3) and there were three children(4).

After the death of Jonathan Hutchinson in 1835 family interest in farming seems to have declined(5). Procter's two elder brothers had both left the district, but he appears in Lincolnshire Directories from 1842 to 1861 as a farmer and presumably took over the family farm from his eldest brother John (1794-1875 qv). About 1863 he moved to Spalding and in that year became Clerk of Spalding Preparative Meeting, an office which he appears to have discharged until 1882. He apparently gave up farming and is listed in the local directories as a private resident. About 1882 he probably moved from Spalding to Kettering, where he died on 4 July 1886(6), at the age of seventy eight.

HUTCHINSON, Robert (1830-1909)

Robert Hutchinson was born at Gedney, Lincolnshire, on 9 August 1830, the third son of John and Elizabeth Hutchinson. After being educated at Ackworth School and subsequently under a private tutor at Houghton with his cousins the Browns, he took a flour mill in Nottingham in 1857. He was then joined by his eldest brother, who managed the commercial side of the business while Robert Hutchinson took charge of the milling. In 1877 he married Catherine, the daughter of William Adlington of Mansfield, Notts, and had a son (who joined him in his business in 1904) and two daughters (1).

Robert Hutchinson was a Justice of the Peace for Nottingham but although a strong Liberal and Free Trader and keenly interested in social reforms, he took little part in town affairs. Within the Society of Friends he seldom gave vocal ministry in Meetings for Worship; In Meetings for Business, on the other hand, his 'wise counsel' was always sought, and for a long time he was Clerk to the Quarterly Meeting and also Treasurer of the Nottingham and Mansfield Monthly Meeting.

He was 'large-hearted and tolerant' and 'prompt to see the best side of his fellow-men' but at the same time, as an Elder he 'did not hesitate to take his full share of responsibility in the administration of discipline, although always leaning to the side of mercy'.

At the end of July 1909 he became unwell, and died on 8 August 1909, only one day before his 79th birthday.

HUTCHINSON, Wilfrid (1869-1931)

Wilfrid Hutchinson, the son of William Hutchinson (1828-1911 qv) and his wife Lucy (born Burtt, 1833-1896 qv) of Gunby near Howden in Yorkshire, was born there on 21 September 1869(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1880 to 1885(2).

On leaving school he entered Selby flour mills, but soon afterwards he joined his father on the family farm and remained there until the latter's death in 1911, when the property was sold. From that time onwards he lived with his unmarried sister Alice, first at Ackworth, then at Ampleforth and finally at Bardsey near Wetherby in Yorkshire.

His chief interest in life was Ackworth School. He first joined the committee in 1908 as a colleague of his father and remained a member, apart from one or two years, all his life. Between them, he and his father served the school almost continuously for seventy one years. Wilfrid Hutchinson's special province was the estate and farm, the healthy state of the latter being largely due to the assistance he gave.

At home he was a countryman of retiring habits. His potatoes were always the earliest and his pears the most prolific. He never took an ordinary holiday, but was often seen, with a couple of friends in the back of his little Morris Cowley, following the Bramham Moor hunt, while other red letter days were spent on foot with the Ampleforth College beagles or the Kendal and district otter hounds on their annual visit to Yorkshire. He was a kindly man and possessed a great gift of friendship, in a quiet way.

Wilfrid Hutchinson of Quarry Hill, Bardsey, died on 4 May 1931, at the age of sixty one(3).

HUTCHINSON, William (1828-1911)

William Hutchinson, the son of John and Elizabeth Hutchinson was born on 28 December 1828 at Gedney, Lincolnshire. He started at Ackworth School in the first year of Queen Victoria's reign and he remained there for ~~67~~ years. After leaving Ackworth, he worked on his father's farm at Summercroft near Selby and then when he married he took a farm for himself at Thorpe Willoughby in the same district. He married on 16 May 1855 at East Catting-wirth, Lucy Burtt, daughter of Jonathan Burtt (2); there were eight children (3). Some eight years after his marriage, he removed to Gunby where he spent the rest of his life and distinguished himself as an agriculturalist. It was here that he took a keen interest in public affairs and the work of the Society of Friends. Ackworth School, where he was a member of the Committee for more than half a century, occupied the foremost place in his regard. In 1865 he was elected a Guardian of the Poor of Howden Union, becoming Chairman of the Board and he was on the East Riding Bench of Magistrates.

He was an earnest supporter of the British and Foreign Bible Society and a great supporter of the cause of Temperance. He was an ardent liberal. He served as Clerk to his Monthly and Preparative Meetings, and was for some time a member of Meeting for Sufferings. He often took vocal part in his own Meeting and was an Elder. By nature he was impulsive and impatient but he bore his increasing weakness which came in the last years of his life without rebellion or regret.

HUTLEY, Samuel J. (1871-1935)

Samuel J. Hutley, born 19 December, 1871, joined the Society in 1918, being drawn to Friends - after long spiritual pilgrimage - probably because of our Peace Testimony, but becoming a fully "convinced" Friend.

He was Senior English Master at Ipswich Secondary School. He was much in demand for Study groups and was one of the founders of the local Workers Educational Association. In Meeting for Worship and in the groups, he shared with Friends the benefit he received from periods at Woodbrooke.

His reliable, unassuming and attractive personality and orderly mind fitted him to be Clerk to Woodbridge Monthly Meeting.

In his later years Samuel Hutley worked for the promotion of Peace and International goodwill and as a result of his efforts the weak branch of Felixstowe League of Nations Union was re-organised and the membership increased to 400.

After a long painful illness, patiently borne he died, at the age of 64, on 23 November 1935.

1864-68, partnership of Sloan and Hutton, received many important architectural commissions, including the State Hospital in Middletown, Conn., St. Charles Borromeo Seminary in Overbrook, Pa. and Parrish Hall, the first building of Swarthmore College.

After this Hutton independently held many notable architectural commissions, among which may be listed the Ridgway Library, Philadelphia (1870), Barclay Hall, Haverford College (1875), Taylor and Merion Halls, Bryn Mawr College (1878), George School, Newtown Pa. (1855), Woman's Medical

She had a deep interest in children and in young people and a loving concern for people and their problems which she showed by visits, reminders and by little gifts. She was especially faithful in the little things. She served for a time on Meeting for Sufferings (3) and also gave service in the town in addition to her work for the local meeting.

She died on January 8, 1962 aged 78.

I'ANSON, James (1638-post 1702)

James I'Anson, the son of William I'Anson (1604-1659) and his wife Margaret, born Dent, of Leyburn near Hawskwell in Yorkshire, was baptised at Wensley on 27 September 1638. He was a descendant of the Yorkshire branch of a family who came over to England from France about 1485 and settled at Hawskwell. The family spread out into London, Dorset and other parts of England, but a branch remained at or near Hawskwell.

James was descended from Ralph I'Anson (1545?-1623), the eldest son of Christopher I'Anson, who succeeded to land owned by his father in and around Hawskwell(1). James I'Anson was the first of his line to become a Quaker, joining the Society of Friends shortly before his marriage to Jane Horner in 1664/5(2); there were five children(3). He suffered for the zeal with which he practised his new found faith and was fined for attending a meeting at the house of William Horner in Coverdale and at other Friends' houses. He was a minister, although there is no testimony to him.

The date of his death is not at present (1976) traced, but he was still living early in 1702(4).

I'ANSON, James (1744-1809)

James I'Anson, the son of Joshua I'Anson (1700-1786 qv) and his wife Beatrice, born Hedley, of Wensleydale and later of Blackwell near Darlington, was born in the year 1744(1).

His relationship with the Society was troubled and stormy. His first wife was Judith Wade, about whom there is at present (1976) no information, except that she was not a Quaker. They lived for many years in Leeds and there were seven children(2), but when James asked for a certificate for his removal to London it was refused him on the ground that he had forfeited his privilege of membership by marriage with a woman not a Friend. He appealed to the quarterly meeting, but before the appeal could be heard Stockton Monthly Meeting disowned him. The appeal was not allowed and several Friends were appointed to visit him in London, but they found him not sufficiently repentant. The appeal was carried to the Yearly Meeting, which decided that Stockton Monthly Meeting had acted rightly but too hastily in disowning him.

A "paper of denial" against him was signed by Stockton Monthly Meeting on 8 September 1778. He again appealed to the quarterly meeting, which upheld the monthly meeting and the matter once more came before the Yearly Meeting. Yearly Meeting again decided that Stockton Monthly Meeting was at fault, this time for not consulting with the monthly meeting into which James I'Anson had moved, and the denial was set aside. The case dragged on in correspondence between Stockton Monthly Meeting and Peel Monthly Meeting until the death of James' wife Judith.

James I'Anson was reinstated in 1781 by Devonshire House Monthly Meeting, in consideration of his reform and of his having married a Friend, Miriam, the widow of Robert Bell and daughter of Henry and Hannah Umfreville of London(3); there were no children of this marriage(4). On his return to Darlington, Stockton Monthly Meeting accepted his certificate and that of his wife and also admitted into membership in 1791 three children of James and his first wife Judith - Sarah, William and Beatrice - as "offspring of a marriage contrary to rules." But a few years later these children were disowned for marrying outside the Society.

In 1799 other trouble arose. After Miriam I'Anson's death in 1797 James became entangled in another matrimonial offence by his marriage to Jane Brockill of Richmond and was disowned on 19 August 1800. This time the disownment appears to have been permanent and there is no record of his death in 1809(5).

I'ANSON, James (1784-1821)

James I'Anson, the son of William I'Anson (1751-1822 qv) and his wife Mary, born Kitching, of Darlington, was born there on 7 April 1784(1). He was a linen manufacturer of Darlington, like his father, and in 1808 was married to Sarah Dixon of Cockfield in county Durham(2); there were two children(3).

As he grew up he developed an interest in botany and ornithology, which he pursued with so much ardour as to be detrimental to his religious life, but he became a faithful Friend and served the Society well. He was not apparently a minister, but he served as an elder for some years. With his friend and relative by marriage, William Backhouse, he prepared a little volume of quotations from the writings of Archbishop Fenelon, Lady Guion and de Molinos, entitled A Guide to True Peace, or a Method of attaining to Inward and Spiritual Prayer, first printed in Stockton in 1813. The little book was well received and passed through twelve editions between 1813 and 1878, being printed as far afield as Tasmania and Denmark.

James I'Anson was a man of unassuming piety, of a retiring character and amiable in his private life. His constitution was not strong and he suffered for many years from poor health. He died at Darlington on 10 June 1821(4), at the age of thirty seven.

James I'Anson, the son of Charles I'Anson (1809-1884 qv) and his wife Giulielma, born Coventry, of Newcastle-on-Tyne and Darlington, was born at Gateshead on 15 January 1845(1). He apparently never married(2) and after his parents' death lived with his sister Sarah Jane(3).

The early part of his life was spent in engineering, but his true interests lay in art, literature and science. As a scientist he was engaged for a few years under the Cambridge University scheme and his lectures on "Light" were much appreciated. As a member of the Darlington Friends' Essay and Philosophical Societies he took a large and active part, his contributions being always marked by rare excellence, the result of painstaking research and careful study. For many years he was a Fellow of the Geological Society and also sat upon the Council of the Mineralogical Society of Great Britain. He was a member of the Iron and Steel Institute and of the North of England Institute of Mining and Mechanical Engineers.

He was a regular attender at Darlington Meeting and valued his membership of the Society, taking his share in maintaining the discipline. Like his father he took a great interest in the Syrian Mission and in many other ways he supported objects which tended towards the good of his fellows.

He died at Fairfield House, Darlington, on 30 March 1898(4), at the age of fifty three.

I'ANSON, Joshua (1700-1786)

Joshua I'Anson, the eldest surviving son of John I'Anson (1666-1760 qv) and his wife Anne, born Hudson, of Wensley in Yorkshire, was born on 9 May 1700(1). His marriage to Beatrice Hedley (2) at Masham on 22.xii.1729 (i.e. February 1729/30) united the I'Anson family with the ancient Northumbrian family of Hedley; there were ten children(3).

Joshua was a linen weaver and he and Beatrice left Wensleydale and settled at Blackwell, near Darlington, which had become a famous centre for linen weaving. Beatrice I'Anson died in 1770(4) and was buried in the Friends' burial ground at Darlington. Her husband died on 25 March 1786(5).

I'ANSON, Joshua (1740-)

Joshua I'Anson, the son of Joshua I'Anson (1700-1786 qv) and his wife Beatrice, born Hedley, of Wensleydale and later of Blackwell near Darlington, was born in the year 1740(1). He was married to Hannah Moses of Cockfield in county Durham, who was not a Quaker(2), and there were four children(3).

It appears that Joshua I'Anson's membership of the Society was not consistent. There is no record of the birth of any of his children and he was the subject of a minute of Stockton Monthly Meeting held at Darlington on 9 December 1777, when Edward Pease and James Backhouse had visited him on the subject of his marriage outside the Society. His conduct also had given cause for censure; he drank to excess and visited ale houses in a disorderly fashion. He admitted that he had nothing satisfactory to offer in vindication of his conduct and that he did not look upon himself as a member of the Society at that time, but expressed the hope that if his future conduct improved Friends might re-admit him into membership. He was accordingly disowned by Stockton Monthly Meeting and there is no evidence that he ever rejoined the Society, but he is an essential link between the Yorkshire I'Ansons and those members of the family who moved to London and changed the family name to Janson.

The date of his death is not at present (1976) traced(4).

I'ANSON, Joshua (1787-1842)

Joshua I'Anson, the son of William I'Anson (1751-1822 qv) and his wife Mary, born Kitching, of Darlington, was born there on 24 July 1787(1). He was apprenticed to a farmer, William Stickney of Holderness, within Hull Monthly Meeting. Before his marriage in 1810 to Ann Dixon(2) he returned to the Darlington area and established himself as a farmer at Low Walworth, near the town and within Stockton Monthly Meeting. There were seven children of his marriage(3).

But he did not stay long at Low Walworth and until 1838 the family moved several times. His first two children were born at Low Walworth and the next two at Lynessack, near Cockfield. In 1824 the family moved northwards into the area of Newcastle Monthly Meeting, where they stayed for some years; in May 1838 the last change of residence took place, to Bishop Auckland.

At some point in his wanderings, probably after he left Low Walworth, Joshua exchanged farming for a colliery, but he was not a very successful coal owner and his interest was finally disposed of to the Pease family. He was a member of the first committee in charge of the Friends' Boarding School at Great Ayton in Cleveland and attended the first General Meeting in 1842 as a representative of Darlington Monthly Meeting.

He died on 6 November 1842(4), at the comparatively early age of fifty five.

IBBERSON, Ellen Mary (- 1979)

It is understood that Mary Ibberson was born in Norfolk, but no more details of her early life are so far (1979) available. After studying music for four years in Germany she returned to this country and became involved in the teaching of music in adult centres and in setting up the Rural Music Schools which were her life work. The story of their growth is told in her book "For Joy that we are Here - Rural Music Schools 1929 - 1950" published by the Bedford Square Press. As a conductor of choirs and orchestras and as a solo player on the harpsichord she brought music to the lives of many people.

In her work she was based on Hertfordshire where she was a member of Hitchin meeting (1) but in her 80s she moved to Bridport to Harbour House, where she formed some of the residents into a choir at Christmastime.

She died on May 6, 1979. No age is given.

Additional information

IBBITT, Thomas (or Hbbitt, or Ibbott)

Of Huntingdonshire, England.

Convinced at King Rippon, Hunts., through the ministry of George Whitehead.

1666, ^{he} came to London two or three days before the Great Fire and proclaimed in the streets that the city would be laid waste by a conflagration. Before he left London he saw his prediction fulfilled.

Whether he was inflated with spiritual pride, or whether the exciting circumstances unsettled his reason, he felt he was called and empowered to stop the fire. Advancing with outstretched arms, he stood in the way of the advancing flames. Some of his friends dragged him away before he was burned to death. He later confessed that he had exceeded his commission.

IBBOTT, Thomas (1636?-1666?) born Impey]

This was Thomas Ibbott (Ibbitt) of Hemingford, Hunts. Whitehead devotes three pages of his Christian Progress, (1725, pp. 314 ff.) to this occurrence, and he states his general approval of this 'sign'; so also did others, as eg. Penn (Judas and the Jews, 1673, p.118).

The following, taken from Hardy's Notes and Extracts from the Sessions Rolls, 1581 to 1698, Hertford, 1905, vol.i. pp. 179, 180, 188, is a valuable confirmation of accounts from Quaker sources:-

'Thomas Ibbott (Ibbitt, Ibbarde).

'1666. The examination of Thomas Ibbott, of Hemingford, in the county of Huntingdon, oatmeal-man, taken Sept. 1st:-

'The examined says he is about 30 years of age, and lives at Hemingford, and is an oatmeal-man by trade, and that he 'hath bin att London with the King to show him a vission that he had seen a old man and a young man fight, and the Lord gave him to know that the Duke of York should beate all nations'.

'Being examined why he said that the Duke should be overmost he says that he 'shall beate all nations but the three nations'.

'And being asked whether he knew anybody 'that had any hand or knowledge of the burning of London, or were acting or acsilaray to it' he said that he knows nobody that had any hand about it, but thinks it to be from the hand of the Lord, and that he will give the King an account of it when he comes to him'.

Catherine Impey, the daughter of Robert Impey (1820-1886 qv) and his wife Mary Hannah (born Clothier, 1823-1895 qv) of Street in Somerset, was born there on 12 August 1847(1).

She lived at Street all her life and took a warm and continued interest in many philanthropic activities. Foremost among her concerns was the work of the temperance movement, which for her embraced the Good Templars organisation, the Street Teetotal Society, the British Women's Temperance Association and the Somerset Band of Hope Union and Village Mission, to all of which she gave inspiring and lifelong service. She took her share of public work as a member of the Urban District Council and of the Board of Guardians and cared deeply for the problems of those living in unfavourable conditions.

She travelled extensively, both in the British Isles and the United States. The earlier of her visits to America was in connection with the colour question, which enlisted her warmest sympathy; she held deep convictions about the rights of both white and coloured people.

Among her natural gifts was an especial charm for young people, who quickly became her friends. Her gentle greeting and sweet winning smile went straight to the hearts of the elderly and young alike. She made many friends all over the world. Her life was spent in being a blessing and a help to others; she lived her religion - it was not part of her life, but the whole of it.

Ethel Jane Adair Roberts, details of whose birth are not at present (1984) traced, was the daughter of Frederic George Adair Roberts and was born in the year 1877(1).

IMPEY, Elizabeth Stephens (1877-1915)

Elizabeth Stephens Impey, elder daughter of Frederic and Eleanor (born Clark) Impey, was born on 29 May 1877 at Longbridge Place, Northfield, Birmingham (1). She was educated at Weston-super-Mare, Polam Hall, and The Mount, and afterwards took two years training at Madam Bergman Osterberg's Physical Training College at Dartford, Kent. She excelled at all games and enjoyed splendid physical health.

From 1897 to 1903 she lived at home, teaching physical exercises in schools and families, and practising massage. In her spare time she was a fearless horsewoman, an expert angler, a good shot at game, and an excellent swimmer.

In 1904 she began her medical training, and during her years at Birmingham University took a leading part in student activities. In 1911 she qualified as M.B., C.H.B.. and subsequently held posts as house-surgeon or physician at the Children's Hospital and the General Maternity Hospital, Birmingham; at Swansea General Hospital; and at the Temperance Hospital, London. In 1915 she went out to Chalons and Sermaize for the Friends War Victims Relief Committee and remained there six weeks. Her great desire was to work for women in India, and in November 1915 she accepted the post of Medical Officer at the Dufferin Hospital for Women at Lahore. She sailed for Bombay in the P & O liner Persia from Tilbury on 18 December, seen off by her family. On 30 December the Persia was torpedoed off Crete without warning, and sank in five minutes. In the confusion Elizabeth Impey remained calm, and assisted many into the boats. She then donned her life-belt and dived into the sea, and was not seen again. One of the survivors wrote to her father: "Your daughter was a brave woman; we all considered she died a heroine's death" (2).

IMPEY, Lilian Burgess (1905 - 1977)

Lilian Impey was born on August 26, 1905, the daughter of Frederic Paul (1873-1941) and Lucy Isabel (b. Marriage, 1872-1956) Impey.(1)

She was educated at The Mount and after leaving school qualified in horticulture and in bee-keeping at the East Anglian Institute of Agriculture, Chelmsford. Towards the end of the second world war she volunteered for overseas work with the Friends' Relief Service and led the first team sent overseas to Germany under the auspices of the Red Cross. Her team R.S.100 after service in Belgium was sent to work at the liberated concentration camp at Belsen, near Celle, in Germany, and then to the Brunswick area. She was involved in organisation and in negotiations with the military authorities and her skill in these areas was very useful. She made contact with German Friends in the Brunswick area and with members of the team attended the first meetings for worship of local Friends. In 1946 she became the voluntary liaison officer for the voluntary societies at Hanover Regional H.Q. and then served in the same capacity for nine months with UNRRA.

After the war she became involved in civic affairs in Colchester, serving for many years as a magistrate, frequently on the juvenile bench. She was also a member of Colchester Borough Council. She was a faithful and staunch Friend, served for many years as an overseer, and for some time as assistant clerk of Essex & Suffolk QM. She was also a manager of the Langham Oaks Approved school and a member of the Greenwood Education Trust and of the Kendal Trust.(2) She was also a great lover of the countryside and of the Alps and was a keen gardener, often bringing up to Friends House, special flowers and plants (in a specially purchased ice-cream van - to give the necessary height for the tall plants) as decorations for Yearly Meeting.

She died at her home near Colchester on September 20, 1977 aged 72.
