MARSHALL, Charles (1637-1698)

Charles Marshall was convinced during the Camm and Audland mission to Bristol in 1654. In his turn he was the means of influencing John Whiting of Somerset (1656-1722). Whiting wrote a Testimony to Marshall in 1703.<sup>2</sup> He was one of the ninety-four Friends who signed the marriage certificate of George Fox and Margaret Fell in 1669 and he signed with others the Testimony to George Fox prepared by the Morning Meeting, 26.xi.1690/1. Of his funeral, 17.ix.1698, it is said: 'Its thought to be the greatest appearance of Friends at his buriall [at Bunhill Fields] as of any yet, exceeding in number either G.F.s S.C. or F.S.' (G. Fox, Stephen Crisp, Francis Stamper). See Jnl FHS viii.8, quoting Quaker Post-Bag, 1919 p.146.

MARSHALL, Hannah (1788-1868) born Tipping

Hannah Tipping, the daughter of Ebenezer and Jane Tipping of Whitehaven in Cumberland, was born there on 19 October 1788(1). She was married in 1819 to Samuel Marshall of Kendal in Westmorland(2) and there were seven children(3). (1790-1869 ev)

She led an active life for many years and being intellectually gifted and of sound judgment, her advice and counsel were often sought. She was an elder of her meeting and her influence for good was widely spread. She was an excellent wife and mother and both by precept and example trained her children in the principles of the Society. For many years delicate health confined her to the house in the winter and as her weakness increased attendance at meetings for worship became very difficult; but when quite unable to be present she employed the time in uniting in spirit with those engaged in worship and often said that she had had a good meeting.

She died in peace and trust at Kendal on 15 May 1868, at the age of seventy nine(4).

He lived in Leeds for most of a chequered life, but after a serious illness in 1859 he moved to Matlock Bank, where he spent his few remaining years. His two daughters, one of whom was a confirmed invalid, shared his comfortable home, which he made available for meetings of Friends visiting Matlock. He generally visited Leeds two or three times a year and these were times of great spiritual, as well as social, enjoyment; he was able to attend Leeds Quarterly Meeting in September 1862.

His health steadily declined and he died at Matlock after a very short illness on 11 January 1863(5), a few days before his seventieth birthday.

MARSON,        Albert        ( 1898 - 1973 )

Albert Marson was born on May 13, 1898.

Little is known of his early life. He was a steelworker in the local works at Scunthorpe, had a ceaseless thirst for knowledge, studying continually at the local technical college and in W.E.A. classes. He was studying for an 'Open University' degree at his death.

From about 1930 he attended Friends meeting in Doncaster, travelling by rail to do this, but when he joined the Society, he joined with local Friends to establish a meeting in Scunthorpe, with its own meeting house.(1) From then on he was its mainstay, whatever the weather he was always in his place at meeting.

He was a staunch trade unionist and worker in the labour movement, after his retirement he would help in any way possible any who needed help whether filling in pension forms, writing letters for those less able or giving advice. He was a real educationalist; and it seems likely that he was also a member of the Borough Education Committee(2) He was well loved and highly respected by young and old throughout the town.

He died on November 27, 1973 aged 75.

1. This information is contained in the Testimony referred to above, but Yorkshire QM printed lists of members from 1930 through to 1947 do not contain any reference to him either as an attender or member. The Testimony also states that he joined the Society in 1950, but Scunthorpe allowed meeting was established in 1949 (YM Proc. 1950 p 238) and the Derby Lincs & Notts QM printed list of members for 1949 records him as a member under Scunthorpe.
2. The Testimony records that a period of Silence was held by the Borough Education Committee at its meeting to commemorate his life.

MARTEN, Cruttenden (1850-1924)

2X

Cruttenden Marten was born at Margate on 12 August 1850, of an old Quaker family, and was educated at Ackworth (1). He was apprenticed to a homoeopathic chemist and continued in this trade all his life.

He married Bertha, daughter of a Congregational minister. For some years they worshipped together at Whitfield's Tabernacle and the West End Mission, but the tragedy of war brought Cruttenden Marten back to the Society of Friends. He joined Harrow Meeting, where he became a tower of strength and a faithful minister. In the days of stress a mid-week meeting for worship was held in his house. His favourite themes were the sayings of Jesus.

He died at Pinner on 12 February 1924.

MARTEN, William (1764-1823)

William Marten was born at Bancomb near Lewes in 1764, the son of John and Elizabeth Marten (1), who belonged to the Church of England. At age 12 he went to live with an uncle who was a member of the Society at Lewes and for some time also attended meetings of the General Baptists and Calvinists. At about age 17 he regularly attended Friends' Meetings and became a member of the Society. He entered the public ministry in 1789. On 13 July 1790 he married Jane Cuttenden (2). They had five children (3).

'He was very diligent and exemplary in the attendance of his meetings, both for worship and discipline, and careful to observe the time appointed: and, whilst active and diligent in business, did not suffer his outward concerns to stand in the way of his religious duties.' He was much concerned with the formation of schools for the children of the poor. Towards the end of his life, he said, 'I never felt my mind more expanded in love to all societies of religion than at the present time, but I want them to come out of the mixture of forms and ceremonies, and to be more inward and silent, for religion is a heart work.'

He died on 6 January 1823, and was buried in Friends' Burial Ground at Lewes.

An American edition of Truth Vindicated was published in New York by Isaac T. Hopper, 1836. Martin defended early Friends in a controversial spirit, which rendered his testimony somewhat harmful.

Howard Marten was born in Maddox Street, London in 1884. His father came of an old Quaker family but had married out of the Society and so he was not brought up as a Quaker. However, even as a child he had close sympathy with Quaker ways and during the Boer war took an anti-war attitude. At the start of the first world war he became chairman of the local no-conscription society and being arrested in 1916 for failure to register for military service he applied for membership of the Society feeling the need for the support of a Quaker chaplain. He was in the first contingent of conscientious objectors to be sent to France and then condemned to death for refusing military service, the sentence was commuted to ten years imprisonment and he was brought back to England under the Home Office scheme for the employment of conscientious objectors. He was in Dartmoor prison from February 1917 to March 1918 and then released for service with the Friends War Victims Relief Committee becoming assistant secretary to Ruth Fry (1878 - 1962 qv.) until 1919. His wartime experiences are recorded in a diary and letters lodged in Friends House, London.

In October 1919 he married Grace Vizetelly at Westminster Meeting House(1) and after thirteen years work with the firm of Unilever in Bristol, during which time he served the Society of Friends in Bristol and was a member for two short periods of the Committees for Peace and War Victims Relief,(2) they came back to the Harrow area, moving in 1938 to Chorleywood. During the second world war a small group of Friends and others began to meet in their home and this group later became the nucleus of the present (1981) Chorleywood Meeting. Howard Marten was a great strength to the small group, he had a gift for vocal prayer and gave valued ministry. His wife, Grace, died suddenly on July 8, 1962 and their only child John also died suddenly on December 16, 1971 aged 48. Later through the infirmities of old age was not able to attend meeting but he maintained his close connection with it.

He died at Chesham on March 3, 1981, aged 96.

MARPIN, Thomas (1681 - 1764) of Charlwood, Surrey

3

Thomas Martin was born into an honest and respected family at Charlwood in Surrey. His father died in his infancy and his mother joined Friends. Thomas explored various religious sects in his youth but finally joined Friends, also becoming aware of God's presence in a rapture of joy on 2.v [July] 1710, after much searching and suffering.

He became an 'able and approved minister', not only ministering to Friends but to others.

In 1717, he travelled in the ministry in the West of England and the Isle of Wight; in 1721, in the West, in Wales and in the North of England.

He was a man of good judgement and brought much comfort to his hearers; he also spoke powerfully against wrongdoers. He urged Friends not to pay tithes and to go to prison rather than fall in with this custom. He was a peacemaker and could speak to many different conditions.

As his age advanced and he could not travel far abroad, he still spoke powerfully and livingly in local Meetings. His conversation in families and after Meeting was often 'very reaching to Friends and others present.'

He married Mary ( -1757 ) in (1) and they had three sons and a daughter (2).

He died at Ifield on the 6 January 1764 aged 83 years, a minister for 53 years and was buried in the Friends Burial Ground at Ifield.

Maeve Brereton was born in about the year 1899 (1) the second daughter of John and Georgiana Brereton of Alloa. Her father was an excise officer there and welcomed into his home many left wing rebels, James Maxton among them, who were concerned with social conditions and the established order of society.

She was educated at Dollar Academy and then at Edinburgh University, where she graduated in medicine in 1921. During her student days she became president of the university Fabian Society, there she met William H. Marwick. ( ) They were married in 1923 and moved to Glasgow, where he was working for the W.E.A. and she became active in the Labour movement, being a candidate in the municipal elections. Her main interest was in the field of family planning and she served on the committee which opened the first clinic in Glasgow. William fully supported and encouraged her at a time when birth control was a most unpopular cause.

In 1932 the family moved to Edinburgh where she again became involved, being on the executive committee of the first clinic to be opened there in 1933. When her five children required less of her time she became medical officer to the clinic, which post she held until her retirement in 1963. After the war she was appointed a lecturer in family planning at Edinburgh University and also became increasingly involved in courses for post graduates.

She was brought up with no religious affiliations, but shortly after moving to Edinburgh, William joined the Society of Friends and Maeve joined a few years later.(2) She was a valued member of the meeting, serving it as an elder and as an overseer, she also served on two Friends central committees. (3)

She died on February 28, 1978, aged 79.

William Marwick was born in the year 1894 in Old Calabar where his parents were missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland. His parents had met and married there and William spent three years of his boyhood in Jamaica. The family returned to Scotland in 1905 and he attended school and university in Edinburgh graduating with first class honours in history in 1916. He was a pacifist by conviction and had been accepted for relief work with the Society of Friends but after being refused exemption from military service was court martialled and sentenced to a term of hard labour. Eventually he was allowed to join the Friends War Victims Relief Service in France in March 1918. In about 1920 he was appointed tutor organiser for the Workers Educational Association in Glasgow and the West of Scotland. Then in 1932 he became the first full-time extra mural lecturer at Edinburgh University and later in 1948 he was appointed a lecturer in economic history, a post he retained until his retirement in 1964.

In 1923 he married Maeve Cluna Brereton (1899 ? - 1978 qv.) and although he had the earlier contacts with Friends he did not join the Society until 1938 (1) when he immediately became active in the Society's affairs. For many years he served on the Northern Friends Peace Board, he was a member of Meeting for Sufferings and served on several other central committees.(2) He also served as Clerk to General Meeting for Scotland from 1943 to 1952. He also was founder editor of its newspaper and was chairman of the Friends World Committee for Consultation from 1948 to 1952. He was a frequent contributor to The Friend writing articles and reviews and letters to the editor, he also wrote a number of books, pamphlets and articles arising from his subject.(3) On his retirement he took up a fellowship at Woodbrooke for one year and resulting from this he wrote in 1969 a provocative pamphlet 'Quaker Social Thought'. In the same year he served as president of the Friends Historical Society. In 1978 his wife Maeve died. She had been a great support to him as he had been to her in her work for family planning. They had a happy home life with their children, two daughters and three sons. He was a great reader and book collector and even in his later years remained young at heart.

He died in hospital in Edinburgh on March 22, 1982 aged 87.

Christopher Mason was born at Sedbergh, Yorkshire (1) of honest religious parents, and was brought up in the Truth

About his twenty fifth year he appeared in public Testimony and visited Friends in adjacent Counties.

"He often visited his Friends and Neighbours in Affliction, and was of great Strength and Encouragement to such as were ready to droop under their Troubles, having passed through many himself. It may well be said, he was strong in true Faith; for though his Circumstance was narrow, as to the Things of this Life, he would often say, 'I have enough, and shall never want.' His great and constant Care was for Heavenly Treasure; and he had as much of the Treasure of this World as gave him full Content in that Respect; for which he was thankful to God the Fountain of all his Mercies."

Christopher Mason died on 19.xi [January] 1746/7 (2)

Isaac Mason, born in Leeds on 16 January 1870, came under the influence of Caroline Southall in the Adult School and later joined the Society.

When she and several other Leeds Friends offered for service in China, Isaac Mason also volunteered and was accepted a year later. He joined the group at Chungking but his strong individuality made him essentially a pioneer. After his marriage to Esther L. Beckwith of Barnet Grove in 1895 they made their Christian home in Tungchwan and also did pioneer work at She Hong and Suining.

He mastered the language with unusual quickness and after 22 years in West China, Isaac Mason went to Shanghai and translated into Chinese short lives of Friends (John Bright, Wm Penn etc) and children's books.

In 1932 Isaac Mason returned to England settling in Worthing, entering into the life of the Meeting and diligently attending Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, Friends Service Council and Meeting for Sufferings.

He was resident of the local Free Church Council for two years, being acknowledged as a 'Minister'.

He died on 28 March 1939.

Testimony of Lewes & Chichester MM in YM Proc. 1940, p.204

James Mason, the elder son of Richard Mason (1760-1833 qv) and his wife Sarah (born Cooper, 1776?-1858 qv) of Hackenthorp in the parish of Beighton in Derbyshire, was born there on 27 February 1810(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1821 to 1824(2).

After leaving school he helped his parents on the family farm, until in 1839 he moved to The Retreat in York, his chief duties there being the management of the farming department and the oversight of patients who helped in agricultural occupations. His connection with The Retreat continued for the rest of his life. He was greatly valued for his services and although he had not much spare time at his disposal, he employed what little leisure he had for the service of others. He took an active part in the temperance movement, filling the post of secretary to the York Society for many years. He was married in 1842 to Rachel Hall of York(3), but the marriage was apparently childless(4).

He was an elder of his meeting and was especially concerned with the less conspicuous members and attenders not in membership. He frequently visited them and took a deep interest in their welfare. He was also concerned for those who lived in isolated places or near closed meeting houses and the occasional holding of meetings in such places claimed his warm sympathy and co-operation. He occasionally spoke very acceptably in meetings for worship and his sound judgement in meetings for discipline was very welcome.

James Mason of Heslington Road, York, died after a brief illness on 30 April 1876, at the age of sixty six(5).

Josiah Mason was born in 1903 in Leicester and in 1927 he went out to Madagascar under the Friends Foreign Missions Association to work at Faratsihe as a district missionary. It was a time of hardship and exacting and difficult work, often misunderstood. In 1932 he married Kari Lavik, a member of the Norwegian Mission there (1) and together they found fulfilment in their care for individuals and in their oversight of churches and schools. As a preacher he made use of the Malagasy proverbs he had learned and this was great appreciated. He was paternalistic in attitude but did his utmost to train the Malagasy people to take responsibility and in the rebellion of 1947 saw the rising independence, the increasing ancestor worship and also the election of the first Malagasy mayor of Tananarive in 1956. They retired and came back to England, to Leicester in 1958 and Josiah took up work as an industrial chaplain. Kari died a year later but he came to know in Leicester Meeting Marjorie Hedson whom he married in 1961.(2) Later they moved to Bexhill on Sea and were a great support to the meeting there, he served on Friends central committees (3) and also for a year or so served as clerk to Bexhill FM. Marjorie died in 1978 and Josiah's own health began to fail and his hearing grew very poor and he had to be moved into an old people's home. He was a staunch Christian and Friend. He felt later in life that perhaps he had made many mistakes in Madagascar and wondered if indeed he had done much good but a letter from Malagasy Friends printed in The Friend Vol. 141 (1983) p. 178 indicates the good which he left there.

He died on October 12, 1982 aged about 79.(5)

MASON, Robert (1780?-1861)

Robert Mason, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1977) traced, was born about the year 1780(1). He was a native of Lancaster and was brought up in the Roman Catholic faith, but when he grew up he became dissatisfied with the form of religion in which he had been educated. He attended places of worship of many denominations without finding the revelation of Christianity which he longed for, until, while still a young man, he went to a meeting of the Society at Lancaster; it was a silent meeting, but he felt that he had found his true spiritual home.

He renounced Roman Catholicism and adopted the plain speech and dress of Friends and in consequence of this he was dismissed from his employment. Soon afterwards, about the year 1801, he moved to New Lanark in Scotland, where he lived for the rest of his life. He became an attender at Edinburgh Meeting and in 1814 applied for and was received into membership.

Although he lived about thirty miles from any settled meeting he continued frequently to attend meetings at Edinburgh and Glasgow and when at home regularly kept up a meeting at his own house, although he rarely had anyone to sit with him. He was deeply concerned for the spread of Truth and distributed tracts and other religious publications, both in his own neighbourhood and when travelling. His long life of Christian consistency of conduct won him the respect and regard of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

He died, apparently unmarried(2), at New Lanark on 1 May 1861, at the age of eighty one(3).

MASON, William (1812-1899)

William Mason, the son of Richard Mason (1760-1833 qv) and his wife Sarah (born Cooper, 1776?-1858 qv) of Hackenthorpe in the parish of Beighton in Derbyshire, was born there on 23 October 1812(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1824 to 1826, where he made very fair progress, being

He was encouraged to join family of Hackenthorpe Needhouse to learn the trade of a joiner and glazier. At the end of his apprenticeship he remained in the same neighbourhood and was married in 1842 to Kitty Surman (1823-1899) of Bredon, Gloucestershire(2). There were thirteen children(3).

MASON, William (1675-1723)

In 1696 he moved to a village called Wirksworth, where he was employed by building railway wagons, until in 1707 he became the master builder.

He discharged his duties faithfully for twenty years and gave up his service in the year 1723. William Mason, the son of Thomas and Mary Mason of Cheltenham, was born on 14.ii [April] 1675 (1). He married Margaret Surman, daughter of John Surman of Tredington, Gloucestershire, on 10.ii [April] 1696 (2). He died at Cheltenham and was buried on 15.ii [April] 1723 (3). He was a hosier by trade. (4).

During the whole of his long life he was a total abstainer and took a keen interest in the temperance movement. He was a member of the Ashworth Total Abstinence Society.

He left Ashworth in 1870 and moved to Leeds, where he set up in business with his son William (1849-1929 qv) as a joiner and builder. The connection lasted until 1894. After his wife's death in 1894 he lived with his daughters.

William Mason of Ellerbeck Walk, Leeds, died on 9 April 1899, at the age of eighty nine(4).

MASON, William (1849-1929)

William Mason, the son of William Mason (1812-1899 qv) and his wife Kitty (born Beardmore, 1821?-1894 qv) of Ackworth and Leeds, was born at Ackworth on 22 January 1849(1). He was educated at Ackworth School, where his father was the school joiner, from 1858 as a day scholar and from 1860 to 1863 as a boarder.

He joined his father as an apprentice and later served with John Hall Thorp of Leeds. In 1870 his father left Ackworth and together they founded the firm of William Mason and Son, builders and contractors of Leeds.

He was married in 1879 to Katharine Oxley (1849-1929 qv) of Sudbury(2) and there were six children(3).

As a boy he was delicate and shy and really unsuited for business, but in spite of this handicap he obtained large contracts for work on the public buildings of Leeds. Later on his two sons joined the firm and after the first world war its character changed, its speciality being shop and store fitting.

William Mason derived great pleasure from the study of Greek, water colour sketching and the culture of greenhouse plants. He took no part in public work, but served the Society of Friends with quiet dignity as an overseer and an elder; he was a regular attender at both morning and evening meeting. To enter his house and share his wonderful store of knowledge and experience was a privilege.

William Mason of 9 Helmsley Drive, West Park, Leeds, died suddenly from pneumonia following influenza, on 25 February 1929, at the age of eighty(4), on the day following his wife's death from the same cause.

MASON, William Handley (1873-1949)

William Handley Mason was born 28 October 1873 and except for two years at Ackworth spent his life farming at Anderton Fold until his retirement, when he went to live at Ash Lee, Galgate.

His voluntary service included work on the Board of Guardians, Lancaster Rural District Council, the Area Education Committee and the Area Assessment Committee.

For the Society of Friends he was convenor of the Monthly Meeting Properties Committee; Treasurer of Calder Bridge Meeting, Registering Clerk and Monthly Meeting Clerk. For over forty years, from 1902 to the end of 1941, he 'sat at the table', far seeing and deliberate, an example of steady loyal service.

He married Nora Dodgson and it is recorded that their home was 'the house of a man called Help'. 'Anyone in the district needing advise or help sought and found it there, and knew that to no one else would the tale be told. Altogether in the whole Galgate district he was a man deeply respected.'

He died 5 March 1949

MASSEY, Emma (1846-1933) born Hutchinson

Emma Hutchinson, the daughter of Procter Hutchinson (1808-1886 qv) and his wife Hannah (born Woolley, 1818-1851 qv) of Gedney in Lincolnshire, was born there on 12 April 1846(1). She was educated at Ackworth School from 1857 to 1859(2). A serious illness in childhood left a delicacy which obliged her to leave Ackworth early, on account of her health. Later she completed her education at the school conducted by the daughters of her uncle John Hutchinson at Selby in Yorkshire, after which she returned home to act as her father's housekeeper, first at Gedney and later at Spalding.

She was married in 1871 to John Burtt Massey (1840-1927 qv) of Spalding and there were five children(3). The family moved to Nottingham in 1890.

From the first she had taken an active interest in the small meeting at Spalding, but at Nottingham her life became one of comparative retirement, for ill health and increasing deafness debarred her from taking part in public and social gatherings. Only a small circle of intimate friends knew of her great executive ability, alert mind and keen sense of humour. After the death of her husband she became a complete invalid.

Emma Massey of 13 Fishpond Drive, Nottingham, died on 1 October 1933, at the age of eighty seven(4).

MASSEY, John ( -1741/2)

John Massey was probably the grandson of William and Katherine Massey of Sutton in Lincolnshire, whose son William (1660-1710 qv) had married Mary Burtt (1668?1704 qv), the daughter of William Burtt (1624-1677 qv) and his second wife Alice, born Smith. William and Mary Massey apparently had two sons, Robert and John, but there is no record of their birth(1). The Masseys were a large family and prominent Quakers in their day. Robert and John were trustees of the Dove Cote Close property at Broughton, left to Friends in 1727 under the Will of John Scrimshaw. Part of this property was attached to the meeting house at Brant Broughton and became the burial place of the Burtt family after Waddington ceased to be so used.

In 1716 John Masey married his cousin Susanna Burtt (1690-1717 qv) of Welbourn, the daughter of his uncle William Burtt (1661-1704 qv) and his wife Mary, born Kirke(2). Their happy union was a brief one and Susanna died in the following year(3), after giving birth to a daughter(4). In 1722 John was married to Deborah Barlow(5), who bore him two children(6).

John Massey died on 8.xi.1741 (i.e.January 1741/2)(7), but his age at death is not at present (1976) traced.

Sarah Bateman, details of whose birth are not at present (1984) traced, was the daughter of John and Mary Bateman and was born about the year 1765(1).

She became in 1802 the second wife of William Massey (1763-1846 qv), a prominent landowner of Spalding in Lincolnshire and there were five children(2).

Throughout her life she was of a diffident and retiring disposition, which made her reticent in speaking of her religious experience. She filled the office of elder and entered with sympathy into the problems of those who were engaged in the work of the ministry, often giving timely advice and encouragement.

Her health failed gradually in the last few years of her life and Sarah Massey of Spalding died on 14 October 1854, at the age of eighty nine(3).

MASSEY, William (1763-1846)

William Massey, the son of John and Elisabeth Massey of Spalding in Lincolnshire, was born there on 3 April 1763(1). Nothing is at present (1975) traced of his early life and education, nor of the means whereby he earned his living, but he was one of the principal house and land owners of Spalding, besides owning estates at Fleet, Willoughby and Gedney(2).

He was married twice. In 1785 he married Sarah Proctor(3) and she bore him three children(4) before dying in 1789(5). He remained a widower for some years before marrying in 1802 Sarah Bateman of Chateris in Cambridgeshire(6); there were five children of this second marriage(7). Joseph Gurney visited the family in 1805 and has left an attractive account of the household:-

"I am now under the roof of a kind and wealthy Friend, in a house perfectly neat, with manners in part after the old fashion & in part partaking of the new. For instance I had a most excellent room and bed but no water in it. I went down to wash in a very neat kitchen & in a pewter basin. Thou hast perhaps heard of Will<sup>m</sup> Massey, my present Landlord, son by marriage to Jno Bateman." (8)

He was a tall, well-favoured man and in spite of his considerable wealth he was unostentatious in his way of life, although he kept his own carriage. His grandchildren stood in awe of him and remembered as a feature of his exquisitely kept house the museum containing curios of all kinds which were housed at the end of the long room used as a general dining and sitting room. He had also a good library. Perhaps his most engaging idiosyncrasy was the construction of a place he called the Islands, known locally as 'Mr Massey's folly.' The country round Spalding is very flat, but on about two acres of meadowland artificial hillocks had been constructed, and broad trenches dug between them over which rustic bridges had been thrown. The hillocks had been planted with shrubs and on one of them a cave had been excavated, with a wooden, arbour-like construction in front of it. In this dwelt a hermit, also of wood, life-size and painted. William Massey had spent much money on these constructions and they gave him a good deal of quiet enjoyment; he visited them every day and seemed not to mind the cold and damp(9).

He was for many years an elder of his meeting and although he was diffident in expressing his opinion on religious subjects he was remarkable for the conscientious tenderness with which he admonished those who had strayed from the path of rectitude. His attitude towards his possessions was one of stewardship and for a long period of years he was generous in his charity to those who were in humble or indigent circumstances.

He died at Spalding on 16 February 1846(10), at the age of eighty two.

MASTERS, Ellen (1788?-1862)

Ellen Masters was born about the year 1788 and was brought up in the Church of England, of which her parents were members. Through the influence of an elder brother she was brought into contact with the Society of Friends when she was about 22 years of age. For a long time she lived at a distance from any Friends Meeting, passing through a period of crisis when her religious experience was severely tested, and she was able to follow obediently the path of self-denial to which she felt she had been called. Later in life she was able to help others to find spiritual comfort as she ~~had~~ found it, and her ministry in meetings was acknowledged in 1853, when she became a recorded minister. She died, aged 74 years, on 6 March 1862 after a long illness, during which she displayed a loving, thankful spirit in spite of all her infirmities.

MATHER, Ida Sarah (1885-1952)

Ida S. Mather was born in 1885, the daughter of Robert and Ann Mather. After leaving school she went into the office of her father's business and for over 40 years her interest in the girls under her care had a lasting influence on them.

The Kindergarten Union and the After Care Society for Crippled Children had her active support, and she was for some time President of the Lady Gowrie Centre in Hobart. She was a member of the Board of Governors of Friends' School, Hobart, and the House Committee of the school was under her guidance.

After the death of her friend Barbara Barnett she undertook responsibility for the home for old people, extending its scope and seeing before her death the St. Ann's home almost completed.

'She was a most faithful attender at all meetings, and among Hobart Friends her genial and kindly presence will be greatly missed. For though she took no vocal part in meetings for worship, those who knew her will feel that her life of untiring service was the outward expression of a simple faith which depended on a higher power for its daily strength.'

She died 11 September 1952

MATHER, Joseph Benson (1814-1890)

2X

Joseph Benson Mather, the son of Wesleyan parents, was first brought into contact with Friends on the visit of James Backhouse and George Washington Walker to Hobart in 1832, and in 1833 it is recorded that he accompanied these friends as guide to the homesteads of settlers in the neighbourhood of his father's farm to announce the holding of religious meetings. Following this, in 1835, Joseph Benson Mather joined the Society, and was recorded a minister in 1837. In 1841 he accompanied George W. Walker in a visit to professing Friends throughout Tasmania.

He took a lively interest in work for boys and for a time taught in a Night School, and later ~~on~~ the Ragged Schools; he was hon. secretary of the Boys' Training School established by the Government. He devoted much labour to the establishment of the Friends' High School. He was a member of the local Committee of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and worked diligently for the causes of total abstinence and peace.

In 1837 he was appointed Clerk to the Monthly Meeting, and with some intermission held the post until his death, in addition to being Correspondent and Registrar.

Joseph Benson Mather died 17 May 1890.

J. Francis Mather was born in Hobart, Tasmania in 1844, the eldest child of Joseph Benson (1814-1890, qv) and Anna Maria Mather. His grandfather Robert Mather had been convinced of the principles of Friends after reading Barclay's Apology picked up on a London bookstall. He had emigrated to Tasmania and joined Friends at the time of the visit there of James Backhouse and George Washington Walker.

J. Francis Mather was given the best education available locally, and worked for a time in an architect's office. Later he felt it his duty to assist his father in carrying on the tailoring business started by his grandfather.

He did much work for Friends and represented the Society of the Council of Churches. He was deeply interested in education and served on the Board of Advice for State Schools and on the Committee for Ragged Schools. He was for 30 years Hon. Sec. and Treasurer of the Hobart Branch of the British & Foreign Bible Society. He took over from his brother-in-law William Benson the editorship of the <sup>1927</sup> Australasian Friend (1). He worked for the establishment of a Friends School in Hobart, was secretary to the School Committee and later its chairman. He was an acknowledged minister, and spoke often of the gradualness of religious growth and the evolution of the idea of God.

He married twice: in 1874 Margaret Ann Lidbetter, who died after a long illness; in 1909 Lucy Margaret Thompson. In 1909 they visited England and made personal contact with English Friends with whom Francis Mather had corresponded on school and Society matters.

He died on 11 August 1925.

MATHER, Robert (1847-1913)

L.C. ROBERT MATHER was born in Hobart in the year 1847, the son of deeply religious parents, and was educated under Frederick Mackie. On leaving school he entered his father's drapery business, and in 1874 married the daughter of Captain William Fisher; there were three sons and five daughters of the marriage.

Robert Mather was deeply concerned for the welfare of his fellow citizens; he devoted two or three nights a week to teaching poor lads, and did much work in connection with a Prisoners' Aid Society. He also worked on Temperance lines and served on the local Executive Committee of the Society.

He was an Overseer of his Meeting, and a member of the Executive Committee of the Friends' High School from its inception, and for many years devoted his First-day afternoons to teaching a class attended by most of the boarders there.

"Imbued with the spirituality of our religious Society, and with a profound consciousness of the source of all real strength, and of the necessity of waiting in humble dependence on the living Word, he was a very regular attender of our Meetings for Worship, and, though not often taking / a vocal part in them, by his earnest spirit he contributed not a little to their deeper life and power."

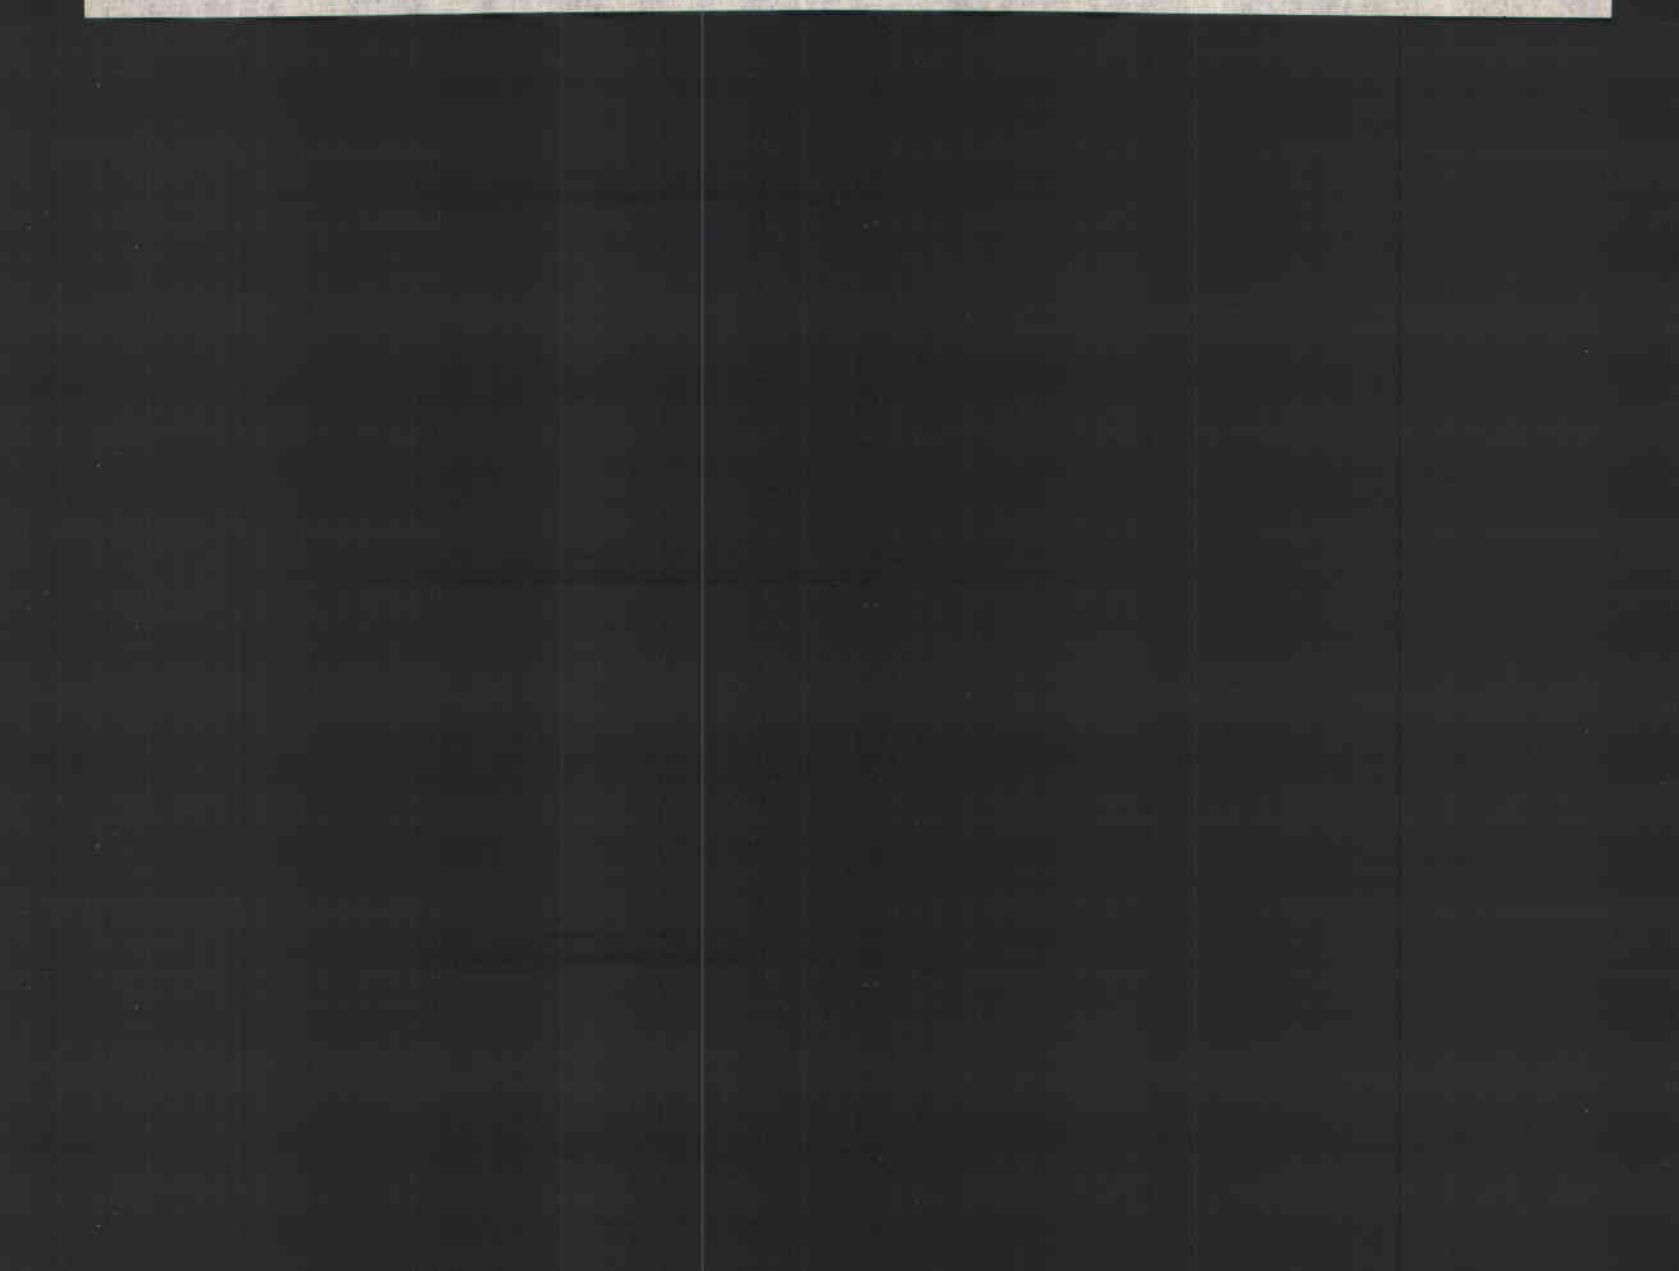

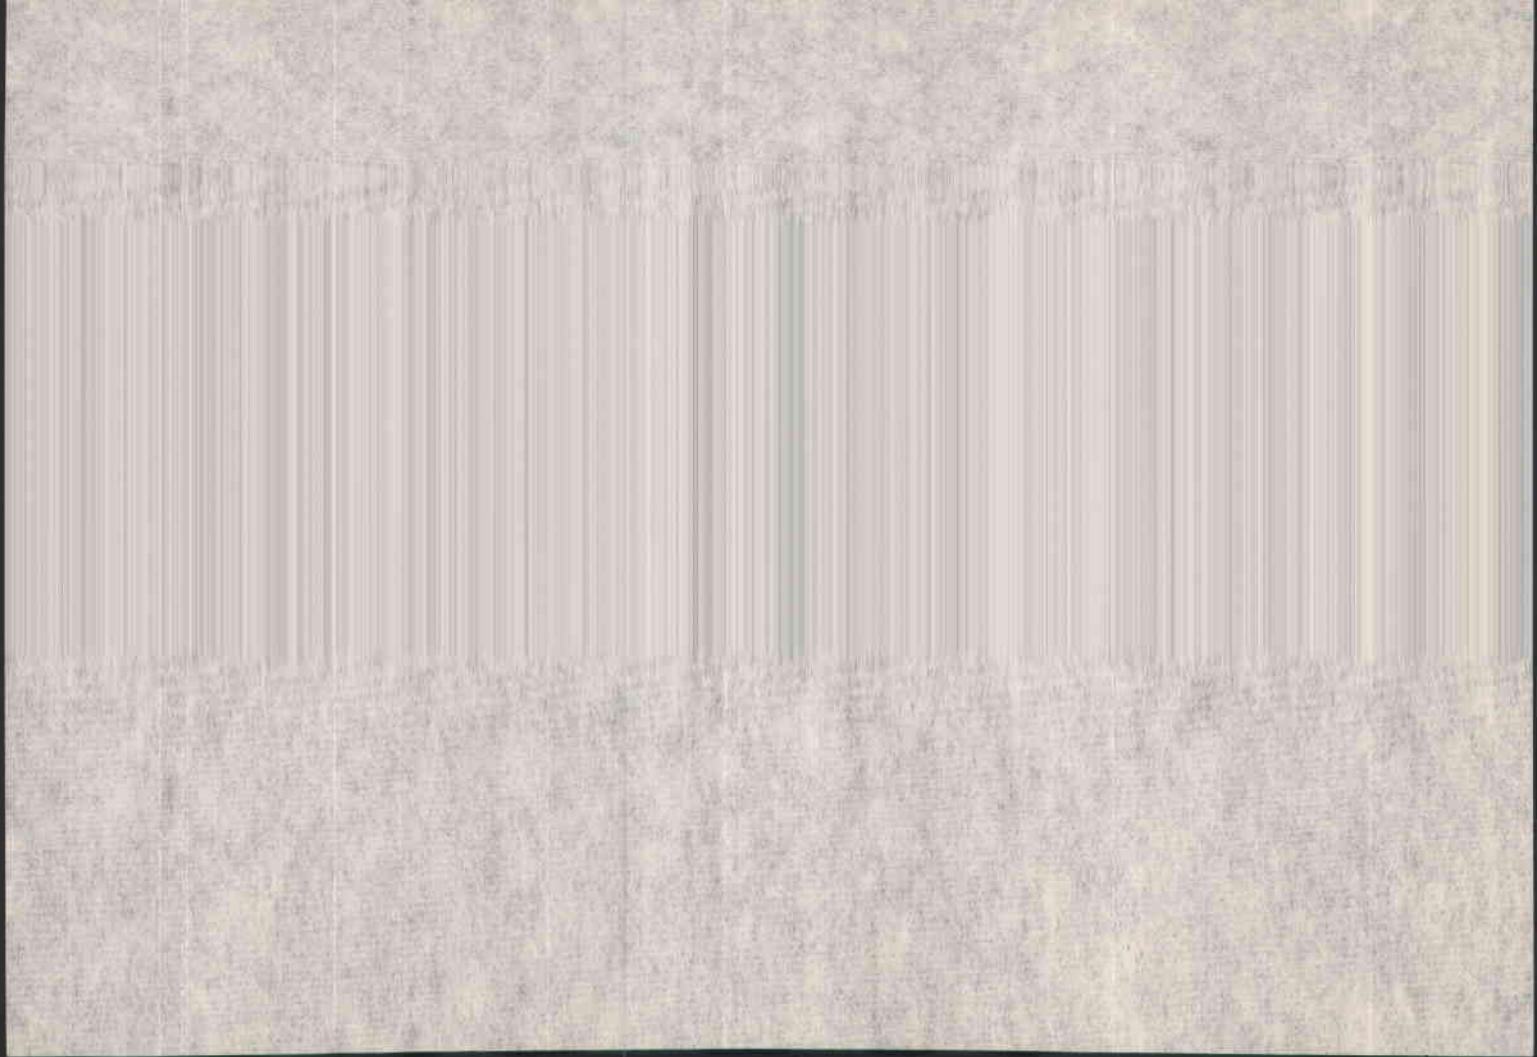

Robert Mather died 25 June 1913.

MATHER, Robert Andrew (1815-1884)

Robert A. Mather was born in London on 17 August 1815, and went with his parents in 1822 to Tasmania (then called Van Diemen's Land) where he remained until 1837 when he removed to Sydney. He spent six years there, assisting in the formation of the Society there, and holding the office of Clerk to the Monthly Meeting. On his return to Hobart he was for many years an Overseer.

'His life has been active in religious and philanthropic efforts - almost continually was he going about doing good to the souls and bodies of his fellow-men, and was a means of great usefulness in connection with the charitable institutions of this city. But, whilst thus engaged he, being of a most retiring disposition, was unwilling that his services should at any time become the subject of comment, being desirous that all the praise and all the glory should be ascribed to his Lord.'

MATHER, Sarah Benson (1847?-1875)

Sarah Benson Mather, the daughter of Robert Andrew and Ann Mather of Hobart Town, Tasmania, was born about the year 1847(1). She was a sweet spirited young Christian and was truly and tenderly beloved by her relations and friends.

She had for some years been engaged to be married to Edward O. Cotton of Kelvedon, Tasmania. Shortly before her wedding she paid a visit to some friends and to see her new home, but on returning to Hobart she complained of feeling unwell. The illness proved to be typhoid fever, she grew rapidly worse and died on 12 March 1875, at the age of twenty eight(2).

MATHESON, William (1878?-1928)

William Matheson worked during the 1914-18 war with the Friends War Victims Relief Committee, being the first dentist to offer his services

He joined Friends in 1919 and with his wife and young family threw himself whole heartedly into the life of the small meeting at Huddersfield (1). He attended Monthly, Quarterly and Yearly Meeting whenever his busy life permitted and for the last three years of his life he served his meeting as clerk. He was especially concerned about peace and had even been concerned before the outbreak of war.

His work as a dentist was what he regarded as his main service. His practice was mainly among working class people, and his cheerful nature, his kindness and his efficient work made him beloved and respected.

After a major operation he died on 9 January 1928 aged 50 years. (2).
