HARLOCK, Alfred Joseph (1864-1920)

Alfred Joseph Harlock, the son of Samuel Harlock (1823-1891 qv) and his wife Mary (born Stretch, 1835-1908 qv) of Nantwich in Cheshire, was born there on 12 October 1864(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1876 to 1879(2) and went on to school at Kendal in Westmorland.

After leaving school he was apprenticed to a cabinet maker and held positions successively in Warrington, Birmingham and Nantwich, but in 1895 he determined to emigrate to South Africa. He worked in the gold mines at Johannesburg and later at Bulawayo, where he fought through the Matabele revolution. Soon afterwards he had a very serious illness and on his recovery he became manager of a chemical factory at Wyberg. The Boer War closed this down and after spending some time in England he returned to South Africa and obtained an appointment in the laboratories of a whale fat industry, where he remained for the rest of his life.

He had a wide variety of interests and a great fund of knowledge of many subjects. He was of a very retiring disposition and had a great dislike of shady methods in business. His early Quaker training stood him in good stead through many vicissitudes and especially through his last long and painful illness.

Alfred Joseph Harlock of Durban, South Africa, died on 6 December 1920, at the age of forty six(3).

HARLOCK, Arthur John (1862-1937)

Arthur John Harlock, the son of John Harlock (1821-1923 qv) and his wife Anne (born Baker, 1831-1877 qv) of Banbury in Oxfordshire, was born there on 15 April 1862(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1872 to 1878(2). After leaving Ackworth he spent two years at Oliver's Mount School, Scarborough.

On leaving school he settled down in Banbury to help his father in the management of the family drapery and haberdashery business, extending the trade, as time went on, to include furniture and carpets. He was married in 1891 to Hannah Eliza Smith (1863-1931 qv) of Charlbury in Oxfordshire(3), but the marriage was apparently childless(4).

He was a Liberal in politics, a teetotaller and a non-smoker. He was interested in the Banbury Adult School and the Warwick Road Mission. He was a great cyclist, a good footballer and tennis player and was one of the founders of the West End Tennis Club in Banbury. He was also a keen chess player.

In 1920 he and his wife retired to Charlbury, where he became interested in local affairs. He was a director and honorary secretary of the Water Company, and a promoter of the Fire Brigade. He instituted and ran, with a small committee, the Charlbury Charity Cup competition and was keenly interested in the local branch of the League of Nations Union.

During their time at Charlbury he and his wife built up a Friends' meeting there. He served his monthly meeting for many years on several committees, where his knowledge of the district was invaluable. As monthly meeting ~~Registers~~ Registrar he gave willing and sympathetic service and was beloved by all for his general friendliness. He served as an elder and in Charlbury Meeting his simple faith was often expressed in vocal prayer.

Arthur John Harlock of The Lawn, Charlbury, died on 18 September 1937, at the age of seventy five(5).

HARLOCK, John (1821-1923)

John Harlock, the son of Joseph Harlock (1771?-1851 qv) and his wife Susannah (born Beeby, 1785?-1855 qv) of Finedon in Northamptonshire, was born there on 31 October 1821(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1831 to 1833(2). His most enduring memory of his schooldays was that all hats were kept in one huge basket and were distributed on special occasions, regardless of size.

After leaving school he spent a short period in Northampton, Dewsbury and Bristol, finally settling at Banbury as a draper in 1848(3). He was married in 1858 to Anne Baker (1831-1877 qv) of Edgbaston, Birmingham(4) and there were five children(5).

He played an active part in civic life. He was elected to the town council in 1861 and served for thirty seven consecutive years. He was elected mayor in 1865, was made a magistrate in 1869 and an alderman in 1879^{5a}. He helped to start the Water Company and the Sewage Farm at Banbury and took a great interest in the Horton Infirmary and the Mechanics' Institute^{5b}. He took a great interest in Sibford School and was on the committee for several years. He also found time to serve as clerk to two Friends' meetings(6).

His strength of character, clear judgment and determination, combined with courtesy and hospitality, remained with him to the end of his one hundred and one years, even though he became completely deaf and practically blind in his last years. He took frequent part in meetings for worship.

In honour of his hundredth birthday his portrait was painted and hung in Banbury Town Hall and he was able to attend and address a party given at the meeting house by Banbury Friends.(6a)

HARLOCK, Margaret (1859-1933)

Margaret Harlock, the daughter of Joseph Harlock (1820-1906 qv) and his wife Mary (born Jackson, 1826-1909 qv) of Warrington in Cheshire, was born there on 26 October 1859(1). The family moved to Finedon in Northamptonshire when she was quite young(2). It was intended that she should be educated at Ackworth School, but she only stayed there for a few months in 1870, on account of her health(3).

In her teens she began to take an interest in temperance work in the village. Later, on the formation of the Women's Rechabite Club, she became one of the Charter Members and her interest in the management of the Club was maintained throughout her life, covering a period of more than fifty years. For twenty five years she represented Friends on the Wellingborough Board of Guardians, retiring when their work was taken over by the county public assistance committee. She was also on the committee of the Finedon Nursing Association.

These interests brought her into touch with a large number of people who were greatly helped and attracted by her kindness, cheerfulness and shrewd common sense. All her service was quietly and unobtrusively given.

Margaret Harlock of Church Street, Finedon, died on 23 August 1933, at the age of seventy three(4).

HARLOCK, Mary Ann (1810-1865) born Cross

Mary Ann Cross, the daughter of Edmund (qv) (born Parkinson) and Ann Cross, was born at Chelmsford in Essex in October 1810. Her parents were not members of the Society of Friends.*

She was a very delicate child, but her health improved greatly after she went to live at Banbury in Oxfordshire, where she helped her uncle in his shop. It was at Banbury that she joined the Society of Friends. In 1836 she went to Leeds to join her sister in running a school, returning to Banbury after the death of her sister-in-law to live with her brother Jeremiah Cross.

She first spoke in the ministry during her years at Leeds and in 1855 she was recorded a minister by Banbury Monthly Meeting. She subsequently visited Friends in Berks & Oxon Quarterly Meeting and in Devon and Cornwall.

In 1860 she became the second wife of Thomas Harlock (1813-1867 qv), a draper of Finedon in Northamptonshire, but the marriage was childless(1). At Finedon, within the compass of Wellingborough Monthly Meeting, she continued her work in the ministry and in visiting the sick and any who might be in trouble. While attending London Yearly Meeting in 1862 she had an accident from which she never fully recovered, although she was able to get about on crutches.

Mary Ann Harlock of Finedon died on 11 April 1865, at the age of fifty four(2).

HARLOCK, Reginald (1867-1893)

Reginald Harlock, the second son of Joseph Harlock (1820-1906 qv) and his wife Mary (born Jackson, 1826-1909 qv) of Finedon in Northamptonshire, was born on 24 July 1867(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1880 to 1882(2). At Ackworth he showed a marked talent for drawing and designing and took a keen interest in such old buildings and places of historic interest as were within walking distance of the school.

On leaving school he was placed with a builder and contractor at Wellingborough, with whom he remained for two or three years. He afterwards entered the employment of White & Pike of Birmingham, first having a position in the artists' room and then becoming manager of the tin works department. His sense of beauty and fitness was very marked and in the intimate circle of his relatives and friends this was not the least attractive quality in a beautiful and wholly unselfish nature.

During the last few years he endured much suffering with steady fortitude and patience. Reginald Harlock of Northfield, Birmingham, died on 31 December 1893, at the age of twenty six(3).

HARLOCK, Samuel (1823-1891)

Samuel Harlock, the son of Joseph Harlock, was born at Finedon in Northamptonshire in the year 1823(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1834 to 1838(2) and after leaving school he was apprenticed to Joseph Stretch (1806-1846 qv), a draper of Nantwich in Cheshire. He was married in 1857 to Mary Stretch, his employer's eldest surviving daughter(3) and there were twelve children(4).

He joined Cheshire Monthly Meeting and was recorded a minister in 1879, visiting the families and individual Friends of scattered meetings with tender care. His health was never robust, but he was active in his own town in many philanthropic labours from the time of the cholera epidemic in 1849 to the close of his life. He was prominent in the work of the Bible Society and the Total Abstinence Society, as well as in the establishment of a Free Library for Nantwich. He had a warm sympathy for Home and Foreign Mission work.

HARLOCK, Sarah Anne (1858-1942)

S. Annie Harlock, the eldest child of Joseph Harlock (1820-1906 qv) and his wife Mary (born Jackson, 1826-1909 qv) of Warrington in Cheshire, was born there on 30 August 1858(1). When she was very young the family went to live at Finedon in Northamptonshire, to the old house in which members of the Harlock family had lived for about two centuries. She was educated at Ackworth School from 1868 to 1871(2).

After leaving school she went as governess to the four younger children of John Morland (1837-1934 qv) and his wife Mary (born Clark,) of Glastonbury in Somerset, which resulted in a deep friendship lasting all her life. When her pupils went away to school she joined the staff of Saffron Walden School for a few years, leaving to act as devoted nurse, companion and friend to a consumptive ex-pupil of the Morland family. After this she spent some time as a governess in Birmingham, until the sudden death of one of her pupils made her services no longer necessary. It was after all this varied experience that Annie Harlock entered upon her work at Ackworth.

She was appointed governess at the school and served from 1896 to 1913(3). Her tenure of office was a memorable period in the history of the school and she laid the foundations upon which her successors were to build. She was a courageous worker of her day in the field of education and her response to new developments was that of a duty to be fulfilled. She re-organised both the form system and the teaching, gradually employing more specialist staff. Domestic science was introduced on very sound lines and was a compulsory subject for the older girls, in a very well equipped kitchen.

She was memorable for the consistency and persistency which characterised her policy; her direct, practical and clear sighted aim in the training of girls in uprightness and truth; her discipline, firm, kind and sane; her recognition of the value of the human touch in her relations with staff and girls. The young apprentices found in her a wise and understanding counsellor, especially concerned with their probationary periods of teaching and their future training and careers. Every evening after preparation she read aloud to the girls while they did fancy work and this helped to develop a more home-like atmosphere in the large family under her care.

Under her regime many amenities were introduced which added to the generally more pleasant impression the school made in its furnishings. Hygiene, sanitation and the general health of her pupils were her constant care and many of her former pupils remembered her as an apostle of fresh air, cod liver oil, swimming, artistic needlework, embroidery and wood carving. She loved gardening and had an utter disregard of how she looked when she was busy. She also took a vivid interest in public affairs and was a keen sympathiser of women's franchise.

On her retirement she returned to her old home at Finedon, living with her sisters in a beautiful house three hundred years old. She loved the Northamptonshire countryside and never tired of visiting on her cycle the places of interest and fine old churches in the neighbourhood. The cottage lace making industry was a perpetual source of interest to her and she never failed to take visitors to see the lace makers.

In her later years she suffered a great deal from rheumatism, but remained fairly active until nearly the end of her life. S.Annie Harlock of Church Street, Finedon, died on 1 December 1942, at the age of eighty four(4).

HARLOCK, Wilfred (1870-1947)

Wilfred Harlock, the third son of Samuel Harlock (1823-1891 qv) and his wife Mary (born Stretch, 1835-1908 qv) of Nantwich in Cheshire, was born there on 25 February 1870(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1881 to 1884(2) and went on to Bootham School, York, in 1885(3).

On leaving school he spent five years with a firm at Darlington and then, as his father's health was failing, he returned to Nantwich and went into the old established business of Messrs Stretch and Harlock. On his father's death he and his brother Thomas took over the business and a happy partnership resulted, until the firm was converted into a private limited company, of which Wilfred and his brother were the directors.

He was married in 1896 to Mary Louisa Binyon (1870-1956 qv) of Yanwth near Penrith in Cumberland(4) and there were two children(5).

Wilfred Harlock was a great figure in the public life of Nantwich and south Cheshire. Amongst the many offices he held was that of treasurer and chairman of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Nantwich and his great services to the society for nearly fifty years were recognised in 1941, when he was made an honorary life governor.

He was a member and for several years chairman of the Nantwich Urban District Council, a member of the Board of Guardians and a trustee of the Nantwich Cottage Hospital. For eleven years he represented the town on the Cheshire County Council, only resigning in November 1945 through ill health. In 1919 he was made a justice of the peace and was for some time chairman of the Nantwich Bench. He always took a great interest in education and served for some years on the Ackworth School committee. He was also a governor and later chairman of the governors of the Nantwich and Acton Grammar School. He was a member of the Nantwich Chamber of Trade and its chairman for twelve years and was a founder member of the Nantwich Rotary Club. During the first world war he gave great service to the local servicemen's families and was decorated with the M.B.E. for his work.

He also served the Society of Friends as clerk to various meetings(6) and was a friend and supporter of every humanitarian cause. His great joy in life was to be of service and he made full use of his talents for the benefit of others. His sincerity and the strength of his convictions were apparent to all and he was a staunch and loyal friend. All his public work was done with simple charm and unostentatious friendship. He held on to essentials, bore the burden of his last days with equanimity and was a good Friend.

Wilfred Harlock of The Cottage, Nantwich, died on 22 April 1947, at the age of seventy seven(7).

HARMAN, Elsa Le Lacheur (1903 - 1975) b. Alden

Elsa Alden was born on 10th January 1903 in London.(1) the daughter of Percy Alden. Her father was one of the founders of the Save the Children Fund, an M.P. and a writer on social problems. One of her ancestors sailed in the Mayflower in 1620.

She was educated at Sidcot School from 1916 - 1920, being Head Girl,(2) later she trained as a nursing sister and during the second world war had special responsibility for the under-fives. She rose to be deputy chief nursing officer at the Ministry of Health, but in 1949 married, at Jordans, Richard Harman, an old scholar, and at that time a master at Sidcot School.(3)

Shortly afterwards they moved to Cambridge(4) where they remained until about 1965 when they removed to Sudbury(5). She is said to have been a Friend, striking both in appearance and in her personality, to have had a refreshing sense of humour and to have helped innumerable people.

She died after a stroke on October 22, 1975, at the home of her sister in Norfolk at the age of 72.

HARRIS, Alice [Seeley] (1870 - 1970) b. Seeley

Alice Seeley was born on May 24, 1870, the daughter of Alfred Seeley of Malmesbury, Wiltshire. After leaving school she went on to Kings College, London and was then accepted for the Civil Service. She had, however, become deeply concerned about the conditions in the Congo, and had also met and become engaged to a young Congregationalist minister, John Hobbs Harris (1874 - 1940 qv). They were accepted by the 'Regions Beyond' Missionary Society, an undenominational body and were to have joined a group of unmarried missionaries under the care of an elderly couple, but the couple were unable to travel through illness and it was suggested that if Alice Seeley and John Harris could bring their marriage date forward they could take charge. This they did and being married on May 6, 1896, they left four days later for the Upper Congo. There, with some Congolese help Alice Harris ran a school, but becoming aware of the miseries around them they joined the Congo Reform Society and later the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protection Society. From that time they devoted their lives, increasingly to the help of oppressed peoples, mainly, but not exclusively, in Africa. John Harris became secretary of the Anti-Slavery Society and later Alice Harris became a vice-president. They campaigned against the atrocities committed in the Congo and there were threats against their lives. They returned from the Congo in 1905 and much later in life Alice Harris recalled how some of the most pressing invitations to speak came from Friends meetings, particularly that of Devonshire House, and that they visited scores of meetings and made many lifelong friends gaining considerable support for their campaign. John Harris wrote a series of books on African conditions and they both returned to the Congo in 1911 and again in 1912, investigating Portuguese slavery, and again in 1938.

John Harris sat as Liberal MP for Hackney North in the 1923/4 Parliament and was knighted in 1933.

The earlier contacts with Friends came to fruition when they joined the Society.(1) later they moved to Dorking.(2) John Harris died in 1940 and Alice Harris continued her interest in the affairs to which they had devoted their lives, but in later years failing sight and then increasing deafness reduced her activity. It did not, however, impair her alertness of mind nor her sustained interest in affairs nor her gracious personality. She had great courage, a deep spiritual quality and an unpretentious religious commitment with a love for her meeting in Dorking. She served for a number of years on several central committees.(3)

She celebrated her 100th birthday on May 24, 1970 but died in a nursing home at Guildford on November 23, 1970, aged 100.

She was active in the Women's Suffrage movement previous to her marriage, and after it pioneered welfare clinics and nursery schools in Croydon. She served for three years on the Borough Council as a Labour member, and was appointed a magistrate in 1937^½.

She joined the Womens International League for Peace and Freedom on its foundation in 1915; she was its Chairman for 12 years first President of the British Section, and a member of its International Executive for 18 years. She also was an active member of the National Peace Council from 1925, and was a member of its Executive Committee at the time of her death.

She was thorough in her service to the Society of Friends. She was an appointed member of Meeting for Sufferings for about 20 years, and served on the Industrial & Social Order Committee and the Friends Peace Committee. She was faithful in attendance at Monthly and Preparative Meetings and at Meeting for Worship. 'Throughout many years' service as an Elder she showed a loving zeal in pastoral care, entering with warmth and imaginative sympathy into the joys and sorrows of a surprisingly diverse range of Friends.'

She died 16 February 1959.

HARRIS, Charles

Charles Harris and his father-in-law, Dr John Raunce, were the leading Friends in the Wycombe Separation. In 1687 Upperside M^{ss} in Bucks, wrote to the Second Days Morning Meeting in London 'of the very immodest & obscene Carriages' of Charles Harris, 'he is joyned to the separate Meeting his ffather Raunce hath set up', a minute signed by eighteen Friends (copy by Thomas Ellwood, in Bristol MSS, reprinted Jnl FHS ix.196). In 1703 there is in the same MSS a letter describing Harris as 'aman disowned by ffriends many years ago for his work of separation' and in 1705 a minute was made by Bucks QM and sent to Bristol respecting Harris, signed by twenty-four Friends. Before the time of his declension, presumably he wrote several short pieces dated 1669 and 1670. Later, in collaboration with Dr Raunce and Benjamin Coale, he produced articles adverse to the general body of Friends.

HARRIS, Edward (1787-1852)

Edward Harris, the son of Richard Harris (1751-1815 qv) and his wife Jane (born Peckover 1756-1848 qv) was born on 5 December 1787(1). From his youth he was an active partner in a large commercial undertaking and was given a considerable degree of responsibility. It was a business peculiarly liable to fluctuations in trade and throughout all his reverses he maintained an unblemished character and reputation.

He was married in 1814 to Isabella Tindall (1791-1868 qv)(2) of Knapton Hall and Long Westgate(3) and there were eleven children of the marriage(4). The family lived at Stoke Newington, where Edward Harris took an active interest in the building of the new meeting house designed by William Alderson. The initials of members of his family could be seen on bricks which, as children, some of them laid(5).

In 1824 he wrote A letter to Friends on the subject of establishing a school for the education of girls; the school was opened and first conducted by Susanna Corder(6).

He died at Cheltenham, while on a journey, on 1 May 1852(7), aged sixty four.

HARRIS, Eleanor Anna (1891 - 1965) b. Baker

Eleanor Baker was born on March 11, 1891, a daughter of William King (1855-1927 qv) and Carrie Leonora (b. Hinman 1869?- 1945) Baker of Acton.(1) She was educated at North London Collegiate School for Girls and at Girton College, Cambridge in 1911, where she took second class honours in history. There, at Cambridge, she met Henry Lynn Harris (1892-1968 qv) and they were married in 1916.(2) He was a pacifist and an 'absolutist' refusing to compromise, and went to prison for his beliefs in the 1914-1918 war soon after their marriage. Eleanor Harris disregarded public opinion in her support for pacifists and while he was in prison taught first at Harrow County School for Girls and later at Leighton Park school. After his release they moved to Bristol to work at Badminton school. There were three children of the marriage altogether - Stephen, Nicholas and Simon.

In 1923 they moved to Letchworth, where Lynn Harris first became a house father at Arundale, the boarding house of St. Christopher, the Theosophical Society's co-educational boarding school. In due course he became headmaster and then with Eleanor's interest in the school and her care for the children, particularly the juniors, the school expanded and by 1939 they were co-principals of a boarding community of 130 pupils.

They decided not to evacuate the school and their act of faith was justified. After the war she continued her work for the school and even after her retirement in 1953 she continued to take an interest in it, and when her son Nicholas became headmaster she sat on the board of directors. She had a deep respect for eastern teaching, she was a convinced vegetarian, supporting the movement in the local, national and Friend societies and a follower of natural healing methods. She also had a great depth of human sympathy and a good sense of humour. At Letchworth meeting she served as an overseer and later as an elder, in retirement she travelled widely, led an active life and also studied in a search for further enlightenment.

She died on April 19, 1965 aged 74.

Elizabeth House was born on December 21, 1917. Her father was John Albert House.(1) She trained as a teacher and in 1944 she married G. Phillips Harris (2) a teacher at Ackworth School. She herself taught at Pontefract Girls High School but joining the Society in about 1946/7 she gave devoted service to the Meeting as an elder and clerk.(4) She also supported her husband in his work for Ackworth School in all sorts of ways, including his personal interest in drama and in caring for the needs of the children, especially the first year pupils. She was deeply concerned for simplicity and for the sacramental nature of the whole of life.

She retired from her teaching post and only a short time afterwards died on December 24, 1979, aged 62.

HARRIS, Helen (1841-1914) born Balkwill
also ~~WEE~~

Helen Balkwill, the daughter of Joseph Hancock Balkwill and Ann Payne Balkwill, was born on 16 April 1841. For two years she was at Emilie Schnell's School at Brighton, but most of her childhood was spent in her Plymouth home, where her father, and later her brother carried on a chemists and druggists business. Later the family home was moved to a lovely country house at Swilley, outside Plymouth, and here Helen Balkwill cultivated the intense love of birds and flowers which remained with her throughout her life. She worked for many social and evangelical causes in Plymouth but her greatest service was among the suffering and dying during the terrible outbreak of small-pox in the city in 1872.

She early felt a call to the ministry and first spoke in a Meeting for Worship at Lurgan in Northern Ireland, where she was living for a time in the family of J.G. Richardson of Moyallon. On her return to Plymouth she was recorded as a Minister and so began a service which was to be far-reaching and fruitful. She accompanied Mary Rogers, an American Friend, on a visit to Friends in the South of France and soon after went to the United States on a visit of two years during which she ministered almost unceasingly. In 1880 she married Rendel Harris, at that time a resident Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge. Shortly after their marriage they went to the United States where Rendel Harris was appointed a Professor in John~~k~~ Hopkins University, Baltimore. Thence they removed to Haverford College near Philadelphia, where Helen Harris continued her ministry. They spent one year in the East, then returned to England and spent the next ten years at Cambridge and Hitchin until 1896 when they went to Armenia to do relief work after the terrible atrocities of 1895-6 (1). They were able to re-establish some of the industries and to help with the care of widows and orphans. They returned to the country in 1903, by way of Russia and Persia, and Rendel Harris made yet another visit in 1906.

Helen Harris went to Leningrad (then Petrograd) in order to plead the cause of the Armenians before the Imperial Family. She also went to South Africa to visit the concentration camps of the Boer War, bringing help to Boer women in the enclosures. Twice the train in which she was travelling was blown up.

The last eleven years of her life were spent at Woodbrooke: she sought to know every student individually and entertained many in her own home. She was the author of several books, including the 'Newly Recovered Apology for Aristides' and 'The Greatest Need of the Society of Friends'.

HARRIS, Helen Esther [Hawkins] (1897 - 1967) b. Hawkins

Helen Hawkins was born on November 26, 1897 on a small farm in New Burlington, Ohio, U.S.A. Her father Benjamin Hawkins was pastor of the Friends Meeting and the family later moved to Grassy Run, Wilmington. Helen went to Wilmington College and later for a post graduate year at Haverford College.

In 1922 she was appointed secretary of the Young Friends Committee of Five Years Meeting, and her duties included travelling, speaking and organising. At the first conference of which she was secretary, at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, in 1923, she met Edward Sewell Harris (1895 -) who was attending with a group of English Young Friends. They were married on September 2, 1924 in Fairview Meeting House, Nr. Flatfields, New Vienna, Ohio, and three days later set out for England, where Sewell Harris was then working at Nottingham University College. Later they moved to Rugby (1) where Sewell was appointed as the first warden of the Educational Settlement, then to Watling (2) where he was warden of the Watling Community Association and Centre, one of the first to be set up in the country. At Watling Helen and Sewell were responsible for starting a Friends meeting in 1932 and she was an elder from 1933 to 1945.(2) Also at Watling in 1941 Helen made her witness against the enforced registration of women for national service and served a month's sentence in Holloway prison.

In 1945/6 she and Sewell were appointed to take charge of a course of training for neighbourhood workers in George Cadbury's former house of Primrose Hill, Selly Oak, Birmingham and there they ran two one-year courses, until the scheme was closed.(3) In 1947 they moved to Westminster where Sewell was appointed as warden of the Westminster Community Centre, a rather different experience from Watling and which became very successful, and then in about 1953 they moved to Harlow New Town where Sewell was again appointed warden of the Community Centre.

At this time Helen Harris was a member of Friends Service Council, of the Friends International Centre Committee and of other central committees(4). She was also a member of the English organising committee for the Friends World Conference of 1952 at which she and Sewell were hosts at Worcester College. Soon after going to Harlow Helen suffered a severe heart attack and for the rest of her life great care was necessary. In spite of this a meeting was started in their home in 1953 and Helen took a great part in its growth, she was appointed an elder in 1961 by MM and only ill health prevented her from attending meeting.

She was direct and forthright in her reactions to events and people, she had to make many adjustments to meet the needs of life in England and being a real partner in all Sewell's activities had to share many problems and difficult situations at times when their views were against the 'popular' stream. In Harlow New Town, in spite of her need for care she was of great help to the people of the area in all sorts of ways, even when confined to her room all kinds of people visited her for help and advice. The thanksgiving service held at Harlow after her death drew a large congregation and tributes were paid by all sections of the community.

HARRIS, Isabella (1757-1832) born Bull

Isabella Harris was the daughter of William and May Bull of Dublin.

At the age of 15 she was admitted into membership as the offspring of 'a marriage contrary to our rules' in spite of a gay disposition. For some years she was 'much exposed to wickedness' even after she married Anthony Harris (1782) a pious man. He was lost at sea in 1795, and left her with six children. At this time she was living at Maryport, and in 1800 - her ways had changed since her husband's death - she was acknowledged a minister at Cockermouth. In 1803 she became headmistress at Ackworth, where she remained until 1822, performing her tasks 'in a very superior way'. After 1804 she spent much of her time visiting Friends in the Quarterly Meeting.

In 1832 she was taken ill at North Shields, and died on March 25th, aged 75.

Rendall
HARRIS, James Rendall (1852-1941)

Rendall

J. Rendall Harris was born at Plymouth on 27 January 1852. From his training in the Mathematical School at Cambridge he derived something of his singular clarity of thought and expression. He valued independence and the freeing of education from creedal tests.

He was influenced strongly by the evangelical movement led by D.C.Moody and the Holiness movement associated with Robert & Hannah Pearsall Smith. He was ready to welcome George Fox's interpretation of life in Christ. Though he worshipped and ministered with Friends at Cambridge he did not join the Society for a long time (being distrustful of Church organisation) until a message given by an Ackworth Master convinced him that he should not enjoy the fellowship without assuming the responsibilities of membership. He was loyal to Quaker principles and testimonies particularly the free exercise of vocal ministry.

With Joseph John Gurney and John Wilhelm Rowntree he agreed that Friends would not thrive on ignorance yet must retain the free spontaneous ministry. As first Director of Studies at Woodbrooke in 1903 he sought to raise the level of interest, spiritual and intellectual, of the average member, to encourage them to ministry and active Christian service.

Undef concern he and his wife Helen went to the far East in 1896 for the relief of Armenians and later went to Constantinople with Stephen Hobhouse in their interest. He was in full sympathy with his wife's active concern for Boer women and children in concentration camps.

At Yearly Meeting and other large business meetings he was not at ease, feeling that Friends were 'constantly losing a favourable breeze because they could not agree to hoist a sail'. In his own Preparative Meeting at Selly Oak and in personal contacts he was happiest and at his best.

Rendall

Rendall Harris was a great scholar and religious leader whose influence extended far beyond the Society, yet there was nothing forbidding about his scholarship or intellectual brilliance. Young and old, rich and poor, learned and unlearned were at home with him.

Above all he was a man of prayer, praying for and with his friends as one sure of a welcome and a hearing in his Father's home.

He died on 3 March 1941

Jane Harris was the daughter of Richard and Jane Peckover of Fakenham, Norfolk and was born in 1756.

When she was 22 she married Richard Harris of London and some years later they settled at Walworth, where at first "she was entangled in the gaieties of the world" and found it difficult to adopt Quaker dress.

In 1797 she visited meetings in Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk, Cambridge and Huntingdonshire.

When she was 60 she became a widow and on October 31 1848 she died, aged 93, a minister for 52 years. She was buried in the Friends' burial ground, Long Lane.

HARRIS, John Frederic (1832-1908)

John Frederic Harris was born 31 August 1832 at Sibford Ferris, Oxfordshire, the son of John Harris (carrier) and Mary his wife, of Sibford (1). After acting as a junior teacher at Ackworth School, he became, in 1857, tutor to James N. Richardson (~~1817-1895~~ q.v.), son of John Grubb Richardson and an MP from 1880-1885. In the early 1860's he obtained a post in the Bessbrook Spinning Co in County Armagh (of which John Grubb Richardson was the head), serving as managing director for over 30 years. About 1898 he retired, and removed to Belfast.

He married, in 1856, Elizabeth Sarah Green, daughter of William Green. They had a family of 3 sons and 4 daughters.

He was an elder for over 40 years, and as Clerk of Ulster QM (a post which he held for 26 years) he was 'perhaps the one man in the QM who had the confidence of all', and 'by his wisdom, tact, and quiet firmness he was able to pilot the Meeting oft-times through many difficulties'.

He died suddenly, 19 November 1908, in his brougham when returning from a Distress Committee meeting. He was buried 23 November in the Friends Burial Ground at Hillsborough, where his wife, who had pre-deceased him by about 5 years, was ~~six~~ buried.

HARRIS, John Hobbs (1874-1940) J X

John H. Harris was born at Wantage on 29 July 1874, and brought up in the Church of England tradition. He was for some years in business in the City of London.

Whilst engaged in social work in the City he felt a call to missionary work in the Congo.¹⁸⁷⁶ This service was shared for 40 years by his wife, Alice Seeley of Frome. It was at the time of the rubber boom and they travelled extensively, mostly on foot, to get as full and accurate information as possible on the conditions of native labour in the Congo. This began a life devoted to the welfare of native races. He became Parliamentary Secretary to the Anti-slavery and Aborigines Protection Society and was a member of the Friends Anti-slavery Committee.

In connection with his work he visited various European capitals, United States, Central, West & South Africa. He wrote many articles, pamphlets and books, and addressed many meetings. As Liberal member of Parliament for Hackney he was able to further many causes he had at heart. He attended every meeting of the League of Nations Assembly from its commencement and rejoiced when the British suggestion of the abolition of slavery was adopted.

John Harris joined the Society of Friends in 1915 having previously been one of the few non-Friends invited to address Meeting for Sufferings.

In his ministry his wealth of illustration always led up to the spiritual teaching he had in view.

He was endowed with great gifts, devoted unreservedly for the service of native races the world over.

Knighted in 1933.

He died on 30 April 1940

Joseph
HARRIS, J. Theodore (1870 - 1958)

J. Theodore Harris was born the 21 - vi - 1870 of Quaker parents, and was educated at Bootham, Dalton Hall, the Flounders Institute, and Owens College. He helped with John Trevor's Labour Church and various boys' clubs, and, for a time, taught at Sidcot and Lexdon Schools.

In 1901 he married Mary O'Brien, sharing her interest in the Montessori system of education and acting, for a time, as secretary of that Society. Up to the time of his death he was an examiner of the St. Nicholas Training School for the Montessori Method.

Money he regarded as a prime cause of the evils of the world, causing him to attempt establishing a barter system of trade (the Co-Operative Brotherhood Trust Ltd) and, for a short time, he ran a shop where goods could be exchanged without the use of cash. This system had to be abandoned when trying to introduce it among unemployed miners as it contravened the Truck Acts.

His Monthly Meeting in their testimony to the Grace of God in his life, likened him to "a Hebrew prophet - his bearded and unkempt visage, his clear and booming voice reminded many of Elijah, for, like Elijah with Israel, he laboured to keep the Society of Friends true to its high calling: the peace testimony and the priesthood of all believers."

Theodore Harris felt that the keeping of Friends true to the Peace Testimony was his particular calling and he worked ceaselessly for this, but he was always willing to work with anybody who called himself a peacemaker. He was a member of the National Peace Committee and was sent as a delegate to Budapest and Berlin. The Quaker Socialist Society and the No-Conscription Fellowship both had his active support, whilst it was mainly by his efforts that London Yearly Meeting adopted 'The Eight Points of a True Social Order'.

The affairs of the Society came first and foremost in his life and he was diligent in attendance at Preparative, Monthly, Quarterly and Yearly Meetings, and expected other Friends to be likewise.

Towards the end of his life his eyesight became impaired by cataract; in Harlow, where he was living, he could often be seen in the streets being guided by a little child. "In him the lion and the lamb did lie down together - and a little child led them".

He died on the 19 - vii - 1958.

HARRIS, Lucy Elizabeth (1873 - 1962)

Lucy Harris was born on June 16, 1873 at Tottenham, the youngest child of Henry (dec'd)(1833 - 1873 qv.) and Elizabeth (b. Sewell 1835 - 1895 qv.) Harris.(1) She trained in medicine at the Royal Free Hospital and in 1899 gained her degree of M.B. Shortly afterwards she sailed for China where she worked for over 45 years as a missionary doctor building first the hospital at Tungchwan (later to be called San Tai) and then extending it to include male patients. Her maternity work first gained the confidence of the local people, but the antagonism, the lack of competent staff, the lack of finance and the various civil wars, culminating in the revolution when she left China, all these were a constant heartbreak and burden to which she valiantly responded.

She was a great help to the local meeting, a devoted Friend and took part in all the meeting activities. Later she heard from the Peking government that the hospital was developing and playing its full part in the medical system of the country.

She died in a nursing home at Letchworth on October 29, 1962 aged 89.

Lucy, the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Harris was born on 16 June 1873 at Tottenham (1). It was a well-concerned Quaker family, and her father had been one of the founders of the Friends Foreign Mission Association.

Lucy Harris was educated at Bradford Grammar School and qualified as a doctor at the Royal Free Hospital, London in 1899. Almost at once she sailed for China, one of the first doctors to be sent by Friends. Her book 'Called to Heal and Help' tells of the early pioneering days. She refused important posts in a London hospital and a large Chinese hospital in order to continue the call to her beloved Santai with its hospital and very hard work. She remained there until her retirement in 1945 when she returned to England (2)

She settled in Letchworth near her nephew H. Lyn Harris where she attended Letchworth Meeting regularly and her ministry Friends will always remember. It was simple and spoken in a clear and strong voice from an experience of the presence of God and a constant waiting on Him throughout her long life.

She died 29 October 1962.

Mary Wilson was born at Kendal in 1819, the daughter of Isaac and Mary Wilson. Her parents' house was always open to receive the Lord's servants, travelling in connection with Friends' work, with the work of the Bible Society, Anti-Slavery or missionary work.

In 1844 Mary Wilson married John Harris, and became a member of Darlington Monthly Meeting. She passed through much sorrow in the death in infancy of four of her five children. After the death of her husband in 1869 she removed to Kendal, where she was recorded a minister in 1871.

'Her gift in prayer was a striking feature in her ministry. Her prayers were no vague general petitions, but the simple, direct expression of felt need, often in the very words of Scripture. She spoke as one who was simply spreading before Him who heard and was waiting to answer the wants and desires of those on whose behalf she pleaded.'

Nicholas Harris was born about the year 1663. He was convinced about the year 1690, in Dublin where he then lived. In 1693 he settled in Charleville, and was a constant and regular attender at Meetings for Worship and for Discipline, often being present at the Yearly Meetings in London. He was much concerned for right ordering and discipline in church affairs.

Towards the end of his life he suffered some difficulties in his outward affairs, having had considerable losses through fire, but "way being made for his ease" he retired to Cork a few months before his death.

Nicholas Harris died 3.viii. [Oct.] 1741, aged about 78 years, a minister about 48 years.

He was educated at St. Christopher School, Letchworth (of which his father was the inspirer and headmaster) and then studied economics and history at Cambridge. His registration as a conscientious objector during the war led to his appointment as an assistant youth leader at the Maes-yr-haf settlement in the Rhonda Valley. This was followed by assistance to the Friends Post-War Service Group. From 1945-1949 he taught at Brummana High School, Lebanon and in the last years acted as school treasurer as well. He returned to England, gained a diploma in education and then returned to St. Christopher School as a housemaster. In 1954 he succeeded his father as headmaster. He guided the school well, developing it in size and quality, he was a natural administrator and also deeply involved in the needs of the children in the school.

He married in 1947 Kathleen Adrienne Joll (2) and there were four sons of the marriage, Adrian, Julian, John and Peter. He maintained his interest in the Middle East throughout his life, serving on the Middle East Committee of the Friends Service Council and of Quaker Peace and Service as member or as chairman.(3)

He died in an accident at Gozo, Malta, on April 9, 1980, aged 57.

HARRIS, Richard Peckover (1779-1846)

Richard Peckover Harris, the son of Richard and Jane Harris, was born in London on 17 March 1779(1). Nothing is at present (1975) traced of his childhood and early life, but in 1811 he married Lydia Masterman(2) and there were seven children of the marriage(3).

Although of strict integrity and uprightness in his intercourse with his fellows and an amiable and affectionate husband and father, his religious life was for many years completely barren and he was deaf to the pleadings of the Holy Spirit. It was not until his last few years that he appeared to regret that religion had played so small a part in his life and he began to attend week-day meetings for worship, which for a long period he had very much neglected. He was not a man accustomed to giving much expression to his feelings, but it was clear to his friends that it was from this time forward his desire to live by the light of God in his heart.

He died at peace at Walthamstow on 11 October 1846(4), after an illness of about three months, borne with exemplary patience; he was aged about sixty seven.

HARRIS, Sarah (1703?-1774) born

2X

Sarah Harris was born about 1703.(1) No details of parentage in testimony. In her youth she was servant to a Friend at Banbury, and was a sober, religious young woman.(2)

She married Nicholas Harris of Long Compton, Warwickshire.(3)

In 1750 she came forth in the ministry. She does not appear to have travelled. Her 'laudable Diffidence' made her services very acceptable.

In 1760 she removed with her husband to Chipping Norton, Oxon, where her husband died 6 years later.

She was 'gentle, affable, kind and charitable; a sincere lover caus of the truly religious of all Denominations; and one who liberally administer'd, in proportion to her Circumstances, to the afflicted & the poor'.

She died 22 June 1774, aged 71, and was interred in Friends Burial Ground, Chipping Norton, 30 June. (4)

HARRIS, Sarah (1785-1873)

Sarah Harris was born in Walworth, near London, in 1785, the daughter of Richard and Jane Harris. In her early years she was tempted by worldly gaiety, but after the death of her elder sister in 1809 she chose the Lord for her portion. About this time she moved to Bradford where, with the exception of a few years spent at Sheffield, she lived for the rest of her life.

Sarah Harris was recorded a Minister by Brighouse Monthly Meeting in 1818, and travelled extensively in the ministry, particularly in the north of Great Britain. In company with other Friends she also visited some parts of Europe.

The preparation and circulation of useful tracts and other publications especially interested her; she had a liberal income and felt the responsibility of her stewardship in outward things. She delighted in ministering to the wants of the poor, and extending help to those of small means, to many of whom she proved a friend in time of need.

She died 7 March 1873.

Theodore Harris was born in 1832 and was brought up in the Society of Friends. In 1852 he went to live at Leighton Buzzard, in the compass of Luton and Leighton Monthly Meeting, where he remained until 1896 when he moved to Torquay.

He was president of the Leighton Working Men's Institute for thirty six years, and was a vice president of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Theodore Harris was strongly attached to the Society, and had a deep knowledge of its inner life. In 1877 he accompanied Isaac Sharp to South Africa upon religious service. He was recorded a minister by his Monthly Meeting in 1868.

'Life and power were the characteristics of his ministry; whilst its depth, originality, and earnestness appealed forcibly to the hearts of his hearers. There was no striving after effect; the delivery was almost conversational in its method; yet the attention of the meeting was securely held. The infinite value of each individual soul in the gathered assembly seemed to be realised by our friend most vividly; that soul's need of a Saviour, and the perfect anticipation and fulfilment of that need in the salvation so freely offered by our Lord Jesus Christ, were the great spiritual facts that he sought to proclaim. He stood amongst us a living witness to the Good News of the Kingdom'.

Theodore Harris died 25 November 1900 aged about sixty eight years.

HARRISON, Agatha Mary (1885-1954)

Agatha Harrison was born at Sandhurst on 23 January 1885, her father being a Methodist minister. She was educated at Jersey Ladies' College and at Redland School Bristol. She was trained for Froebel teaching but soon turned to industrial management, training at Messrs Boots in Nottingham and - after a post at Hull - becoming a special tutor at the London School of Economics.

From 1921 to 1924 she worked in Shanghai with the National Committee of the Y.W.C.A. in China, from 1924 to 1927 with the American Y.W.C.A. as an industrial welfare worker in New York. Family claims recalled her to England, but in 1929 she went to India, accompanying the Royal Commission on Labour as a personal assistant to Miss Beryl Power. From 1931 she was secretary of the Indian Conciliation Group and between 1934 and 1950 she paid five visits to India. This work brought her in close touch with various Friends and she became a member of Westminster & Longford M.M. in July 1940.

She served on the Peace Committee, Friends Service Council and East West Committee and was present as a member of the Quaker international team at every General Assembly of the United Nations from 1950. She died on 10 May 1954 while attending as an observer the conference convened at Geneva for the purpose of ending hostilities in Indo-China.

HARRISON, Anna Mary (1825-1899)

Anna Mary Harrison was the eldest child of Daniel and Anna Harrison and was born in Liverpool on 18 November 1825. When a young child she fell down some steps and injured her hip and was so lame all her life that this affected her whole career. With a younger sister and brother, Mary went to Ackworth School and remained there for three years without visiting their home, as was then the custom. All three children looked back on their school-days as a painful memory.

On their return home, after a period of adjustment, Mary became very useful with the younger children of the family, using her active nature and her resourcefulness to the full in their care. All that Mary undertook, she was determined to do well; she developed early on an intense love of colour and brought grace, beauty and originality into her home through her artistic gifts. She had an instinctive appreciation of the best in pictures and literature and her eager mind fastened upon excellence in many forms from carpentry to pure art. She became a faithful copyist of Fra Angelico's paintings, was outstandingly skilful with embroidery and gathered artists about her through her understanding of their work. In her home at Boscombe she collected a small gallery of paintings and she was a great admirer of Ruskin.

At 20 she went alone to Germany - unusual for a girl at that time - and she entered into German life with great zest and later delighted in many visits to the Continent. She took her three young sisters with her to France and Germany as part of their education, the care of which was in her hands after her first visit to Germany. She loved young people and her greatest gift was her power of encouraging younger people in their work and helping forward their careers.

Among her friends were many engaged in work of social concern among them Octavia Hill. In the American Civil War she threw herself ardently on the side of the North and this work brought her into contact with Gladstone, John Bright and others.

She nursed her mother devotedly in her last years and after her mother's death in 1882 she became more or less an invalid. Though confined to her house and garden during the last year of 1776 - A young servant of David Barclay's was drawn for militia service at Standon, Herts., Eng. Attorney General Thurlow, after an appeal made to him, ruled that Harrison could not be legally committed by virtue of the Act of Parliament, and that if committed he might be discharged by invoking the writ of Habeas Corpus.

HARRISON, Bernard fl. 1776

HARRISON, Charles (1670?-1758)

Charles Harrison was born about the year 1670. He attended Meetings of the Baptists as a young man, but after hearing John Fothergill he was drawn to Friends and after some time received the gift of Ministry.

"His Ministry was acceptable and edifying, his Life and Conversation being very eminently correspondent with the Doctrine he preached."

He died 14 September 1758, and was interred in Friends Burying Ground at Sawley, aged eighty eight years (1), and a Minister fifty years.

HARRISON, CYRIL ARTHUR (1884 ? - 1974)

Cyril Harrison was born in about the year 1884.(1)

He seems to have attended Cotteridge meeting for the greater part of his life but there is no indication that he ever joined the Society.(2)

He was most closely associated with the "War on Want" movement, being in 1954 a founder member of the Birmingham committee. From 1961 to 1966 he served as first editor of the "War on Want" newsheet and from 1962 to 1970 he was the first and only president of the British Federation of War on Want.

He was a tireless worker for the movement and the warmth of his friendship permeated it, breaking down barriers which might otherwise have existed.

He died on January 31, 1974 aged 80.

HARRISON, Elizabeth (fl 1783-1801) born Nutting

Elizabeth Nutting, details of whose birth are not at present (1983) traced(1), was the daughter of Henry and Sarah Nutting of Tannis in Hertfordshire.

She was married in 1783 to Barnard Harrison (1757- qv), a gardener of seven children(2).

HARRISON, Eleanor (1832?-1867) born Rennison

Eleanor Rennison, the daughter of Thomas Rennison, was born about the year 1832(1). Her father died when she was only fifteen months old and, being the youngest of three sisters, she became a favourite with her relations. She was brought up in the Church of England and educated at the Blue Coat School in Kendal, where she remained until she was fourteen; she remembered her school days with great pleasure.

She had a careful training in the outward observances of her faith, but as she grew older they failed to satisfy her spiritual needs and at an early age she became convinced of the truth as professed by Friends. She was received into membership of the Society while living with a Friend's family in London and afterwards for several years held a situation at Ackworth School. (*)

On leaving Ackworth she was married in 1862 to Thomas Harrison of Kirkland in Lancashire(2), but the marriage was childless(3). Her happy marriage was a brief one and she lived only a few years longer. She was not well known outside the circle of her own relations, yet she was serious minded and anxious to live a religious life.

She died of consumption at Kendal on 25 January 1867, at the age of thirty five(4).

HARRISON, Emma Lucy (1844-1915)

Emma Lucy Harrison, youngest daughter of Daniel and Anna Harrison (whose eldest child was Anna Mary Harrison, 1825-1899, qv) was born on 17 January 1844 at Birkenhead (1). Her parents moved later to Egremont, Cheshire, and then to Romford, Essex. Both her parents were Friends, but her mother joined the Church of England: her father was born at Counterset, Wensleydale; her mother came from Uttoxeter.

She had a happy childhood, enjoying the pleasant gardens at her homes, and living in an intellectual atmosphere; her mother taught her children to share her joy in great literature. When she was 13 she went with her eldest sister and two other sisters to Heidelberg, where they studied German, and later they spent a year at Dieppe, attending a French school, to learn French. They returned to England in 1860, to a new home in Highgate. Lucy later attended Bedford College, where she studied with great enthusiasm, one of her tutors being George Macdonald, and formed her life-long interest in the Classics and in English literature.

In 1864 the family moved to Beckenham. She continued her studies at home, attended lectures in London, and came in contact with political, social, literary and artistic people and interests. She enjoyed travel in England and France, and later visited America where a married sister lived in Philadelphia. She enjoyed open-air activities. 'Though domesticities had little attraction for her, she was always ready to take her share in household duties'.

When she was 22 she began to teach in the Bedford College School for Girls, and eventually (the school having become a private day-school at 80 Gower Street) she became a partner and ultimately sole headmistress. 'It is difficult to estimate the influence that she exercised over not only the hundreds of girls who passed through her school, but also on her staff and the parents of her pupils. Her personal attraction was great, and everyone who came in contact with her felt her inexpressible charm.'

In addition to her school work she helped her friend Octavia Hill with her scheme for the better housing of the poor (2); she also supported the Working Women's College in Queen's Square, and taught wood-carving to poor boys and girls.

In 1885, after nearly 20 years' connection with the Gower Street school, she passed it over to Amy Greener, and fulfilled her long-felt desire to live quietly in the country. She built herself a house at Bainbridge in Wensleydale, and lived there from 1886 to 1890.

In January 1890 she began work as headmistress of the Mount School, York, a position she held for 12 years. During this time many important changes were made. 'She was very careful of the feelings of others, and in her efforts to introduce modern methods she was always ready to meet prejudice with consideration and to recognise the force and value of tradition.' She was an original and in many ways an ideal headmistress, having the qualities of justice, sound judgment, and a saving sense of humour.

In 1902 she resigned because of ill health. After a few years in York she returned to her home in Bainbridge, joined by Amy Greener. She continued her literary activities, enjoyed her garden and the countryside, and took a keen interest in the life of the village community, especially the children. She was president of the Band of Hope, and was instrumental in getting a Temperance Hall built on the site of the old meeting house. She was a great strength to the small meeting in Bainbridge; she was an elder, and was recorded a minister by Richmond Monthly Meeting. Her ministry was original and direct.

On the outbreak of war in 1914 she was led 'to believe in the justice of England's cause'. Her intense sympathy for those suffering made her cease to cling to her own life - 'I feel as if I could leave everything now - even my books'.

On Sunday 11 April 1915 she became ill, and died on 2 May 1915. She was 'humble in spirit, noble and gifted in mind, earnest and upright in word and deed'.

HARRISON, Frusannah (1669?-1739/40) born Elson

Frusannah Elson, the daughter of Priscilla Gold, formerly Elson, of Lewes and Brighton in Sussex, was born about the year 1669. She was the daughter of her mother's first marriage to a man named Elson, but there is at present (1976) no further trace of him. Her step-father John Gold, with her mother, gave the necessary consent to her marriage. She was married in 1693/4 to William Harrison III (1667?-1733 qv) and there were six children(1).

The Harrisons started their married life in Brighton, but in 1701 the family moved to Portsmouth. In the certificate of removal Frusannah is described as a minister "and with the testimony of the said Frusannah we had unity." But there is at present (1976) no trace of a testimony to her ministry.

HARRISON, James (1762-1828)

James Harrison was born at Askern near Pontefract in 1762. He married Hannah Tucker on 16 February 1792 (1). The testimony recounts that 'From the accounts which have come to us it appears, that tho some of his youthful days were spent in the pursuit of things which did not belong to his everlasting peace, yet his life and conversation were measurably conformable to our Rules; always retaining an esteem for the Society of which he was a member, and secretly loving those whose conduct was consistant with their profession.' In business he was much employed on behalf of widows and the fatherless. After retirement he lived in Ackworth, where he suffered an attack of apoplexy, from which he eventually died on 11 August 1828. He was buried in Friends' Burial Ground at Ackworth.

HARRISON, James (1824?-1904)
also WBE

James Harrison of York did not become a member of the Society until 1876, but he had spent many years doing invaluable Christian work in the Hungate School, a mission school started by Congregationalists in one of the poorest districts of that city. House-to-house visitation, warnings against drinking and other evils, distribution of tracts, gospel meetings, free breakfasts for the scholars on Sunday mornings, visits to the barracks and over 24,000 personal visits to the Debtors' Prison, won him the nick-name 'Bishop of Hungate'.

James Harrison was foreman of a confectionery works and had little learning, but his gifts were especially adapted to ministry among the poor and unlettered.

His health in later years was not good and confined him much to his room. He died on 29 November 1904 at the age of 80.

HARRISON, John (1700-1773)

John Harrison, the son of William Harrison III (1667?-1733 qv) and his wife Frusanna (born Elson, 1669?-1739/40 qv) of Brighton, Portsmouth and Poole, was born at Brighton on 10.ix.(November)1700(1). About the year 1730 he was married to Mary Linthorne and there were eleven children(2). The marriage took place before a priest, but John Harrison was not apparently disowned for the offence, although he came under dealing by his Meeting.

The family moved to London for a time in 1736 and on the removal certificate his marriage by a priest was recorded, his wife Mary being designated "no Friend." But since his removal to London he had expressed his sorrow for his "outgoings", which Poole Friends were glad to accept and recommended him to Southwark Monthly Meeting.

John and Mary Harrison returned to Poole between 1739 and 1742(3), where John died on 10 July 1773(4), in his seventy third year.

She was married in 1810 to Barnard Harrison (1778-1826) and there were five children.

Mary Harrison of Devonshire House Notting died at Coggeshall, after a long and painful illness, on 14 December 1818, at the age of forty four(2).

HARRISON, Richard (1691-)

Richard Harrison, the son of Francis Harrison (-) and his wife Hannah (born) of Sunderland, was born on 8.viii.[October] 1691(1).

He became a yeoman at Munk Bretton in Yorkshire⁽²⁾ and married in 1715 to Mary Francis (- 1765 qy) of Red Marshall, Durham(3); there were five children(4).

The date of his death is not at present (1964) traced(5).

HARRISON, Rachel (1786-1868)

Rachel Harrison, the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Harrison of Rowlstone near Hornsea, was born there on 26 May 1786(1). She never had the advantage of a formal education, but she was a woman of considerable mental ability, with a retentive memory and well informed mind, which made her company both useful and instructive. She became a schoolmistress and gave her pupils not only instruction but a sound religious training and was remembered by them with gratitude and affection.

Her father was a convinced Friend and was careful to instil into his children the principles of the Society which he had adopted and his daughter adhered to them faithfully throughout her life. In 1854, although nearly sixty eight, she accompanied a young nephew to America, to see her only surviving brother; she always spoke of the great kindness she had received from Friends there, but after a stay of three years she returned to England. She watched with great concern the outbreak of the American Civil War but rejoiced in the end of slavery and subscribed liberally towards the funds raised in England for freed slaves, whose condition aroused her sympathy.

Finding her health and strength failing, she gave up her house in Doncaster and went to live with a friend at Thorne, although she often visited her relatives. In April 1868 she was taken to Grimsby for a few weeks' holiday, but she did not survive the change very long and died at Grimsby on 5 September 1868, at the age of eighty two(2).

Sarah Harrison was a daughter of Rowland Richards of Chester County, Pennsylvania. She was the wife of Thomas Harrison (c.1740-1815) of Philadelphia. They had a family of ten sons, of which there were two Johns, two Thomas's and four Samuels. She was in Europe 1792-1799. After enumerating twelve American ministers present in Y.M. 1784 and "the exclusive tone" of each, J. Jenkins refers to S.H.: "On comparing the different tones with musical instruments, it several times struck me that when she preached we heard with pleasure 'the deep majestic solemn organ blow'".

HARRISON, William (1605/6-1685) William Harrison I

William Harrison I, the son of John Harrison of Brighton, was baptised on 6 January 1606 (i.e. probably January 1605/6). He was a convinced Friend and it was probably he who in 1664 was committed to Horsham gaol for refusing to take the oath of allegiance. At the Sessions he and those committed with him received sentence of premunire, hurriedly passed by Philip Facker, judge of the court, who told them "their Goods & Chattells were forfeited to the King for ever, and their Lands & Tenements During Life, and their Bodyes to be Imprisoned During the King's Pleasure, or words to that purpose, in a Disturbed Spirit that few knew whether it were in Jeost or in Earnest, in wrath or in Mallice . . ."

William Harrison had a wife and family, but no details of them can at present (1976) be traced(1), except that he had a daughter Mary and a son William.

He died on 9.x.(December)1685(2), aged about eighty.

HARRISON, William (-1680)

William Harrison II

William Harrison II was the son of William Harrison I (1605/6-1685 qv) of Brighton. His birth, marriage, family and death cannot at present (1976) be traced (1), except that it is known that his wife's name was Mary; they had a son named William, born about 1667, and a daughter Elizabeth, born about 1676, who was married in 1697 to John Grover III (1677-1752 qv) of Brighton; there were two other children, Mary and Thomas, about whom nothing is known except that Thomas died in 1694.

A curious incident is related of William Harrison II. As he was crossing Emsworth Common towards Portsmouth he was asked by a stranger to look after his horse for a little while. The man did not return and a little later William Harrison was overtaken by some men who informed him that the horse was stolen and loaded with stolen plate. William's story was not believed and he was tried for theft, convicted and sentenced to death. When he was on the point of going to his death he saw the stranger who had asked him to mind the horse, pointed him out to his gaolers and the man was apprehended. He was tried at the next Assizes, condemned and hanged, and William was acquitted.

There is no evidence to suggest that William Harrison II was a practising Friend, but he provides an essential link in the lineage of Katherine Harrison, who was married in 1780 to George Penney III (1748-1805 qv).

He died on 9 November 1680.

William Harrison III was the son of William Harrison II (-1680 qv) and his wife Mary and the grandson of William Harrison I (1605/6-1685 qv), a convinced Friend; he was born at Brighton in Sussex about the year 1667(1). There is at present (1976) nothing to suggest that his father was a practising Quaker, but by the time of his marriage in 1693/4 to Frusannah Elson (1669-1739/40 qv) of Lewes and Brighton(2) William Harrison III was a member of the Society; there were five children(3). At the time of his marriage he was described as "a sayle maker liveing in portsmouth and belonging to the monthly meeting at Rumsey in Hampshire."

After his marriage he appears to have moved to Brighton for a time and two of his children were born there, but in 1701 the family moved to Portsmouth.

He died at Poole on 16.vii.(September)1733(4).

HARRISON, William (1680-1735)

William Harrison received his early education in the Church of England, but while he was still young he went to Maryland in America, where he lived for seven years. He became convinced of the Truth there when he was about twenty and about a year after his conversion, while he was still living in Maryland, he was called "to the work of the Ministry, wherein he continued very fruitful to the time of his death . . . He was willing to Spend and be Spent. He was so Zealous in his Testimony that he brought upon himself an ill state of health under which he laboured a long time . . . He bore a faithful Testimony against Tithes and Church Rates so called." From Maryland he went to Doncaster in Yorkshire and then moved to Nottingham, where he lived until his death.

He died apparently unmarried⁽¹⁾ aged fifty five on 9th November 1735 and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Pontefract in Yorkshire.⁽²⁾

HARRISON, William (1710?-1777) William Harrison IV

William Harrison IV, the son of William Harrison III (1667?-1733 qv) and his wife Frusannah (born Elson, 1669?-1739/40 qv) of Brighton, Portsmouth and Poole, was born about the year 1710(1). He was married in 1737 to Elizabeth Priest, but there is no record of the marriage(2); there were two sons and a daughter, but the birth of only one child is recorded(3).

Elizabeth Harrison died in 1757(4) and in 1759 William married secondly Mary Hack(5); there were apparently no children of this second marriage(6).

William was a sail maker(7) like his father, and died at Poole on 14 January 1777(8), at the age of sixty seven.
