TUKE, Henry (1755-1814)

2 X

Son of William and Elizabeth (Hoyland) Tuke of York, England. He was educated at Sowerby, near Thirsk, under the private teaching of a Friend named Ellerby, and at an early age took up the study of medicine, but at fifteen his father needed his assistance in his business, and he returned to York. His taste for classical studies, however, was always retained. He was taken into partnership with his father and married 1781, Mary Maria Scott, daughter of Faville Scott, of Norwich.

Henry Tuke was an author of some note, and wrote much on the history and doctrines of Friends, his 'Principles of Religion' having gone into many editions and languages. His Works, in four volumes, were edited with a prefatory note, by Lindley Murray, the Grammarian, in 1815. He was a youth of seventeen when his father sent him out to meet John Woolman walking into York, and guide him to his hospitable home. What impressions, one wonders, were left on the mind of the boy? That they were lasting, we know.

The tie between Henry and his father was particularly beautiful, and their intimacy lasted throughout the son's life, who was the first to die. He writes of his father as remarkable for his simplicity and sanguine temperament. The son was a minister for thirty five years, of a very liberal mind, and very fond of children. He happily combined decision of character with unselfish and unwearied zeal for the benefit of others, and enjoyed social intercourse and the refinements of learning. Henry Tuke died at York, August 11th. 1814, in the sixtieth year of his age.

Henry Tuke received a 'guarded education', and at 25 became a recorded minister, wherein he was 'sound and edifying and truly acceptable to Friends.' During his ministry he visited Ireland twice, Scotland five times, and Wales and the Isle of Man once. A very regular attender at Yearly Meeting and at meetings for discipline he felt the great importance of preserving unimpaired the discipline as a hedge and guard of our religious principles and pattern.

In addition to his efforts within the Society he worked hard for the care of the oppressed Africas, the success of the Bible Society, the guarded education of youth, the support of peace and good order amongst men. He published several books for the 'instruction of youth'

(born Hack, 1786-1828)

Henry Tuke, the son of Samuel Tuke (1784-1857 qv) and his wife Priscilla<sup>(1)</sup> of York, was born there on 2 April 1813(1). Nothing is at present (1976) traced of his early life and education, but he grew up into a wayward young man, open to all the temptations and attractions of a worldly life. As with many others, a period of illness proved the means of opening his eyes to the spiritual danger of his way of life. During all his short life he met conflict and discouragement in his efforts to be worthy of the high calling of God in Jesus Christ and having been forgiven much, was always ready to love and forgive others.

He was associated with Hannah Backhouse in her ministerial visits and accompanied William Forster on a journey to the north of France. He occasionally spoke in meetings for worship and his testimony was appropriate and acceptable. He was deeply concerned for the welfare of the young and took a great interest in both the British School and the Friends' Boys' School at York. His generosity towards the poor and the afflicted was a feature of his character, but it was not their temporal good alone that he sought; his Scripture readings, words of consolation and the warm sympathy of his loving spirit cheered many a sick bed. He laboured for many years in the cause of temperance and was an active member of the York Friends' Tract Association, towards which he sometimes added his own contributions. (*)

During the last few years of his life, when seldom able to leave his room, he was often engaged in writing, his bed strewn with books and tracts. He was well read in church history, not only in the records of the Society, but in the general history of the church from earliest times. His last illness was a long one, but he was spared acute suffering and his quiet room was often a place of peaceful, cheerful enjoyment.

at York

He died <sup>unmarried</sup>(2), very peacefully, on 4 March 1855(3), at the age of forty one.

James Hack Tuke was for many years an Elder of Hertford and Hitchin Monthly Meeting.

For many years in earlier life he worked in Ireland, taking great interest in the welfare of the people.

In Ackworth School, the Flounders Institute and other educational institutions of the Society he took great interest, and he was Treasurer of the Friends' Foreign Mission Association from its beginning. He was also instrumental in founding the Adult First Day School in Hitchin.

'For many years he was an active and valuable helper in our meetings for Church affairs. In our meetings for worship he not infrequently spoke in ministry or prayer; his addresses were short and practical, and his prayers, offered with much feeling and solemnity in a spirit of humility, were much appreciated by his friends'.

TUKE, Samuel (1784-1857)

Samuel Tuke, son of Henry (1755-1814, qv) and Mary Maria (born Scott) Tuke of York, was born there on 31 July 1784 (1). In 1810 he married Priscilla Hack (2): there were 12 children (3).

Towards the end of 1823 he first appeared in the ministry, being recorded by York MM in November 1825. In the following decade he paid several religious visits. In his frequent visits to London, as well as in journeys for secular, philanthropic or other purposes in this country and in Ireland, he found opportunity for ministry.

Samuel Tuke was specially serviceable in the administration of the discipline as well as through his writings on Friends' principles. He had read largely the works of early Friends and had given much time and thought to church history. He was concerned for education and was particularly interested in Ackworth School. He was concerned also for the mentally ill and in the relief of destitution and distress.

In 1848 he experienced the first of a series of attacks of a paralysis which gradually withdrew him from service. In the summer of 1851 his voice was again heard in ministry, but a second seizure early in 1854 left him enfeebled. During the latter part of his illness there was but little power of expression.

He died on 14 October 1857, aged 73 years (4). His body was interred in Friends burial ground, Heslington Road, York.

TUKE, William (1732-1822) TUKE, Esther (1727-1794)

Descendant of an earlier William Tuke, who took up his civic freedom in 1629, and was later imprisoned in York as a Quaker. His son William II died in the reign of Queen Anne. Samuel Tuke, a son of the second William, was the father of the subject of this note. The Tuke family were tea merchants for several generations.

William Tuke was born March 24. 1732/3, and became a prominent Friend of York, well known as the founder of the "Retreat" in that city, in 1792, an institution which was the cause of a complete revolution in the treatment of the insane. The Tukes were distinguished for "that nobility which comes from natural endowments, combined with the refinements of culture and religion." William Tuke was successful in his business, and lived and died at his house in Castlegate, York.

At the time of John Woolman's death, the Tukes were contemplating the establishment of a school for girls, a work in which the Friends heartily co-operated. When it was finally opened in 1784, Esther Tuke undertook the oversight with great success. It was discontinued in 1814. "The Mount School", established at Castlegate in 1831, continues its useful career today, under care of the Friends.

William Tuke married, first, Elizabeth Hoyland of Sheffield, daughter of John Hoyland, April 26, 1754. They had five children. She died August 30, 1760, at the age of thirty one. Her husband married for his second wife, June 3rd 1765, Esther Maud daughter of Timothy Maud, of Bingley. She had a brother William, who died in Rhode Island, and another, Joseph, who was for some time in Philadelphia, and probably met John Woolman there. Joseph had been a suitor for the hand of one of the daughters of William Hudson, who went to Pennsylvania in 1750 from the neighbourhood of York, England. Joseph died at the Bay of Honduras. William and Esther Tuke had three children - two daughters, and a son who died young. [See Journal, Sam. Smith of Phila. "Frds' Miscel. ix.130]

Rebecca Jones met Esther Tuke in London, in 1784 when a close intimacy sprang up between them. The American describes her as a sort of "Princess", and she remains as one of the Queens of Quakerism. Her memorial is the York School but her assiduity in nursing the Quaker saint who clung to her ministrations in his dying hour, has given her a place in Quaker history little dreamed of at the time. She wrote various pamphlets and "epistles" to her townspeaople, and the Friends of her meeting. Her letters, with those of her husband, are the sources of our information regarding the last days of John Woolman. She died at York, February 13. 1795, aged sixty seven years.

William Tuke survived both his wives, and died at the advanced age of ninety, December 6. 1822. His biography and a memorial by York Friends have been published, as well as a collection of his writings on the abuses then existing in the York Asylum for the Insane.

TUKE, William (Junr.) (1758-1835)

William Tuke Junr. was a son of William Tuke the Retreat projector, and the fourth of the name. His sister Sarah wrote of him in 1779: "William, the second son, is a husbandman (with John Burgess) an oak of Bashan, which is bending a little because the axe has touched the root." (Memoirs of Samuel Tuke, 1860, 1.56)
In 1789 he married Rachel Priestman of York, who died at Thirsk in 1848
Respecting his appeal, Richard Cockin wrote to Sylvanus Fox 5.i.1821 :-

William Tuke Jnr. appealed against the proceedings of Thirsk M.M. and at our last Q.M. appealed against the disownment thereof. The cause and effects of this afflictive case has been, and continues to be, an occasion of mourning and lamentation in our quarter. I may just observe that the appellant has from the first refused to meet face to face any of his accusers, and that nine Friends who were appointed as a Comte. by our Q.M. ALL very unanimously accorded in judgment on the case, notwithstanding which most of his relations, both privately and publickly, aid him in the support of his appeal.

TUKE, William Murray (1822-1903)

William Murray Tuke, son of Samuel (1784-1857 qv) and Priscilla (born Hack, 1786-1828 qv) Tuke of York, was born there on 18 May 1822 (1). He was educated at Lawrence Street School, York, from 1830 to 1838. (1a)

He married in 1846 Emma Williams (2): there were 6 children (3).

He was at the time of his marriage a tea-dealer in York, but he had by 1856 settled in London (4). In 1863 he moved to Saffron Walden, becoming a partner with his brother in law George Stacey Gibson (1818-1883 qv) in the Saffron Walden and North Essex Bank: Edmund Birch Gibson was taken into partnership at the same time and the style of the firm was changed to Gibson Tuke & Gibson (5). On the amalgamation of the bank with Barclay & Co in 1896, William Murray Tuke and Edmund Birch Gibson were appointed local directors (6).

William Murray Tuke of Saffron Walden died 11 May 1903 aged 80 years (7).

George Tully was born in Sussex of Friend parents and came to Bristol while young, where he was diligent and successful in business, and 'circumspect in conduct'. He felt 'a necessity laid upon him to utter sometimes in our public assemblies in a tender frame of spirit, a few words of exhortation which were sound, savoury and acceptable to Friends'. But, thinking little of himself and preferring others, he was more ready to hear than to speak. He was kind, watchful and lowly-minded, and diligent in attendance at Meetings. 'He was particularly conspicuous in endeavouring to heal differences and to promote love and unity, wherein his labours were often crowned with success.'

He died 30 January 1770 in his 82nd year, a minister for 16 years and he was buried in the Friends burial ground at Redcliff Pit.

Ruth Haylor was the daughter of Benjamin Haylor and his wife Margaret, and became the wife of John Tully, all of Thakeham Meeting. She was brought up as a Friend. She received the gift of the ministry and travelled 'in the service of truth' in Kent, the Isle of Wight, and in neighbouring parts of Sussex. Her ministry was 'refreshing, comfortable and edifying'. It was observed that when she was suffering from 'outward troubles and difficulties' she was 'rather most fresh and lively in her ministry'. She was well respected in her family life, and was 'a lover of truth', who had profitted from the trials and temptations of her youth and so was able to be of help to others.

She died 1 September 1765 aged 66, a minister for 43 years, and was buried in the Friends burial ground at Horsham.

1758 / Anne Gibbins, the daughter of Joseph Gibbins (1756-1811 qv) and his wife Martha (born Bevington, 1759-1827 qv) of Prospect Row in the parish of Aston in Warwickshire, was born there on 24 May 1779(1). In her early life her great attachment to her parents and the tender care she exercised over her brothers and sisters were very apparent and disinterested kindness and solicitude for the welfare of others marked her life.

She was married in 1809 to Croudson Tunstall (1781-1849 qv), a thread manufacturer of Birmingham and there were seven children(2). In bringing up her family her affectionate concern for the right ordering of her family life was exemplary. She was an overseer and believed firmly in the principles and testimonies of the Society, encouraging others to a greater consistency thereto.

In the summer of 1845 she had a severe illness, from which her recovery seemed doubtful. Her health appeared to improve, but she died very suddenly at Alveston Grove near Nantwich, after an attack of apoplexy, on 5 October 1846, at the age of sixty seven(3).

TURK, Albrecht ( 1920 - 1983 )

Albrecht Turk was born on August 19, 1920, the son of a civil servant in Germany, his family had roots in the wooded border area between Germany and Bohemia. He was recruited to serve in the second world war in Russia where he was taken prisoner by the allied forces but after the war the family settled in Cologne. Albrecht took up relief work and for a number of years worked for the American Friends Service Committee in Ludwigshafen at the Quaker Nachbarschaftsheim there. In 1952 to fit him for further service with them the American Friends sent him on a three months study tour of the U.S.A. to study social conditions and institutions and then sponsored him for a year at Woodbrooke. There he met Margaret Bradley who was on leave from the Friends Centre at Dacca and as there was need for an additional worker at Dacca he was posted there and in 1958 (1) four years after joining the team there he and Margaret were married. In 1959 they left Dacca to take over jointly the wardenship of a rural training centre in Kenya and then two years later returned to England to be wardens of the Selly Oak Family Rehabilitation Centre. Subsequently he was appointed director of the Sparkbrook Association. In 1971 he moved to Leicester as community relations officer and two years later he became area development officer for the East Midlands for the Community Relations Commission. In about 1977 he took up the post of secretary to the Community Relations Committee at Friends House. He also served on two Friends central committees.(2)

He was a man of unbounded energy, a firm sense of purpose, with warmth and compassion which inspired trust in all who came into contact with him. He enjoyed people and loved music, animals and the garden he created at his home in Hemel Hempstead.

He died after a long illness on January 3, 1983 aged 62.

TURNER, Frank Newman ( 1913 - 1964 )

Newman Turner was born in 1913 near Barnsley, Yorkshire and brought up on his father's farm at a time when agriculture was at a low ebb. He took diplomas in agriculture and in dairying at Leeds University and also excelled at cricket, rugby and boxing.

He joined the Potato Marketing Board in London where he also wrote for agricultural periodicals. In the years before the second world war he became a pacifist and an active member of the Peace Pledge Union. He also joined the Society of Friends. With the outbreak of war he registered as a conscientious objector and was put in charge of Goosegreen Farm, an agricultural training centre for C.O.s. in Somerset. Afterwards he took over the farm privately (1) and it was there that he developed his ideas of organic farming and natural health for animals. To further these ideals he founded and edited a journal "The Farmer" and he wrote a number of books on the subjects of fertility farming, fertility pastures and herdsmanship in which he described his experiments in organic farming and his successes in the natural treatment of animal diseases pronounced incurable by orthodox methods. His achievements in this field led to further requests for assistance in human illnesses and to meet these he qualified as a consulting medical herbalist. He spent the last years of his life in his practice at Letchworth and London, in propagating his ideals of natural health and in editing and publishing the health journal "Fitness".

He died suddenly at Bingen, Germany on June 28, 1964 aged about 51. He had served the Society locally and nationally serving on Meeting for Sufferings and on the Peace Committee.(2)

TURNER, William Edward (1836-1911)

William Edward Turner was a member of Hardshaw West Monthly Meeting, and was recorded a Minister at the age of twenty three. From that time he gave freely of his time and service to the ministry, not only in Great Britain, but also on the Continent of Europe. In 1876 he was appointed a member of Meeting for Sufferings, and later became a member of the Home Mission and Extension Committee.

(1) In 1891 he became one of the Editors of the British Friend and retained this position until his sight began to fail in 1901*.

"For fifty five years he laboured amongst us as a Minister, and who can adequately estimate the effect of such a lengthened service, sustained with undiminished enthusiasm, through both good and evil report, with an ever widening and deepening flow of love towards his fellows? Distinct in utterance, clear in enunciation, with a faculty of orderly exposition, marshalled under a sense of conviction, it was almost impossible not to derive both teaching and inspiration from his addresses, and his many eloquent appeals to the highest and best in his hearers."

William E. Turner died in 1911.

TURTLE, Arthur ( 1888 ? - 1982 )

Arthur Turtle was born into a poor family in Tyldesley, Lancs in about the year 1888.(1) He attended the Methodist Church as a boy and as a young man and was greatly influenced in his earlier life by the writings of Tolstoy to whose work he was introduced by a Methodist minister in 1911. He began work as a grocer's assistant and in 1916 married Louisa Hine who became a great strength to him in their married life. He refused to join the armed forces at the outbreak of the first world war, was arrested and finally sent to prison for some two and a half years. In prison he made contact with Friends and was very grateful for the help he received from the Quaker visitors particularly from John William Graham (1859 - 1932 qv). After his release in 1919 he began to attend Friends meetings and joined the Society at Leigh, Lancs, in about 1923.(2) At about the same time he became a vegetarian and the cause of vegetarianism coupled with that of peace became his two major concerns. For many years he had a health food shop in Leigh. In the thirties he came under a second great influence, that of Gandhi while he embraced socialism as a natural consequence of Christian teaching. He served his meeting as clerk for some thirty years.(3) He was a living man, with a twinkling sense of humour but he never compromised in his work for peace.

He died on December 12, 1982, aged 94.

TURVEY,            Norman            ( 1897 - 1975 )

Norman Turvey was born at Liscard, Cheshire, in 1897, the son of John Hilton ( ) and Mary Edith ( ) Turvey.

He was educated at Penketh School and in 1915 joined the Friends Ambulance Unit, SSA 14 Ambulance convoy, where he remained until 1919, working mainly in Flanders. In the unit he was inevitably nicknamed 'Topsy'. In 1919 at Oberhefen, he married and with his wife Jeanne Marguerite returned to Birkenhead where he stayed until 1927 and where he joined the Society of Friends.(1) At Birkenhead he worked for Alfred Holt & Co. a firm of shipbuilders.

In 1927 he was appointed bursar of Ackworth school, a post in which he gave excellent service until in 1946 he left to take up the post of secretary to the Governors of the Royal Wanstead School. In 1951 he became company secretary, and later, director, of the firm of Isaac Braithwaite, (drysalters) of Kendall where he spent twelve very happy years until his retirement in 1963 when he moved to Saffron Walden.

He and his wife Jeanne kept in touch with the former members of the SSA 14 convoy, arranging re-unions from time to time, the last of which was held at Tewkesbury in 1969.

Norman Turvey served on Meeting for Sufferings as representative of London & Middlesex QM from 1948/9 to 1951/2, and of Thaxted MM from 1967 - 1970. He also served on the Industrial & Social Order Cttee as a co-opted member from 1948 - 1951, and on appointment from Meeting for Sufferings from 1951 - 1954.(2)

He suffered from a stroke in about 1970 which led to a gradual deterioration in his health and he died on January 18, 1975 at his home in Saffron Walden, aged about 78.(3)

Ann Tweedie was married in 1796 to William Tweedie, both being at that time cordially attached to the Church of England. In 1802 they removed from London to Cornwall. In 1809 she joined Friends, and in 1818 she was recorded a Minister. In 1867 she died at the advanced age of ninety four.

The "Harvestman" in Quakerieties for 1838, approzes Ann Tweedie thus:

"Ann Tweedy, Ann Tweedy,
Thou friend of the needy,
I have oft heard thee preach and admired.
Yet learn from a friend
It is safest to end
When the people begin to grow tired,
Ann Tweedy,
When the people begin to grow tired. "

TWEEDY, Ann (1772-1867) born Naudin

Ann Naudin was born on 26 November 1772, of French Protestant parentage. In 1796 she was married to William Tweedy, who worked in the Navy Office in London. Both of them were at that time associated with the Church of England, but not long after Ann Tweedy felt drawn towards the Society of Friends. It was, therefore, to her satisfaction when her husband gave up his work at the Navy Office, and moved to Cornwall to take up a position in a bank. She joined the Society in 1809 and was followed some years later by her husband.

In 1818 she was recorded as a minister, and for the next 28 years was often engaged in visiting Friends meetings and Friends families, and also in addressing meetings of those outside the Society. She was often accompanied by her husband, who had become an elder, but when his health failed in 1848 she gave up her travels, nor did she resume her work after his death in 1854. She herself lived to the ripe age of 94, a woman of strong character marked 'by no common measure of energy and consistency.'

She died on 17 January 1867, and was buried in Friends burial ground at Truro on 25 January
