HAW, Ann, nee Wilson, 1802-1885

b. June 15, 1802 at Acaster, Malbis, near York, Eng., daughter of Wilson.

1848 joined the primitive Methodists and became an itinerant minister in the Yorkshire dales.

m. William Haw and settled at West Witton in Wensleydale.
She and her husband resigned membership with the Methodists and held meetings in their own house and in neighboring cottages. Later they joined Friends.

Two sons died and it was hinted that the loss of her sons was due to Ann's unfaithfulness. Thereupon the Haw's resigned their membership. William Haw was somewhat taken with the views of Joseph Barker. He died shortly thereafter.

Ann Haw opened a small temperance hotel at Leyburn. She joined Richmond Mo. Mtg.

1879 removed to Redcar. A minister of Darlington Monthly Meeting. Became deaf and almost blind.

d. September 16, 1885 at Redcar, aged 83 years.

HAWKES, Anne (1718-1806) born Oxley

Anne Oxley, the daughter of John and Ann (born Peckover) Oxley of Brigg, Lincolnshire, was born on 4.viii.[October] 1718 (1). She moved to Fakenham, Norfolk, at some stage before 1740 (2). In that year she married Thomas Hawkes (1709?-1784, qv): they lived at Wells, Norfolk, until some time between 1744 and 1747, and thereafter at Norwich (3).

In 1783, when 'she was past the Meridian of Life' (4) Anne Hawkes with her husband, daughter and two grandchildren moved to Spalding (5) where she remained for the rest of her life. 'She once' wrote the monthly meeting 'paid a pretty general visit to the Meetings in this County, and was a striking example of commendable Zeal in the attendance of our Religious meetings' (6). After suffering 'a long and gradual decay of her natural powers' (7) she died on 19 April 1806, aged 87 years, a minister about 50 years.

HAWKESWORTH, Lydia (1733/4-1788) born Waring

Lydia Waring, the daughter of Samuel and Deborah Waring of Alton in Hampshire, was born there on 1.xi.1733 (i.e. January 1733/4).⁽¹⁾ Her parents were Friends in good esteem and she was given a careful religious education, so that as she grew in years she grew in the grace and knowledge of the love of God. In 1768 she was married to Abraham Richard Hawkesworth of Bristol⁽²⁾, a man of considerable intellectual ability, much admired for his learning and attainments, yet withal an exemplary Christian and member of the Society.⁽³⁾ He died within a year of the marriage, which was without issue⁽⁴⁾ and his widow appeared for the first time in testimony at his graveside "with weight and clearness, & by keeping under a right exercise of Spirit & humbly waiting in deep Reverence . . . she was made an able Minister of the Gospel."

She visited most of the counties of England and Wales and journeyed to Ireland in the service of the ministry. Although her circumstances were affluent she lived a life of self denial in order to have more money for her unostentatious alms giving.⁽⁵⁾ In conversation she was humble and exemplary and throughout her last illness her mind was unimpaired.

She died in London after a long and painful illness on 17 December 1788⁽⁶⁾ and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Alton. She was aged about fifty five and had been a minister for about twenty years.

HAWKINS, John Luther (1857-1937)

John Luther Hawkins was born in Reading on 4 August 1857
He worked at Huntley & Palmer's biscuit factory from the age of 16, for 50 years.

His parents were Baptists, but his Mother often attended Friends' Meetings, sometimes taking vocal part. In 1880 John Hawkins was admitted into membership. For some years he acted as Assistant Clerk to the Monthly Meeting, and for a long period served as an Overseer. He was active also in the Band of Hope and the Adult School at Church Street.

J.L.Hawkins was a keen naturalist, and it is to his enthusiastic sharing of his knowledge that many generations of Leighton Park boys owe their love of nature.

After he retired in 1923 he gave more time to intellectual pursuits and personal service. He visited the sick, and infirm regularly, often reading to them for long hours. On Sunday evenings he read the lessons in a little country Church for one whose sight had failed.

John Hawkins took no vocal part in Meeting. His ministry was that of a devoted life of unobtrusive personal service.

HAWKSWORTH, Abraham Richard (1729-1768)

Abraham Richard Hawksworth was born on 28.v.[July] 1729, at Castle Green, Bristol, the son of Walter and Rachel Hawksworth of Castle Green (1).

He was elected treasurer of the Bristol Infirmary on 11 February 1766, and served until his death. William Dyer, the Bristol Methodist, described him as 'a very worthy man and a man of learning, I think understood seven languages and was much admired for his eloquence and learning, and during many years lived like other natural men; but at length, was awakened to a deep sense of the vanity of all human knowledge and became an exemplary Christian, endowed with a universal love for men of all persuasions though he continued in the profession of a Quaker; in which he was brought up; and was remarkably charitable to the poor'. (2)

On 17 February 1768, at Alton, Hants, he married Lydia (1733/4-1788 qv) Waring; no children of the marriage are recorded (3).

He died on 29 October 1768, at Bristol, and was buried there on 1 November (4); a volume of Elegiac and other poems, in his memory, was published in 1769, with a second edition in the same year (5).

Charles Haworth was born at Nelson, Lancs in 1894, the son of Richard and Mary (b.) Haworth. He went to elementary school there and worked in the cotton industry there until the age of 37. In 1920 at Railway St. Methodist Church, Nelson, he married Harriet Blackburn (1) who became a faithful partner and support in all their subsequent work.

In 1931 he changed to social work and from that year until 1936 he was a worker in the Greenfield Garden Village and local institute at Darwen. During this period he served as clerk to two small local allowed meetings.(2) He was then appointed superintendent or warden of the Friends Hall, Barnet Grove, London, a branch of the Bedford Institute Association where he remained from 1936 until 1948 throughout the war, suffering all the effects of the blitz. His wife helped him to maintain Barnet Grove as a place of activity, comfort and practical aid, working in close association with Friends Relief Service. During this period he served on a number of Friends Central Committees.(3)

In 1948 they moved to Eastbourne to take up the wardenship of the Bernhard Baron Cottage Homes at Bolegate, spending eleven years there until 1959 during which time the homes were considerably enlarged, with the provision of twelve more places and central buildings to provide kitchen, dining room and other community facilities. They were valued members of the local meeting. In Nelson and at Darwen he was active on the Peace & Extension Committees of Lancashire & Cheshire QM and in 1937 he attended the Friends World Conference in Pennsylvania.

Harriet Haworth died on February 21, 1963 and Charles Haworth died in hospital in Eastbourne on September 2, 1963, aged 69.

Martha Haworth was the daughter of George and Martha Haworth of Shuttleworth Hall, Lancs. She was a minister about 27 years. Thomas Wilkinson writes of her as "a young heroine" (Carr: Thomas Wilkinson. 1905. p.90). James Enkins records her death "of an illness contracted (in the course of a religious visit) by sleeping next to a damp wall, which she thought the delicate constitution of her companion unable to bear. She was a minister possessed of a large gift...but she frequently exhibited gestures that were by many (I thought) too severely condemned."

HAYDOCK, John (1640-1719)

John Haydock was elder brother of Roger Haydock and was convinced in 1667. He travelled as a minister in England, Scotland, Ireland, and America, and was often imprisoned for his testimony to Truth. His death took place in Lancaster Jail after a week's illness. He wrote in 1697 'A Brief Account of the Life... of Roger Haydock' which was affixed to Roger's Collection of... Writings, 1700. In 1679, Haydock married Ellen Milner (d.1711), of Blyth, Notts., daughter of Gamaliel Milner, late of Burton Grange, Barnsley, Yorks.

Robert Haydock was born at Coppul, Lancashire, in 1660, was convinced as a schoolboy, and came forth in the ministry about the year 1687.

He married 31.iii.May 1692, at Penketh, Eleanor Shaw of Penketh, Lancs (1), and settled at Liverpool (2).

He travelled in many parts of the country, and went often to London. He was much concerned for the discipline of the Society, and 'freely willing to advise and assist in the most difficult affairs, and greatly serviceable in the management of our religious discipline'.

'He was an able minister of the gospel, raised up and qualified by the power of Christ, and in the evidence thereof was often able to bear a faithful and living testimony to the convincement of divers and the edification and strength of many'.

He died 8.x.Dec. 1737, and was interred in the Friends' Burying Ground, Liverpool, 12.x.Dec. (3).

HAYDOCK, Roger (1644-1696) 13

Roger Haydock (Haddock) younger brother of John Haydock was born at Coppull, Lancs. and became, according to Sewel, 'a learned and intelligent man... a man of great parts, well read, and full of matter' (Hist. 1722). He joined the Quakers in 1667, through the arguments of his brother, John, and travelled on Gospel service in the three kingdoms, and in Holland (1686). In 1676, he had a dispute, by word and pen, with John Cheyney, a preacher living near Warrington, described in Cheyney's Warning To Souls to beware of Quakers and Quakerism, 1677, as 'a late Dispute at Arley in Cheshire between John Cheyney a Christian Minister and Roger Haydock, a Sect-master and Speaker to the Quakers on Tuesday Jan. 23, 1676'. Haydock's reply is entitled A Hypocrite Unvailed, and a Blasphemer made Manifest, 1677. In 1682, Haydock married Eleanor Lowe, (d.1723) His brother, John sums up his Gospel labours thus:- 'From the first of his going abroad in the Work of the Ministry, to the time of his departure from hence, was twenty four years and a half; in which time notwithstanding his Imprisonment, Sickness, and Weakness of Body and Family, he travelled by Sea, and by Land, by Computation, Thirty Two Thousand Seven Hundred, Twenty Seven Miles; and ministred in Two Thousand Six Hundred and Nine Meetings or Churches, as his Journal plainly makes appear'. His writings were collected and edited by John Field, and published in 1700.

John and Roger Haydock had a brother, Robert, who was also a Friend.

HAYGARTH, Mary (1824-1892) born Harper

Mary Harper was born on 4 October 1824, one of the older of the nine children of Henry and Mary Harper of Garsdale (Westmorland). Her parents were Wesleyan Methodists, but Mary became a member of the Society of Friends in 1868 - a difficult and painful decision being involved separating herself from her former friends and near relations. Her husband, William Haygarth, also of Garsdale, joined the Society of Friends some years later.

She was a diligent worker at the newly re-opened Garsdale Meeting House and helped to establish a First-Day School which was extended to many workers engaged on building the Settle and Carlisle Railway; she also distributed tracts, lent many books, and carried out much visiting of her neighbours. She was described as "an exemplary character" as daughter, wife and mother (1), and thought always of others. At Meetings for Worship she often preferred silence, as she felt "not so dependent on the ministry of others as were some".

Mary Haygarth spent the last few years of her life at Brigflatts, Sedbergh, and died on 29 October 1892.

HAYHURST, Cuthbert (1633? - 1682/3) also HAIRST

Cuthbert Hayhurst was born in Essington in Bolland, Yorkshire, about the year 1633. The first notice we find respecting him is in 1653, when Thomas Years and his companion were "well-received" by him, and held a meeting in his house. Shortly afterwards William Dewsbury was his visitor but it does not appear that up to this time he had joined himself to Friends; this, however, he did not long afterwards, and Alexander Parker having adopted the same religious views, they, together with those who had been convinced by the Friends before mentioned, settled a meeting near Newton in Bolland, which has been continued ever since.

Cuthbert Hayhurst became an able minister of the Gospel, and travelled in the service of Truth in various parts of England, and also in the West Indies. The exercises he passed through were great, and his imprisonments many, but through all he was enabled to comfort the faithful and true believers, who follow the Lamb through many tribulations. He several times believed it his duty to lay open the deceit of the false teachers and hirelings, visiting the places of public worship with that view. At the market crosses of various towns, also he declared and published the truth as it is in Jesus. Of one of these occasions Nicholas Waln, who accompanied him and his wife, writes "he faithfully warned the people, and exhorted them to repentance; the divine power and ~~present~~ presence universally attending him, which my soul was made sensible of to my comfort and satisfaction". He also remarks "He was of great service to me, and many others, being instrumental in bringing us near unto the Lord, whose Name over all we have cause to bless on his behalf.

With the unity of his brethren, he removed with his family (1) to Pennsylvania (2), where, apparently, after but a short residence, he died in peace on the fifth of the first month (March) 1682/3, aged about 49 years. (3)

Mary Harris, the daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Harris of Barking in Essex, was born there on 5th January 1740.(1) In 1761 she married John Jeffreys(2) and there was a child of the marriage.(3) John Jeffreys died in 1765(4) and she married Joseph Hayling(5); thus she was the widow of this second marriage.(6) Russell Hayling came forth in the ministry about the year 1718.(7)

Ann Hayley, widow, of Guttershedge near Hendon, early opened her house as a meetingplace for Friends. Ellwood reports two visits to her, in 1677 and 1680 (Ell. Text, ii.261,345). HAYWARD, John (1683 - 1763)

John Hayward was born in London, son of John Hayward ~~and~~ and put under the care of an eminent surgeon. During his apprenticeship, he became convinced of the truth and began to attend Friends Meetings, where, at the age of twenty, he attached himself to Friends and confessed 'Christ before men.' His modesty and consideration for others preserved good relations between him and his family in spite this step.

In 1706, he married Elizabeth Bawne (1). There were 8 children, of whom all but Elizabeth died young (2).

At about thirty he began to give public ministry among Friends; his words were plain, sincere and fervent. He did not travel far in the Ministry though he managed to visit the Southern and Western Counties as well as Hertfordshire, Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk. He attended both Meetings for Worship and Discipline, diligently and helpfully and was held in great respect among Friends.

He was a conscientious governor of two large hospitals in the city of London.

A few years before his death he retired to Plaistow in Essex, where he also served Friends and the local community.

He died after a time of illness on 20 February 1763, aged 80 years, a minister for about 50 years, and was buried at Bunhill Fields.

He was Clerk of Yearly Meeting (London) in 1739.

Robert Hayward was born about the year 1695.(1) He appeared in the ministry when he was about thirty five and was "a plain, inoffensive Man in Life and Conversation, endeavouring by example and precept to be instrumental in promoting the welfare of all." He was married, but his wife's name and the date of his marriage are at present (1975) unknown(2); his wife died leaving him with three young children(3), whom he brought up with a careful regard for their religious education and who lived to be a comfort to him in his old age.

He died aged about eighty five on 24 October 1780(4) and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Lynn in Norfolk.

HAYWARD, Sarah fl 1666

Member of Society of Friends who backslid.

Imprisoned in Colchester

1666 The substance of a letter sent to the magistrates of Colchester . . . , by John Furley, Jr. and five others, defending themselves from her charges.

She was a tall woman, long visaged, freckled faced somewhat pock-broken, with red hair and flaxen coloured brows, a pretty full eye and very confident, impudent and subtle. She used many false names as her own, and gave many home addresses. Borrowed money and did not return it.

She appears to have been disowned by the Society and not to have returned to it.

(1688-1754)

Born in Philadelphia, 10mo. 20 1723. Son of John and Rebecca (Macy) Head, who came from Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, Eng., in 1717. They landed in Philadelphia and for some time formed a part of the colony living in the caves on the banks of the Delaware. John was one of two children which John and Rebecca Head carried ashore in a tub between them! John Head became one of the largest merchants in the colonies, and sent his ships to many foreign lands. He was three times married. His first wife was Mary Hudson, whom he married 2mo. (April) 15, 1746. She died 7mo. 16, 1757. He married secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Susanna Hastings, 11mo. 20, 1759. She died 2mo. 2 1770. His third wife was Margaret, widow of Isaac Attwood, and daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth White, of North Carolina. They were married 6mo. 9, 1774. She died 10mo. 22, 1783.

John Head survived all his wives and died at the age of sixty nine, 2mo. 21, 1792, at his residence on the east side of Second St. Philadelphia, between Market and Mulberry, (now Arch) streets, nearly opposite Christ Church.

John Head of Philadelphia became one of the wealthiest colonial merchants as well as a great ship-owner. He was a great friend of Robert Morris, the principal colonial financier of the American Revolution. Morris, by tradition, is supposed to have called on Head, explained the gloomy situation of the continental army, the distressing prospects of public affairs and the necessity for raising a large sum for immediate use by the revolutionary government. Head, whose son-in-law, James Vaux, was an open sympathizer with the American cause, listened attentively and finally said, 'You know the principles of my sect, and that we cannot conscientiously do anything to promote or keep up a war'. Morris renewed his expostulations until the old gentleman finally jumped up and said: 'On that mantel is a key, in that room is an iron chest.' The good Quaker said no more but walked out of his house. Morris, according to family account, is supposed to have taken 60,000 for the use of the American cause. HEADLEY, Burgess Henry (1866-1943)

Burgess Henry Headley, the son of Henry Headley (1824?-1909 qv) and his wife Hannah Maria (born Burgess, 1829-1915 qv), of Ashford in Kent, was born there on 7 March 1866(1). He was sent to Ackworth School in 1876(2) and at the age of fifteen he joined his elder brother Herbert Dimsdale (1862-1937 qv) in the experimental printing press which the brothers set up in a room over their father's grocery shop.

This was the foundation of the Invicta Press, the family printing business of Headley Brothers Ltd in which Burgess Henry worked for over sixty one years. The firm prospered from its small beginnings, branching out under Herbert's guidance into book publishing and colour work from offices on the premises of Devonshire House in Bishopsgate, where many finely illustrated books were produced. In 1896 Headley Brothers became the bookshop of the Society of Friends, until in 1916 the Society decided to open a bookshop of its own(3). In 1900 a fine new factory was built in Ashford and here were installed not only linotype machines but a new invention, seen by Burgess Henry Headley in America, for setting and casting individual letters; Headley Brothers were the third firm in Europe to use this invention, now universally used for good book production.

A disastrous fire in 1906 totally destroyed the whole works and offices, but before the smoke had cleared Burgess Henry set out to buy new machinery and within a fortnight the works were again in production in borrowed premises. Within two months work was commenced on a modern building where there was plenty of room for expansion, recreation grounds and allotment gardens. After the fire continual progress was made, the building extended and some of the first labour saving machinery installed. Care for the welfare of their workers was always a feature of Headley Brothers; excellent and well supported sports facilities were provided and an annual outing was organised, called by the printers a waysgoose. Throughout its history the firm has been favoured by a spirit of friendly co-operation among its members; those who joined as young men and women tended to stay there and several reached more than fifty years' service.

Burgess Henry Headley was married in 1893 to Bertha Neave, the daughter of Edward Neave of Leiston(4) and there were four children of the marriage(5). For nearly fifty years his home was a place where love was manifest to all who visited it, a secure and loving background for his many labours for the firm and the Society. He was a member of the Meeting for Sufferings from 1920 to 1923(6) and gave a lifetime of service to Friends in Kent. He was treasurer to the quarterly meeting for forty seven years and this involved the care and upkeep of Friends' properties. He was clerk of Ashford Preparative Meeting and Registering Officer for the monthly meeting.

He would travel miles across country to visit a Friend in need and no visitor to Meeting failed to receive his kindly welcome. With children, his love of fun and cheerful disposition, combined with constant thoughtfulness and courtesy towards others, won their love and respect. Young people found him understanding and encouraging even when their ideas differed from his own.

He was, though never consciously, a leader and example to others - at cricket at Ackworth, at the Ragged School in Canterbury and later at Ashford Hospital and the Adult Schools. His ministry bore witness to his never-failing wonder in the power given to men, in the glories of nature and the love of God.

He died on 17 January 1943(7), in his seventy seventh year.

F. Mary Headley, born Catchpool, was born 27 March 1882. She was educated at the Mount School, York, where she was for some time head girl and her organising ability and responsible outlook dated from that time.

She married Herbert Headley and together they used their home to entertain large Adult School gatherings and Summer Schools. She was ever ready to open her house and the spirit of hospitality was unchanged particularly to those of other nationalities.

'In business meetings her gift of clear thinking and statement were much valued by her fellow-members. Her ministry in times of worship was exceptional for clearness and beauty. We witness to the steady purpose in her Christian life.'

See HORSNALL, Gertrude May (1864-1948) born Headley)

HEADLEY, Hannah Maria (1829-1915) born Burgess

Hannah Maria Burgess, the daughter of John Funston Burgess and his wife Hannah, born Hagger, of Stoke Newington, was born there on 30 December 1829(1). She was educated at a private school at Croydon, where she was a general favourite and made lifelong friendships. After she left school she taught for a time at the Ragged School in Stoke Newington and in very early life gave clear evidence of her desire to practise her Christian beliefs and principles.

She was married in 1852 to Henry Headley (1824?-1909 qv), a grocer of Ashford in Kent and for twenty six years they made their home there; there were fourteen children of the marriage(2). The business prospered and in 1878 the Headleys moved to Canterbury, where for the next twenty five years they lived in the village of St Stephens on the outskirts of the city. Their home in a pleasant, old-fashioned house called The Wilderness became a centre of warm-hearted hospitality and was a meeting place for Friends attending monthly or quarterly meeting at Canterbury. They apparently moved back to Ashford some time before 1907(3).

While at Ashford, Hannah Maria Headley had found the time to carry on a successful mothers' meeting and, on going to Canterbury and finding herself with more leisure, she devoted much time to social and philanthropic work in the city. She became president of the local British Women's Temperance Association and the City Female Mission. But she did not neglect her duties towards the Society and was for a long period both an elder and an overseer. A regular attender at meetings for church affairs, her presence was a real help, although she did not usually take much vocal part in them.

In October 1902 Henry and Hannah Maria Headley celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by all their family, children and grandchildren and also by a large number of friends. This occasion Hannah looked upon as one of the crowning experiences of her life. Towards the end of her life she experienced much weakness and weariness and about a fortnight before her death she had a serious fall, from which she never recovered. She died on 29 November 1915(4), in her eighty sixth year, having been a widow for seven years.

HEADLEY, Henry (1824?-1909)

Henry Headley, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1975) traced, was born about the year 1824(1). He was a Friend by convincement, a grocer of Ashford in Kent, where he had a shop in the High Street(2). He was married in 1852 to Hannah Maria Burgess (1829-1915 qv)(3) and there were fourteen children of the marriage whose names appear in the records of the Society(4).

He was Clerk to Folkestone Monthly Meeting for an unspecified period prior to 1874 and to Rochester & Folkestone Monthly Meeting from 1878 to 1879(5). In 1878 the Headleys moved to Canterbury. Their business had prospered and for the next twenty five years they lived in the village of St Stephens on the outskirts of the city. Their home in a pleasant old-fashioned house called The Wilderness became a centre of warm-hearted hospitality and was a meeting place for Friends attending monthly or quarterly meeting at Canterbury(6). They moved back to Ashford between the years 1901 and 1907(7).

Henry Headley died at Ashford on 27 January 1909(8), at the age of eighty five.

HEADLEY, Herbert Dimsdale (1862-1937)

Herbert Dimsdale Headley, the son of Henry Headley (1824?-1909 qv) and his wife Hannah Maria (born Burgess, 1829-1915 qv), of Ashford in Kent, was born there on 16 September 1862(1). He was educated at Ackworth School from 1875 to 1877(2) and was then sent to a school at St Austell in Cornwall.

When he was fifteen the whole family moved to Canterbury and Herbert worked for a time in the family grocery business at Ashford. In 1881, when he was about eighteen, he began to experiment with the printing business with his fifteen year old brother Burgess Henry Headley (1866-1943 qv), in a small room above his father's shop. A year later the brothers sent out a decorative letter asking for printing work; by 1883 their business had grown so quickly that they moved next door and installed a newspaper press in the basement of what is now (1975) Headley Brothers Stationery Shop and Post Office. From here a weekly newspaper, the Kent Examiner (forerunner of the Kent Messenger) was produced and such local publications as Headley's Guide to Ashford and Kent County Time Tables. Headley's printing works were the first shop in Ashford to use electricity for lighting and for a time supplied a light to the town in the High Street.

The firm then set out to master the art of book printing and later of colour work. Herbert Headley was particularly interested in this side of their work and a publishing business was started from London offices on the premises of Devonshire House in Bishopsgate, where many finely illustrated books were produced. The Ashford business expanded rapidly and in 1900 a fine new factory was built in Edinburgh Road, but it was totally destroyed by a disastrous fire in 1906. It is a tribute to the energy and organising power of the brothers that within a fortnight all the employees were at work again in premises temporarily loaned by Henry Headley and Paul H. Headley (1873-1943 qv). Within two months of the fire work was started on a modern building with plenty of room for further extension, recreation grounds and allotment gardens.

VA
Herbert was married in 1885 to Margaret Ann Green (1856-1913 qv), the daughter of Joshua Green (1813-1894 qv) and his wife Elizabeth(3); there were two children of the marriage, who both died shortly after birth(4). Margaret Ann Headley died in 1913(5) and in 1917 Herbert married Florence Mary Pettifor Catchpool (1882-1948 qv), the daughter of Thomas Kingham Catchpool(6); there was one child of this second marriage(7).

Herbert retired from the printing business in 1908, but he was still an active member of the Society; he was a member of Kent Quarterly Meeting and was very faithful in all Friends work. He was a member of the Meeting for Sufferings from 1898 to 1923 and served on other standing committees of the Society(8). He was a manager of the Ashford British

HEADLEY, Margaret Ann (1856-1913) born Green

Margaret Ann Green, the daughter of Joshua Green (1813-1894 qv) and his wife Elizabeth, born Robson, of Stanstead in Essex, was born there on 14 January 1856(1); she was a sister of the Quaker antiquarian and genealogist Joseph Joshua Green (1854-1921 qv). She came of Quaker stock on both paternal and maternal sides. Her father's family, who came originally from Yorkshire, joined the Society of Friends as early as 1652 and she was eighth in line of descent from John Greene of Liver-sedge near Huddersfield, who had all his property confiscated under praemunire and died a prisoner for the Truth in York Castle in 1676. Her father was a recorded minister, her mother an elder who exercised a gift in the ministry and at least ten of her uncles and aunts were either ministers or elders. As a young woman she began mission work at Elyenham in Essex with her sister Henrietta, who became the first Quaker missionary to China.

She was married in 1885 to Herbert Dimsdale Headley (1862-1937 qv) of Ashford, Kent, and there were two children of the marriage, who died shortly after birth(2). At Ashford she found many opportunities for service. With her husband she initiated mission work, establishing a Gospel Meeting, Men's and Women's Adult Schools, as well as work among children. She was for many years an elder and an overseer and undertook a great deal of work for the Society. She was a member of the Meeting for Sufferings from 1898 to 1905 and also served on the Home Service Committee(3). Foreign mission work lay very near her heart and she was for years a member of the board of the Friends Foreign Mission Association. She also took an active part in temperance work and was for some time president of the local Women's Total Abstinence Union.

"She frequently shared most helpfully in the vocal service of Meetings and her offerings in prayer gave evidence of the close communion of her daily walk with God; even when she took no vocal part, the uplifting of her presence was felt among us."

She died on 19 September 1913(4), at the age of fifty seven, while on a visit to her sister at Saltburn, Yorkshire.

Joseph Heale was born on the 23rd x [Dec] 1663 (1), son of Richard (2) and Mary (3) Heale of Uxbridge, Middlesex.

He was one 'learned in the school of Christ'; a physician and minister who was held in respect in his community. He was helpful to the poor and distressed, including the fatherless and widows. He travelled devotedly in the ministry, overseas as well as in his own country and encouraged the young in good living.

He was a faithful elder, humble and compassionate to those in need, especially in the Society, he was also a good neighbour, loving husband and father. In 1686, he married Deborah Tanner⁽⁴⁾ and there were 7 children, (5) 5 of whom died in infancy. He was a considerate employer to those who worked under him.

He died on 7.viii[Oct] 1722, aged 59 years, a minister for about 30 years⁽¹⁾ and was buried at Uxbridge Friends Burial Ground(5)

He was Clerk of London Yearly Meeting in 1712.

HEANEY, Elsie Joan (1891 ? - 1978)

Joan Heaney was born in about the year 1891.(1)

Little is known of her early life but she was one of the first members of Friends War Victims Relief Committee to travel out alone in 1920 through France, Switzerland and Austria to Poland, where she nursed refugees suffering from typhus and Cholera. She had trained as a nurse with the British Red Cross and later went to Chalons in France where she nursed at the Maison Maternelle. At about this time or prior to her going out she joined the Society.(2) Later she returned to Birkenhead where her great love of children, skill in nursing and in teaching with her experience led her to become the teacher of sick children at one of the large hospitals, where she taught for 32 years. Later on she moved to The Woodlands, near Wolverhampton (3). Her life was one of quiet devotion to humanity, with determination tempered by a delightful sense of humour.

She died at The Woodlands on May 1, 1978 aged 87.

HEARSON, Mary (1780-1852)

Mary Hearson, details of whose birth and parentage are at present (1975) unknown, was born about the year 1780.(1) She was for thirty five years a member of the Methodist Church; they were "a people whom she much loved" and she was equally esteemed by them. Her increasing conviction, over a number of years, that she must look for a more inward and spiritual form of worship was a great trial to her, but at length she began to attend Friends' meetings; there she felt at peace and was much strengthened in 1828 by the ministry of James Haworth. She was received into the Society in 1831.

She appears not to have married(2), but for a time held the situation of housekeeper in two or three families and afterwards rented a small cottage, where she earned her living by the sale of groceries until failing health obliged her to give this up. She suffered for many years from cancer of the eye and the patience and courage with which she bore this painful illness were a source of inspiration to her friends.

She died at Spalding on 26 March 1852(3), aged seventy two.

HEATH, Carl (1869-1950)

Carl Heath was born 1 December 1869, the son of Richard Heath, the descendent of a seventeenth century family of Nonconformists; his mother was descended from the French Huguenots. His early life was spent in Epsom and later in Paris. After training in Sweden, Carl Heath held various teaching posts in London, Sheffield, Mansfield and Brussels and for a time at Wigton School. While in Sweden he met Effie Margaret Holden, a fellow-teacher, who later became his wife.

In 1909 Carl Heath was appointed as Secretary of the newly formed National Peace Council and for the following five years he travelled widely in Europe and was a frequent attender at the Congress of the International Peace Bureau. He joined the Society of Friends in 1916, having been closely associated with it for some years. In 1914, shortly after war broke out, the work of the Friends Emergency Committee was started in his room at St Stephens House, Westminster.

Under his leadership the National Peace Council was reorganised in stronger form, but he also gave much service not only on the Emergency Committee but also on the Friends War Victims Relief Committee. At an unofficial conference held at Skipton in 1917, Carl Heath made his suggestion for 'Quaker Embassies', and a few months later introduced the idea to Friends by the issue of a pamphlet under that title. The idea took hold and the Council for International Service was set up with Carl Heath as its first Chairman. In 1920 he became Secretary and travelled all over Europe including Russia and Poland, later visiting Syria, Palestine and, in 1925, the United States. When in 1927 the Council for International Service was merged with the Friends Foreign Mission Association, Carl Heath became joint secretary of the Friends Service Council with Harry Silcock, and from 1932 to 1935 he was the Council's General Secretary. The Quaker Embassy idea spread to the East, and International Centres were established in Shanghai and Delhi.

Carl Heath became the first Chairman of the Friends World Committee for Consultation, though he was not present at the World Conference in Philadelphia in 1937 which set it up.

He was for many years deeply concerned for the Ecumenical movement. In 1917 he became a member of the British Committee in connection with Archbishop Soderblom's movement for an International Christian Conference. He was one of the Quaker representatives to the World Conferences of Churches on Faith and Order, and was Clerk of Friends' own Commission on Faith and Order; he saw that the Society was a part of the whole Christian Church and could never be really effective in isolation from it.

Much of Carl Heath's energy and concern in the last fifteen years of his life were given to the cause of Indian freedom and of reconciliation with India. His contact with Mr Gandhi from the time of the Round Table Conferences onward led to the establishment of the India Conciliation Group of which he remained Chairman until his death. Through his contacts and friendships not only with Indian leaders but with most of the British statesmen involved in the Indian problem he was able to bring the spirit of conciliation and humanity to bear on a difficult situation.

'The second world war was a terrible blow for one who had spent most of his life in the cause of world peace. He was deeply sensitive to the sin and suffering of the world and he must have gone through much agony of mind. But these experiences broadened and deepened him still more so that in intercourse with him, one would feel an extraordinary uplifting and peaceful sense of the all-embracing wisdom and love of God. As he grew older so the inner world became more clear, though perhaps not continuously so. Instead, however, of taking him away from outward things, the experience brought more light on this world's problems and gave him an even greater longing to point suffering humanity to the way of Christ.'

He died 4 March 1950.

HEATH, Effie Margaret (1867-1953) born Holden

Effie M. Heath was born 29 September 1867 the daughter of Arthur Holden. She took up teaching and in 1890, in Sweden, met Carl Heath, also a teacher, whom she married ten years later, and with whose wide interests she was always closely associated. They both joined Friends in 1916.

Effie Heath accompanied Carl on many of his travels, including a tour of America in 1925, when she gave a number of readings of her poems, and in 1929, when they visited Greece, Turkey, Syria, and Palestine, on their way to Syria and Palestine Yearly Meeting.

After Carl Heath's official retirement in 1935 they spent a year at Woodbrooke, and then Effie accompanied him on his mission of reconciliation to India, where she became a personal friend of M.K. Gandhi.

Effie Heath was a great lover of all God's creatures, and worked untiringly for animals; she was an ardent vegetarian and anti-vivisectionist. She published a number of small volumes of her poems, and took a great interest in the unseen world, the references to angels and fairies in her writings and conversation being no mere fancy but the expression of her experience.

She died 21 March 1953

HEATH, Elizabeth Ann (1827-1898) born Southall

Elizabeth Ann Southall, the twin daughter of William Southall (1797-1866 qv) and his wife Elizabeth (born Baker, 1803-1871 qv) of Leominster in Herefordshire and Birmingham, was born at Leominster on 30 September 1827(1).

She was of a highly nervous disposition and subject to hysteria. With this temperament and a share of the family domineering spirit, she was at times very difficult, but she could be quite charming. After leaving school she studied with her sister Frances Mary (1827-1917 qv) at the Birmingham School of Art.

She was married in 1852 to John Heath (1827-1916 qv), a steel pen manufacturer of Lea Consett and there was one child(2).

Elizabeth Ann Heath of Hall Green, Birmingham, died on 23 April 1898, at the age of seventy(3).

HEATH, Ethel Mary (1879 ? - 1971) b. Knight.

Ethel Knight was born in about the year 1879 (1) the daughter of Henry Charles and Sarah Elizabeth Knight.(2)

She was educated at Ackworth School where she was head girl in 1893 and also spent one year at The Mount. She went to Woodbrooke when it opened in 1903 to study Greek and Hebrew under Rendell Harris and H.G.Wood. She took a classics degree at Westfield College, London and in 1914 married John St.George Heath, formerly a young lecturer in social science at Woodbrooke and at the time of the marriage secretary of the Liberal's Land Enquiry.(3) She had earlier joined the Society of Friends. see note (2).

At about the beginning of the first world war her husband became warden of Toynbee Hall and here she spent most of her brief married life, sharing with him the increasing isolation and unpopularity of pacifists in East London. He died in the influenza epidemic of 1918. Then began a teaching career which led her to The Mount, to Dr. William's School in Dolgellau, on to lecture tours in Lancashire and Cheshire as part of Friends extension work. In 1942/3 she returned to Woodbrooke as a Fellow. She also served on Friends central committees(4).

She died at The Retreat on April 11 1971, aged 92.

HEATH, Harold Edward (1894 - 1982)

Harold Heath was born in the year 1894. After he left school he became a chemists assistant in Burnley and then in 1919 he went out to Zanzibar under the Friends Foreign Missions Association. In 1920 he married F. Irene Knight (1) and they worked together on the island through all kinds of difficulties until 1956 when they returned to England. When they first went to the island there were no roads only tracks for donkey transport, no professional or craft training and the only Christian presence was that of the Roman Catholics and the Quakers. They developed the standard mission pattern of gospel teaching and Swahili hymns, of school and dispensary, of craft and youth training, of care for the elderly and the orphans, of thrift, self-government, agricultural improvement and of concern for raising the status of women. Critics of Missions found the pattern inadequate, not sufficiently integrated with the culture of the region and not concerned with the need for radical social change. Harold and Irene Heath in their deep, simple faith took no notice and got on with the job. The Sultan of Zanzibar honoured him and in 1955 an M.B.E. was accepted from the Queen for the sake of the work, but it was the work itself which was his greatest reward. They were valiant against slavery and its legacy and helped the people of Pemba to rise above what seemed to be their only destiny.

They returned to England settling first in Eastbourne and then later moving to the Bernhard Baron Cottage Homes at Polegate. He was a great strength to the meeting both at Eastbourne and at Polegate, an elder for many years including service as clerk to N.E. Elders. He also served as clerk to the PM at Eastbourne.(2) His ministry was greatly valued.

He died suddenly on June 25, 1982 not long before his eighty eighth birthday.

HEATH, John St. George Currie (1882-1918)

John St. George Currie Heath was born in 1882, the son of an Anglican clergyman. He joined the Society of Friends in 1910.

In 1902 he went up to Oxford where he became President of the Union. In 1906 he became Warden of the Neighbour Guilds Settlement at Sheffield but in 1907 went to Freibourg for some months of special study in preparation for his work at Woodbrooke Settlement where he developed the specialised training for social workers. After some years there in close association with the Worker's Educational Association and the Birmingham University, he came to London to become the Secretary of the Land Enquiry Committee under Lloyd George and in association with Seebohm Rowntree, Charles Buxton and E. Richard Cross.

In 1914 he became Warden of Toynbee Hall and at that time married Ethel Mary Knight, a member of Manchester Meeting. In 1916 he entered the Ministry of Labour where he was continually consulted by many responsible Ministers of State and others on all sorts of social problems arising during the war.

He was an enthusiastic member of the Adult School and had a ready following of many young and keen students and workers. He was a frequent attender at Yearly and Quarterly Meetings and was one of those responsible for the special conference held at Devonshire House in October 1916 the report of which, entitled 'Facing the Facts' contains some valuable contributions by him. He was also largely responsible for the Conference of Quaker Employers.

'His manner of life was one of extreme simplicity and it was remarked that he had no 'possessions'. This made his influence so quietly searching in the various movements for social reform with which he was connected'.

John St. George Currie Heath died on 5 November 1918.

HEATH, Thomas (1676?-1769) 2X

Thomas Heath was born at Southampton about 1676 and was brought up in the Church of England. He became 'convinced of the truth' at about twenty five years, and being 'faithful thereto, received a gift of the ministry, which although not large was sound, lively and edifying and well received, being accompanied with an innocent exemplary life and conversation which drew the near affection and tender regard of his friends and neighbours'. He was a diligent attender at meetings. In 1702/3 he married Hannah Cager (1); they had five children (2)

He died on 8 August 1769 aged 93 years, a minister for about 50 years, and was buried in the Friends Burial Ground at Poole.

HEDLEY, Thomas (-ante 1717) Thomas Hedley II

The family of Hedley, of Hedley on the Hill in Northumberland, was once one of old standing in the county, although it is now forgotten and unknown. Thomas Hedley II, the first Quaker in the family, was the son of Thomas Hedley I (1609-1702). He was born a Roman Catholic, but the year of his birth is not at present (1976) traced. He left his native village and settled at Westerton in the county of Durham and somewhere about middle life became a member of the Society of Friends.

His first wife Ann, whom he married about 1675(1), died in 1683(2) leaving him with three young children(3). About the year 1689 he married Margaret, the daughter of Cuthbert and Jane Ward of Shotley Bridge(4); her father was steward to the last Earl of Derwentwater. Thomas and Margaret had nine children, but there is at present (1976) no trace of them, which suggests that Margaret was not a Quaker.

Thomas Hedley II died between the years 1709 and 1717(5).

HEDLEY, Thomas (c.1676-post 1762) Thomas Hedley III

Thomas Hedley III, the elder son of Thomas Hedley II (-ante 1717 qv) and his first wife Ann, was probably born at Hedley on the Hill in Northumberland about the year 1676(1). He was married in 1705 to Ann Bell of Dalton in Yorkshire(2) and there were three children(3).

At the time of his marriage he was living at High Moss; later he moved to Studdah, or Studhoe, in Yorkshire and lastly, in 1748, the family moved to Grill Acker House, Walworth near Doncaster.

The date of his death is unknown, but he was mentioned in the Will of his half-brother Jonathan Hedley (1693-1763) in 1762(4).
