OLDEN, Ole F

(1880 ? - 1963)

Ole Olden was a Norwegian Friend who was born in about 1880.(1) He trained as a school teacher and was appointed headmaster of St. Swithuns, a large secondary school in Stavanger, in 1923. He was a pacifist and communicated his ideas through the spoken and written word and when he later joined Friends in Norway his national reputation contributed greatly to the small and almost unknown group of Friends which he then served for the rest of his life. He carried single-handedly the monthly Quaker journal "Kvekeren" for twenty years or more, he spread his influence far beyond the limited contacts of Friends. During the Nazi occupation he was dismissed from his post and even imprisoned for a few months in 1940/41. In 1946 after the liberation he returned to his post and to his home with which with his first wife Ingeborg Marie and later with his second wife had always been a centre of hospitality.

In his later years he became Clerk of Norway Yearly Meeting and was acknowledged as the leader which he had always been. His last long journey was to the Friends World Conference in Kenya in 1961, to which he travelled alone making his own itinerary and contacts.

He died on February 18, 1963 aged 83.

OLIVER, Daniel (1771-1848)

2f

Daniel Oliver was born at Benwell Hills, near Newcastle-on-Tyne on February 8 1771. He was not educated in a Friends' school and "was led into the practice of hurtful amusements".

After leaving school he worked on his father's farm and was "led by associates into folly and wickedness". At 18 he was converted. He was at first hindered in his work as a minister by his lack of education but later overcame this handicap. He visited almost all meetings in Great Britain and Ireland. In 1842 his wife died. He himself died on April 2 1848 aged 77, a minister 41 years.

OLIVER, Daniel (1830-1916)

Daniel Oliver could trace his Quaker ancestry back through several generations. He was the eldest son of Daniel (1806-1878) and Ann Oliver, and was born at Newcastle-upon-Tyne on 6 February 1830. He went to school at Wigton where he was always up to mischief and constantly making experiments. He had a great love for plants and insects. He left school at 14, and entered the family business but had no heart for it. He was fortunate in finding several kindred spirits in Newcastle Meeting, and these and others formed the Arkesian Society, which held fortnightly lectures on scientific subjects at the Meeting House.

Daniel Oliver turned more and more to botanical studies and revealed exceptional powers of observation, and thorough and patient criticism. At 21 he became a member of the Edinburgh Botanical Society and two years later was made a Fellow of the Linnaean Society. During a botanical excursion to Connemara he discovered Naiae flexitis, a plant hitherto unknown in Britain.

In 1858 he was appointed Librarian of the Kew Herbarium, and three years later became Professor of Botany at University College, London, - an appointment he held for 27 years. In 1861 he married Hannah Hobson, daughter of James and Jane Wall of Sheffield (1); there were three children (2). In 1863 he was made a Fellow of the Royal Society, and the following year was appointed Keeper of the Kew Herbarium, a post he held until his retirement in 1890. He was outstanding in the department of systematic botany and his textbook "Lessons in Elementary Botany" has been used by countless students. "He was a man of utter sincerity, of simplicity of life and character, of quiet humour and of unbounded love of nature". He was a great lover of home life, and ideal with small children to whom he told stories of dragons and fairies. He was a very modest man despite his great learning, but he could not avoid the scientific recognition of his work given by the Royal Society, which bestowed on him its Royal Medal in 1884, by the Honorary Degree of LL.D by Aberdeen University, and by the Linnaean Society's Gold Medal in 1893.

One of his spare-time pursuits was sketching, and on his many holidays abroad he made hundreds of delicate sketches which were methodically arranged in cabinets. He also took up oil painting, and was very fond of music. He enjoyed 26 years of retirement, devoting much time to reading and to his garden. He had a wide circle of talented friends, including Ruskin.

Daniel Oliver attended Isleworth Meeting till late in life, and when he could no longer go held a meeting in his own house with his neighbour John Gilbert Baker. He died after a very short illness, on 21 December 1916, aged 86.

Joseph Ollive was born at Walthamstow, Essex, on 19.ix. [November] 1692, the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Ollive, of London, and was brought up as a Friend.

He received the gift of the Ministry when he was about thirty five years old, and in spite of bodily infirmities travelled for many years in various parts of the country.

He was a useful and industrious member of Ratcliff Monthly Meeting, of Meeting for Sufferings, of the Morning Meeting, and of several other Meetings, being 'extensive in Knowledge, deep in experience, distinguishing in judging and audible in expression'.

He was generous throughout his life, and highly regarded in his neighbourhood.

'He very nearly sympathized with the Afflicted in Spirit, and was often made instrumental for their Relief; he had a great regard for the Honest-hearted, though ever so weak and feeble in the Church; and was frequently concerned to intercede for them, when favoured in the House of Prayer, that they might be strengthened, and come forward to do their Day's Work in the Day Time'.

He died suddenly 25 April 1758, and was interred in Friends Burying Ground at Ratcliff, aged sixty five years, and a minister about thirty years.

Sarah Satterthwaite, the daughter of Edward and Mary Satterthwaite of Preston in Lancashire, was born there on 30 April 1788(1). She was married in 1817 to William Ord (1788-1832 qv), a schoolmaster of Yealand in Lancashire and later a flax spinner in Durham, and there were five children(2).

While living in Lancashire she felt a deep interest in those attending Friends' meetings but not in membership, calling upon them in their own homes and trying to help them to understand the principles and practices of the Society. The family moved to Durham some time between 1819 and 1822 and in 1832 she was left a widow. She returned to her native town of Preston and passed the rest of her life with her widowed brother Michael Satterthwaite, whom she dearly loved.

She was recorded a minister by Preston Monthly Meeting in 1837 and visited at various times meetings in many parts of Great Britain, including the Channel Islands. She had a childlike humility which was very striking and was earnestly concerned both for the welfare of the Society and the maintenance of the faith of its founding fathers. To the sick and any in trouble she was indeed a "mother in Israel." (Testimony) She and her brother delighted to entertain travelling ministers and to speed and encourage them on their way, as well as to cherish all that was good in those with whom they came in contact or who shared their hospitality.

Sarah Ord's mental powers remained unimpaired until a few days before her death, but for some time her health had been failing and she died at Preston on 17 May 1867, at the age of seventy nine(3).

OSBORN, Charles (1775-1850)

Charles Osborn was born in North Carolina. His home was at Economy, Wayne Co., Indiana
He was in Europe in 1832-3

In the memory of Samuel Alexander, who was a Schoolboy at Waterford, he is thus pictured: "A tall man Friend with unusually broad-brimmed, drab, beaver hat, long drab coat, reaching almost to the heel, and grave face bearing traces of mental feelings, which we understood as "exercises" only waiting the opportunity for vent."

OSBORN, William (1669?-1747)

William Osborn was born about the year 1669 (1) and was a member of Leominster Monthly Meeting

He was appointed a Minister about the year 1707, and was "a sound and powerful Gospel Minister." He suffered much on account of his faithful testimony against tithes.

"He was of such an exemplary, sweet, inoffensive and self-denying Life, as demonstrated him to be a true Follower of the holy Lamb of God; and made an intimate Acquaintance with him very pleasant, as several of us can witness."

He died 15.VIII [October] 1747, aged about seventy eight years, and a Minister upwards of forty years.

The Family of Peter Osborne and Juditte Deuce of Philadelphia, 1712
Iowa City: Morning Walk Press, 2014

Charles Osborne Jr. (will signed Nov 27 1729 probated Jan 28, 1730) married Dorothy Tunk in 1692 and in 1698 they registered their house ^{in Bilston} as a Dissenting Protestant house of worship. The Wolverhampton Friends Meeting today describes him as one of their founders.

Charles & Dorothy signed the traveling minute of his brother Peter and wife
Juditte (Deuce) on 6th month 29, 1712.
Peter and Juditte immigrated to Philadelphia that year. Peter died and Juditte married William Harvey.

Elias Osborne, details of whose parentage are not at present (1981) traced, was baptised, or as he described it, sprinkled, on 24.iv.[June] 1643 at Chillington near Chard in Somerset. His parents were Puritans and his mother died when he was about two years old. His father kept him very carefully at school and, as he grew older, took him to lectures on religious subjects, but the young Elias found something lacking in the doctrine that was preached and, on the way home, often discussed with his father the addresses they had heard.

When he was about fifteen he left school and was apprenticed to the clothing trade. There he met with unsuitable companions and spent much time in hunting and other sports. During this time he did not altogether forsake religion and tried many forms of worship without finding what he needed. By the time he was nineteen he had become weary of his way of life; it was at first hard to give up the pastimes he had enjoyed, but he had heard of the Quakers and began to frequent their meetings. In this he met with much opposition from his father and his relations and friends, but Elias was convinced of the truth of the principles of the Society and persevered on his way. About this time he went to assist a widow of his parish in her clothing business; the widow had two daughters, both of whom became Friends and he found himself in an honest, religious family, which was a great help to him.

He was married in 1665 to the younger daughter, Mary Horte (-1675 qv) (1) and there were four children(2). His father was at first opposed to the marriage, but in time he came to think highly of his daughter-in-law. It was a very happy and united marriage; Elias and his wife traded together, while his mother-in-law looked after the house.

Elias suffered under the Conventicle Act and also for non-payment of tithes. He was able to help others who were imprisoned for their faith, but he considered his own sufferings were light in comparison with what others had to endure and as a thank offering to God he helped to build a meeting house at Ilminster, which was much needed.

In 1673 he moved to Chard, where there was but one other Friend in the town, but he found good neighbours who helped him through the bad times he had to endure for his faith. Two years after his removal to Chard his wife died, leaving him with four young children, but his mother-in-law and her elder daughter were a great comfort to him in his distress.

He had been a constant attender at monthly and quarterly meetings from the time of his marriage and at length felt called to speak in meetings for worship, but he hesitated under a deep sense of his own unworthiness and his past failings. He received a great deal of help from John Anderton, with whom he afterwards travelled in the ministry; "he was well Gifted in the Ministry, in which he labour'd with great Diligence and good Success, many being convinced by him, and others confirm'd and strengthened in the Way of Righteousness. His Doctrine, and pious Example, was of eminent Service amongst us, and being qualified to serve his Neighbours and Friends, often interposing as a Mediator, to reconcile Disorders; and being just, prudent, and skilful in such Affairs, he acquired great Repute amongst such with which he was concerned He was of a singular good Disposition, not apt to give way to hard Thought, tho' sometimes had Cause for it In his Ministry he was very Exemplary, tenderly regarding the Service of Strangers that travelled amongst us in that Work, by giving way to them. And in Meetings for Business was of good Service." (Testimony)

He continued a widower for three years and in 1678 he married Mary Smith(3); there were four children(4). His friends thought his marriage would hinder him from doing the Lord's work, but he was often from home on religious journeys and continued to suffer under the Convention Act. He was imprisoned for holding meetings, was set in the stocks and his goods were distrained, but nothing could turn him from his course, which he held without undue bitterness towards those who opposed him, although he had some harsh things to say of those who informed against him. Sometimes he met with quiet gatherings and had great success, but at other times he described the people as wild and rude and, like George Fox and many others, he suffered physical hurt. He was a minister valiant for truth and strong in the love and power of God.

Elias Osborne of Chard died on 29.iv.[June] 1720(5).

[Persons whose names are spelt thus will be found under OSBORN or OSBORNE, according to the general usage of the family concerned]

OSBURNE, William

The earliest meeting place of Friends in Edinburgh, of which there is any record, was the house of Lieutenant-Colonel Osburne, c.1653, who according to Sewel became 'a zealous minister amongst the flock at Edinburgh' (Hist. 1722; Jnl. F.H.S. vi.). In 1657 Margaret Fell wrote Osburne a warm letter of encouragement and caution (Spence MSS.iii.47). From this time he disappears from view, save for a reference in MS in a volume of Humphry Smith's tracts of date 1658 (196.4), where he is described as 'my friend William Osborne, lately a Colonel'.

OSGOOD, John (1634?-1694)

John Osgood was a linendraper, of Cheapside, when he married Rebecka Travers (97.1) in 1667. His second wife was Mary, daughter of William Welch (233.4) whom he married in 1674. She died at Hornchurch, Essex, in 1695/6, aged fifty years. His London house was one of those built by several Friends in White Hart Court, after the Fire (London Friends' Meetings, p.145). His countryhouse was at Mortlake (pp.124,127,134). He was on numerous committees and appointments of 'London' MM and other Meetings (Sundry Ancient Epistles, pp.35,40,41). He presented a petition to the King in 1679 and was called before the Grand Committee of the House of Commons in connection with the Toleration Bill (Christian Progress, pp.374, 635). Osgood was engaged with William Meade in arrangements for supplying poor Friends with flax for spinning (Jnl. FHS xii.122). Some money transactions between Roberts, Osgood, and Meade and Algernon Sidney are reported in Jnl FHS, xi.68. The family became allied with that of Hanbury (The Hanbury Family, 1916, p.245; Jnl. FHS. xiv; Jnl FHS xxiii,52.

5 Bristol & Somerset QM Burials Digest

Jonathan Ostell of Moorhouse in Cumberland was born on 10.xii [February] 1675/6, the son of Thomas and Frances Ostell of Newtown (1); and was brought up as a Friend. After being much attracted to worldly gaiety he returned to his membership of the Society, and was made a Minister about the year 1699.

He visited Meetings in various parts of England, Scotland and Ireland, and attended London Yearly Meeting on many occasions, the last being in his 74th year. He was much exercised about the question of tithes, and was firm both as to paying or receiving them, in several cases delivering to the owners of estates the rights and property he could have claimed.

"His Service and Labour of Love was great, not only amongst Friends, but also with People of other Perswasions with whom he had divers Meetings. He became an able Minister of the Gospel, and in Prayer he was remarkably fervent and powerful."

For a few years before his death he was very infirm, and had lost his sight. He died 12 October 1752, aged seventy seven years, and a Minister for fifty three years.

OVEREND, Mary (1783-1862) born Kitching

Mary Kitching, the youngest daughter of William Kitching (1752-1819 qv) and his first wife Ann, born Ianson, of Darlington, was born there on 14 March 1783(1). In her early days her circumstances were very limited and this gave her an insight into the problems of the poor which awakened her sympathy for their sufferings and made her always ready to help them as far as lay in her power.

She was married in 1831 to John Overend (1769-1832 qv) of Chitts Hill in Middlesex, but the marriage was childless(2). Her husband died about six months after the wedding(3) and she faced thirty years of widowhood. Some time before her marriage she had been dangerously ill and never fully recovered her health, but she continued her work among the poor. Her delicate health prevented her from mixing much in society, but she had an open and candid disposition and often took her more affluent friends to task with an honest Christian boldness which not only did not give offence, but endeared her greatly to them.

She had to endure much bodily suffering in her later years, which she bore with patient trust in the goodness of God. She died at peace at Chitts Hill on 20 August 1862, at the age of seventy nine(4).

OVERTON, Samuel (1668-1737)

Samuel Overton was born at Tachbrook, Warwickshire, on 14.vii. [September] 1668, and was brought up as a Friend.

He received the gift of the Ministry about the year 1694, and the following year married and moved to a farm of his own, where his affairs prospered. He was the father of seven children, besides several who died in infancy. He travelled in the Ministry in many parts of England, particularly in the West, and sometimes in Wales, and for many years attended Yearly Meeting in London.

He was of great service in attending marriages and burials amongst Friends, and helped to set up the Meetings for Discipline in his own neighbourhood, being of sound judgment and steady Reportment.

'He had an excellent Gift in the Ministry, and his Labours there-in were generally very acceptable, he being sound in Doctrine and mighty in the Scriptures'.

He lived at Gravefield, in the parish of Hampton Lucy, Warwickshire. He died after a long illness 23.vii.[September] 1737, and was interred in Friends Burying Ground, Warwick, aged sixty nine years, and a Minister about forty eight years.

OWEN, Dorothy (1751?-1793)

Dorothy Owen was the daughter of Rowland and Lowry Owen of Dewispren near Dolgelly in Merionethshire(1), who educated her in the principles held by the Society of Friends. When she was about fifteen she became seriously concerned with religious matters and appeared as a minister when she was about twenty two; her ministry was lively and edifying and she was a powerful influence in the convincement of others. She was faithful in her attendance at meetings "from which neither distance nor weather prevented her, while of Ability, having frequently gone nearly 40 miles on Foot in this mountainous Country to attend her Monthly Meeting, even when the Inclemency of the Season increased the Difficulty to Danger."

She died after a lingering illness on 12 April 1794(2) and was buried in Friends' burying ground at Tythundgareg. She was about forty two and had been a minister for about nineteen years.

OWST, Marjorie (1895 ? - 1979)

Marjorie Owst was born in about the year 1895.(1) She was educated at Cheltenham Ladies College and then took up nursing as a career, being awarded a gold medal as 'student of the year' in 1919. She was a member of the Congregational church. Not long after she qualified as a nurse she returned to St. Albans and gave up her nursing career to care for her parents, but became involved in all sorts of ways with helping others. During the war years she was concerned with the sick and with evacuees and with refugees and after the war continued her special care for immigrants and their needs.

In about 1947 (2) she joined the Society of Friends although she maintained her interest in the Congregational (later to become the United Reformed) Church. She served her meeting faithfully as an elder and as an overseer, being particularly concerned for the children and young people of the meeting. She also served on Meeting for Sufferings. (3)

She died at her home in St. Albans on December 1, 1979, aged 84.

OXLEY, Joseph (1715-1775)

Joseph Oxley, the son of John Oxley (1682/3-1743 qv) and his wife Ann (born Peckover, 1687-1720 qv) of Brigg in Lincolnshire, was born there on 4.ix.[November] 1715(1).

His mother was a minister of the Society, but she died when she was thirty four; his father survived her for little more than three years, leaving three children, the eldest of whom was Joseph, then aged eight. His guardian became his uncle Edmund Peckover (1695/6-1767 qv), who educated him in the principles of Friends, but in his youth he was led away by the influence of evil associates to an indifference towards religion, a neglect to attend meetings for worship and other unprofitable and disorderly practices. He became a source of great trouble to his relations and friends.

Some years later he had the alarming experience of being nearly crushed to death by a great crowd, he being a small man. He was rescued from his predicament by a kindly stranger and his narrow escape had such an effect on him that he forsook his evil ways and acknowledged the love of God in his heart. He listened humbly to the advice of his friends and followed the leadings of the Truth.

In 1742 he received a gift in the ministry, which after some time of deep fear and reverence he accepted and appeared in public much to the satisfaction of his friends.

He was a clock maker of Norwich(2) and was married firstly in 1744 to Elizabeth Fenn (1719?-1753 qv) of Norwich(3); there were five children(4). He married secondly in 1757 Mary Burr (1715/6-1794 qv) of Royston in Hertfordshire(5), but the marriage was apparently childless(6).

He travelled in the service of the Gospel at various times in many parts of England, Scotland and Ireland and in 1770 he paid a religious visit to Friends in America, which was a source of great satisfaction both to those he visited and to himself. "This our dear Friend was exemplary in conduct and agreeable in conversation, honest in advice, charitable in sentiment, & unwearied in Benevolence. He was therefore deservedly esteemed by his neighbours and beloved by his Friends . . . The love of God being shed abroad in his heart, he preferred the Lord's business to his own & when he felt divine drawings to visit the Churches he resigned himself fullt." (Testimony)

Joseph Oxley died on 23 December 1775, at the age of sixty(7).

Edmund Pace was born about the year 1803, a member of Her cheerful Bury Monthly Meeting (1), but on moving to London at the age of 22, he became a member first of Peel and then of Devonshire House, within the compass of which he lived for the greater part of his life.

He was a regular attender at Stoke Newington Meeting, and he was recorded as a minister by his Monthly Meeting in 1868.

'His delivery was characterized by a natural eloquence, and the hearts of the worshippers were often deeply moved by the fervour of his prayers'. 137-145

Much of his leisure was spent in religious and philanthropic efforts in the East End of London. He was one of the founders of the Bedford Institute, and for many years presided over its Committee of Management. It was the publication of a letter of his which awakened the Society and enabled the Bedford Institute to become an important centre of relief during the outbreak of the cholera in 1858. In the year 1871 he became an active member of the Friends' French Relief Committee, on several occasions visiting the city of Paris on that account.

Edmund Pace died in 1881.

PACKER, James John (1837?-1863)

James John Packer, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1977) traced, was born at Thirsk about the year 1837(1). One of his parents was an Episcopalian and the other an Independent and during his early youth he was left much to the care of a pious grandmother, who took great pains to read and explain the Scriptures to him and his sisters. From his sixth to his ninth year he attended the British School at Thirsk and became greatly attached to one of the masters, so that when at the age of ten he was sent to an Episcopal school at York he regretted the change very much. He also felt the Episcopalian teaching to be narrow in its conception of salvation, but he was too young to be properly critical of the faith in which he was being educated.

When he was fourteen years old he was apprenticed to a printer and book seller. The early years of his apprenticeship were times of great carelessness with regard to spiritual matters. He was occupied with his daily work, or helping his father, or with amusements of various kinds and his whole way of life was such as to deaden his susceptibility to religion. His father tried to give him good advice and counsel, which he largely ignored, but in the later years of his apprenticeship he became a teacher in the First-day school of the Independents, receiving much kind advice from the minister in charge.

When he was nineteen he joined a drawing class conducted by a member of the Society and this was his first contact with Friends. A taste for natural history was also the means of drawing him into closer contact with the other members of the little meeting at Thirsk; he attended a public meeting held by a Friend travelling in the ministry and this made a deep impression on him.

At about this time his apprenticeship came to an end and he had the opportunity of accepting the offer of a printer's and bookseller's business in Thirsk. Although in such a small town it could not offer him a very lucrative livelihood he decided to accept the offer and before he was twenty one he had settled down to his place in life. He began regularly to attend Friends' meetings and supported the reading meetings and Bible classes which were sometimes held in the meeting house. In 1858 he was admitted into membership of the Society and in the same year he was married to Sarah Jane Baker, the daughter of John Baker of Thirsk(2); there were two children(3). Shortly after his marriage he felt it his duty to speak in meeting, but his contributions were neither frequent nor long.

A year or two later he was instrumental in forming the Thirsk Christian Temperance Society, joining the committee of management and frequently taking part as a Bible reader or a speaker. After a time the Temperance Society was extended to include a number of neighbouring villages and a large number of members were gathered together; in these meetings his heart was fully opened to the needs of the people among whom he had grown up. In 1862, mainly at his suggestion, a First-day School was formed and about seventy people of both sexes attended. James Packer took his part as teacher of one of the classes and as general superintendent and he continued to fill both these posts as long as he was able. His energy of character led him to throw himself wholeheartedly into whatever task he took in hand, whether religious exercises, business, or gardening for recreation and although his frankness of expression often brought him into collision with those from whom he differed, his opponents could hardly fail to recognise and respect his open-hearted sincerity and kindness.

He crowded a great deal of activity into a very short life and died at Thirsk, following a chill, on 9 November 1863, at the early age of twenty six(4).

m. 19 February 1840, Joseph H. Painter of West Chester, Pa.; two sons.

Her father died when she was quite young and she was adopted by her aunt and uncle, Esther and Mordecai Hayes, of Chester County, Pa.

After her marriage, she and her new husband moved to Ohio, where they remained several years, before moving in 1852 back to Philadelphia and Camden, N.J. During this period she pursued her medical studies, writing her thesis on "Electricity as a Remedial Agent."

At the beginning of the Civil War, she offered her services and organized, under Gen. Phil. Kearney, the first hospital south of the Potomac River, at the Theological Seminary. After the first battle of Bull Run (1861) she followed the army, laboring as nurse and physician in hospitals and on the field. After the war she continued her work in the hospitals until all the troops had been removed.

She practiced medicine in Washington, D.C., Alexandria and Richmond, Virginia until 1868, when her health gave way and she went to visit her sons in Wyoming and Utah territories. After another serious illness, she and her husband moved to Lincoln, Nebraska (c.1875), where she again practiced medicine and established an infirmary.

PAINTER, May Blanche [Elizabeth] (1891-1964)

Elizabeth Painter was born on 16 May 1891 (1), the daughter of a noted London restaurateur. During the first world war she served as a most effective recruiting officer for the Women's Land Army. After the war she and her sister Mary spent some time in Austria, leading a gay life. Later, when they returned to England, Elizabeth felt the need to use her life more constructively. She began to attend Westminster Meeting and in 1926, at the age of thirty four, she applied for membership. It was at this time that she altered her name from Blanche to that of Elizabeth.

In 1938 she settled in the Berkshire village of East Garston. In the 1930s she was chairman of the Friends Christian Fellowship Union, afterwards known as the London Young Friends Group. She was on the Coalfields Distress and the Home Service Committees, and took an active interest in Charney Manor. She served as assistant clerk to Berks & Oxon Quarterly Meeting, and for eighteen years as a member of its Ministry & Extension Committee.

Hers was a vigorous and dynamic personality whose influence, even through the last twenty five years of failing health, was a stimulating one. She died in East Garston on 22 July 1964.

PALIAN, Alfred (1811-1890)

Alfred Palian, the son of Thomas Palian (1771-1861 qv) and his second wife Ann (born New, 1776-1849 qv) of Gainsborough, was born there on 2 April 1811(1). Nothing is at present (1976) traced of his early life and education, or of his marriage(2), although it is known that he had a wife; there were apparently no children(3).

He was of a quiet and retiring disposition and was little known outside his own circle, but the welfare of the Society of which he was a birthright member always lay near his heart. His physical health was never robust, which perhaps contributed towards the low opinion he had of his own merits, leading sometimes to a state of intense spiritual depression. He was a lifelong abstainer and the temperance movement from its earliest days had his sympathy and support; he was for many years secretary of the Temperance Society at Gainsborough and afterwards filled the same office for the Temperance Society at Lothersdale, when he moved there.

He died at Lothersdale on 2 June 1890(4), at the age of seventy nine.

PALIAN, Thomas (1771-1861)

Thomas Palian, details of whose birth and parentage are not at present (1976) traced, was born at Helpringham, near Sleaford in Lincolnshire, in the year 1771(1). When a young man and before he came into contact with the Society he occasionally drank to excess, but he wanted to overcome this temptation and became a total abstainer for a year; he was never afterwards guilty of drunkenness. Several years before he died he joined the Total Abstinence Society, a cause to which he became much attached.

He grew up in the shelter of the Church of England, but he could not find there the religious experience he sought, so for a while he worshipped with dissenters. Still he felt himself unsatisfied and not knowing what else to do he abandoned public worship and sat alone in his room, reading his Bible. About this time two women Friends came to Thorne, where he then lived, and he was much affected by the ministry of Elizabeth Coggeshall (1770-1851 qv); he also read the life of John Roberts (1620?-1683 qv) and was so much impressed by the picture it gave of the Society that he believed himself called upon to join Friends. He was the instrument through which his father and his brother also joined the Society.

He was married in 1805 to Ann Wright(2) and there was one child(3), but his wife died in childbirth(4). Three years later, in 1809, he took as his second wife Ann Maw (1776-1849 qv), the daughter of John Maw (1748-1819 qv) and his wife Mary (born Burt, 1744-1823 qv) of Gainsborough in Lincolnshire(5) and there were four children(6).

Until he was an old man he regularly attended meetings both for worship and discipline and after ill health confined him to his home he always set aside the time of meeting for quiet waiting upon God.

He died at Gainsborough after a brief illness on 19 January 1861(7), at the age of eighty nine.
